Thomas Stark of 517 East Pikes Peak avenue was thrown from his buggy at the corner of Nevada avenue and Cache la Poudre street about 2 30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and received serious injuries He will probably recover unless complications set in

Stark pitched out on his head when his horse ran away and upset the buggy in turning a corner He was picked up unconscious by W E Cobb of 1623 North Wahsatch avenue and taken to St Francis hospital in the city ambulance He sustained two fractures of the left arm in addition to a number of severe cuts and bruis on his face and neck

Stark is known to a great many residents here, and for years has been engaged in raising and handling race horses His horse stopped soon after its driver had been thrown out and was only slightly scratched as a result of kicking over the buggy [illegible]

"We don't like to predict what we are going to do, but both Cliff and myself are determined today to give the people all the flying they are looking for."

This remark, made by Philip O. Parmalee last night, gives an inkling of the sensations in store for all who attend the second and last day of Colorado Springs' first aviation meet at Roswell park this afternoon It was Parmalee who yesterday, after he had been forced to descend by violent currents that threatened to capsize him, said that he was not going to "make another attempt" but was "going to fly," and no further assurance is needed that if there is anything spectacular or sensational in the realm of aviation which can be accomplished at this altitude, he and Turpin will perform the feat today

Yesterday's flights, interesting as they were, may be looked upon properly as nothing but experiments, and it is probable that few who witnessed them have any real conception of the chances which the two fearless bird men took, especially in their attempts to fly early in the afternoon. When Parmalee, in the initial flight of the day, succeeded in rising over the buildings north of the aviation field, he took one of the longest chances in an eventful, though thus far short career as an aerial navigator

In the first place he was confronted by conditions absolutely new to him He did not even know to an absolute certainty that his machine could rise at all at this altitude which is a thousand feet greater than that from which any bird-man has heretofore succeeded in making a start. Neither did he know if he succeeded in rising, how his planes would take the rarified air or whether they would lift him safely over the many obstructions in the path the wind forced him to take In the second place he was essaying a flight in a wind that is absolutely the most dangerous the aviator has to combat and the more to be feared because he was sailing over broken country above which the air swirls in treacherous currents And fully aware though he was that the proposition was a hard one he encountered currents that tossed his machine about as if it were a feather several times causing him to drop like a stone for a hundred feet or more, once making it necessary for him to stand up to avert crashing to the ground and making a turn impossible

In his 14 months experience as an aviator during which he has made two world's records Parmalee had never until yesterday been forced to land outside the field from which he started and when after landing he waited an hour or more before essaying another flight it was the first time he had ever let the weather conditions cause him to defer going into the air

Similarly Turpin when he made his two attempts to make a start from within the enclosure was tackling something entirely new and when he brought his machine to the ground it was simply because it was a gamble whether as it reached the crowds lining the track it would plunge downward into them or if this disaster were averted would be able to rise above the buildings which Parmalee had

[illegible] Thousands and Tens of Thousands Thrilled by Spectacular Flights of Aviators Turpin and Parmalee, the First Witnessed in This Region

Intrepid Bird-Men Dare Treacherous "Holes" in the Air, Made More Dangerous by High Altitude Frail-Looking Machines Dart and Swoop in Upper Ether Like Giant Eagles Grandstand Packed and Hills Black With People, While Maneuvers Are Seen From Every Point for Miles Around Exhibitions Unqualified Success

While 5,000 people within the Roswell park inclosure, perhaps 40,000 others scattered about it and 20,000 more whom work or scepticism had kept at home, looked on in admiration and amazement, two huge white biplanes, piloted by two of the most noted aviators in the country, sped in sweeping circles over park, plain and city for half an hour late yesterday afternoon, furnishing an exhibition which thrilled all beholders and gloriously redeemed the promise of a spectacle that would make the summer carnival the greatest event the Pikes Peak region has known.

In comparison with what the aviators do today, their performances of yesterday may prove commonplace, but nothing more is needed to stamp the aviation meet as a complete success, redeeming the promises made for it and bringing the week of celebration to a dramatic climax long to be remembered.

The flights of the two machines at once brought to a gratifying close an afternoon that threatened to yield nothing but disappointment. All the morning a northeasterly wind blew fitfully, bearing heavy thunder clouds, and at 2 o'clock, the time set for the flights to begin, a storm seemed inevitable. When the rain clouds had been driven past, the air was still so turbulent that the Wright aviators, Philip O. Parmalee and T. Clifford Turpin, anxious as they were to please the crowd, hesitated about making an attempt to fly until the wind had quieted. As it showed no signs of doing so, however, they decided to take a long chance the more dangerous because of the high altitude and their total unfamiliarity with the atmospheric conditions here and at 2:35 o'clock the machines were trundled out. Parmalee, in the Skylark, was the first to ascend, and the crowd got its first thrill when he skimmed over the heads of the spectators at the north end of the field, narrowly escaped crashing into a barn, and finally, after careening through the air, the toy of every vagrant gust, was forced to land a mile away. His teammate, Turpin, after it had been learned that Parmalee was not hurt, then made two unsuccessful attempts to rise, each time stopping his machine at the edge of the inclosure after it had lifted itself a few feet from the ground, and at 5 o'clock it looked as if the hope of anything spectacular that day was vain.

But the drooping spirits of the crowd were quickly transformed into unstrained enthusiasm when Parmalee's machine came sailing over the aviation field and after describing graceful circles, shot down over the canvas fence east of the field and alighted as lightly as a bird upon the runway in the center of the enclosure

Start From Adjoining Field.

Both the aviators, who were as anxious to fly as the people were to see them agreed that under the conditions, further attempts to start from the runway within the field would involve unnecessary danger, especially to the spectators lining the track at the point where they would be forced to pass, and, at Turpin's suggestion, a hole was made in the fence at the north end through which the machines were trundled, and starts were made from the adjoining field. To aid them further, the bird-men emptied the tanks of all but three to five gallons of gasoline

A few moments later, about 6:20, Turpin rose easily into the air, followed shortly afterward by Parmalee, and for the next 30 minutes the two biplanes—the first that ever flew in the Pikes Peak region—circled hundreds of feet in the air at a speed of a mile a minute while gaping thousands and tens of thousands, for miles and miles around watched the magnificent demonstration of man's conquest of the air.

Those within the park had the added pleasure of witnessing the landings, which appeal even more strongly to the imagination than the flights themselves, and when the two intrepid birdmen stepped smilingly from their machines, expectancy had been replaced by satisfaction, and the verdict was universal that nothing more could have been asked for Crowds Come in Thousands.

Before noon the crowds began to move in steady line, in autos, carriages, street cars and on foot, toward Roswell park, the theater of the great aviation exhibition, and by 2 o'clock, the hour scheduled for the flights to begin, the grandstand was full of people, while along the track hundreds of automobiles were ranged, fully 5,000 being within the grounds. Outside, stretching in long lines wherever a view of the field could be had, and occupying every possible point of vantage, was a throng of probably 40,000 persons.

The machines, standing in the hangar at the north end of the field attracted much interest, especially so as few who looked them over had ever before seen an aeroplane, except in pictures. Made of wood, steel, wire and canvas, the machines looked frail and spiderlike and seemed hardly able to stand the terrific strain to which they are subjected in the battle with the atmospheric currents. The two ma-

SPECTACULAR FEATURE IN GARDEN OF GODS

Autoists and All Others With Vehicles Are Invited to Attend This Morning

Surrounded by the very rocks and geologic formations which looked down upon their ancient rites hundreds of years ago, the Ute Indians will this morning at 11 30 o'clock give their spectacular sun dance in the Garden of the Gods Headed by their famous chief, Buckskin Charlie, and Chipeta, the 86-year-old widow of the old chief, Ouray, the band of 25 Indians which has been here during carnival week will furnish one of the weirdest living touches of the whole celebration Unlike the rites used by the Moqui tribe of Indians in their pueblos farther to the south, there will be no snake swallowing, but enough of the fantastic ceremonies typifying their devotion to their gods will be included to satisfy the most curious sightseer

The parade of automobiles will form on North Cascade avenue in front of the Glockner at 10 30 o'clock sharp, and promptly at 11 o'clock will start on its trip to the famous natural amphitheater, arriving there in time for the beginning of the dance at 11 30 o'clock. Guides, especially detailed for the occasion, will show the autos to their places immediately upon their arrival Leonard E. Curtis chief marshal of last Monday's automobile parade, will lead and be in charge of this morning's procession

That a large number of the thousands of tourists in the region, as well as residents, will avail themselves of the opportunity to see the ceremonial dances is certain. The Garden of the Gods, as well as the entire region around the base of the Peak, has been held sacred by the Utes for centuries and so a peculiar interest attaches to the festivities.

One of Main Features.

Many of those who have heard of or seen Indian dances feel that this morning's exhibition may not be of surpassing interest, but to those doubting Thomases the committee wishes to state that the dances are one of the main features of the celebration. All who can secure conveyances are urged by all means to come. There is no charge for the 'show,' and for that reason there will undoubtedly be thousands grouped among the rocky crags of the well-known scenic wonder Those who wish to make the

"Yesterday's Hitch in Aeroplane Flights Will Not Be Repeated," Parmalee

Aviator Philip O. Parmalee yesterday afternoon explained the difficulties which caused the temporary delay at Roswell park as follows:

"It's all a matter of atmospheric pressure In this altitude the pressure is so light that it is necessary to get up a high speed on the ground before rising in the air. You understand that in making a start the aeroplane must go against the wind. Today the wind was blowing from the north and a little from the west, therefore in starting I had to head a little to the northwest. But unluckily there was a row of buildings in that direction, and in front of them a transmission line about 15 or 20 feet from the ground.

"I tilted the planes in starting so as to leave the ground purposely after a short run in order to gain as much height as possible before crossing the transmission lines. I got across the line safely, but was only able to gain a height of about 200 feet before reaching the buildings. That is not a safe height at which to pass over buildings in making a start, especially in this altitude. To play safe I ought not to cross them at less than 400 or 500 feet in heighth. The reason of this is that the air forms currents and eddies around a building precisely like the currents and whirlpools of water which tumble over and around a rock in the bed of a stream.

Strikes "Pocket."

"While crossing those buildings I struck a "pocket," or 'Swiss cheese" air, as we call it—that it, gusty, turbulent air with a lot of crosscurrents. The machine dropped like a rock for about 100 feet, and I had to stand up in the seat to steady it. For about a second, which seemed two or three minutes, I thought I was going to come to grief on the roof of that barn. But I tilted the planes and made a slight rise only to strike another 'pocket' a few hundred yards farther on This gave me another drop which brought the machine so near to the ground that it was impossible to make a turn About that time I saw a level field ahead of me and concluded that the safe thing to do was to come down while the coming was good.

"It is true that flying at this alti-

[illegible] MASKERS MAKE MERRY AT [illegible] BALL AND MASQUERADE

King Carnival, the master magician of furious fun and fantastic frivolity, furnished a triumph hitherto undreamed of in the realms of reality last night, when he produced the most novel and brilliant mask street parade and the most elaborate mask ball ever seen in the city.

From 8 30 o'clock, when the mask parade began, to the wee sma' hours, when the happy dancers left Temple theater, the genial glow of spontaneous enthusiasm held enthralled thousands of residents and visitors.

Never was there such a night in the history of Colorado Springs. Hundreds joined in the street masking, and the elite of society folk of the state obeyed the same impulse, throwing care and anxiety to the winds and giving themselves up fully to the wholesome enjoyment of the time.

Temple theater was flooded with the strains of delightful music, the Midland band, under the leadership of Ernest Thomas, instilled the temper of the gods of dancing into all. Costumes that never, perhaps, have been equalled for novelty and variety, whirled before the eye in a very fairyland of color and vivacity Marguerite and Mephistopheles, the clown and the corsair, the buccaneer and professional tramp swayed dizzily to the [illegible] heart-stirring strains, while the revelations after the masking were as astonishing as the brilliancy of the streets without.

The decorations were in perfect harmony with the occasion. Streamers decked the sides, the beams, the roof while the carnival colors mingled through all. The boxes bore appropriate furnishings, and here the flower of the wealth and beauty of the Centennial state displayed its charm chines, "The Pike" and "The Skylark" represent the latest thing in airship construction from the factory of the pioneer airmen, the Wright Brothers, of Dayton, O., and are similar in almost every respect except that the latter has a breadth of wing of only 32 feet as against the 40 feet of "The Pike." Each has a 35-horsepower motor and a gasoline tank carrying 12½ gallons, although to lessen the weight only half as much was carried yesterday.

Not the least of the important personages present were Aviators Parmalee and Turpin, who joined in the fun-making with all the abandon of those who do not daily risk their lives for the pleasure of their fellows on terra firma.

Machines Trundled Out.

At 2 o'clock threatening thunder clouds were rolling in from the mountains, propelled by a wind that was strong and gusty, and it looked very much as if the hopes of aviators and spectators alike for a flight were to be disappointed. However, the two birdmen were determined to give the spectators the thrills for which they were looking, and at 2:30, despite the treacherous wind, the machines were trundled out upon the track and made ready for a start.

"It is easy to fly in a wind of 40 miles an hour, if it is steady," said Parmalee, "but with such a treacherous breeze as is now blowing, the danger is much greater."

TURPIN IN THE PIKE AT ROSWELL PARK YESTERDAY AFTERNOON JUST BEFORE STARTING ON HIS LONG FLIGHT.

However, while waiting for his comrade, Turpin, to bring "The Pike" from the hangar, Parmalee joked about the possibility of an accident, declaring with a laugh that Turpin might better have stayed over there to pick up the pieces. This remark was characteristic of the man, who seems to have no nerves at all, while Turpin, with a naturally nervous tempermament, does not jest about the chances they take every time they go up into the air.

Parmalee Starts Up.

A few minutes before 3 o'clock, Parmalee started his motor, climbed smilingly into the seat of the "Skylark," and gave the signal for his assistants to let go of the machine. In an instant it was darting across the runway in the center of the enclosed space within the race track, gaining momentum with every foot, and suddenly there was an involuntary shout of wild excitement from thousands of throats as the spiderlike machine lifted itself from the ground and went skimming toward the crowds which lined the track at the north end of the field. Parmalee cleared the crowd by several feet and then turned abruptly northwest to avoid a line of wires a short distance beyond. In doing so he was compelled to go over several buildings, which in the violent and uncertain wind was a dangerous proceeding. When directly over a barn a short distance from the park, he encountered a hole in the air, as the bird-men call it, and made a sheer drop of nearly 100 feet, saving himself from a catastrophe only by standing in his seat and throwing his weight backward to right the machine.

For the next few moments he headed toward the mountains, his machine rocking up and down like a kite, while the breathless crowds, in open-eyed amazement, watched the first flight that most of them had ever seen. Parmalee seemed to be flying at a height of 300 or 400 feet, and as he swung to the east his machine appeared from the field to be traveling more smoothly, so much so that Turpin hurriedly trundled his machine, "The Pike," on to the runway, preparatory to following him. For the moment the crowd's attention turned to him, and when many looked to the north again there was no airship to be seen.

Forced to Land.

Turpin looked, too, and with a startled cry, "My God, where's that boy," started on a run across the field. In another moment there was a general rush of officers, newspaper men and spectators toward the spot where it was feared Parmalee had come to grief. Hundreds rushed to the scene, only to find the intrepid aviator standing smilingly beside his machine, and both unharmed. Among the first to arrive was Turpin, who rushed up breathlessly, fearful of the worst. He took one long look at his teammate, then sat down on the ground and lighted a cigarette, while Parmalee said jestingly, "Now do you think it is hot air about trying to get up in this altitude."

"I am the only son of a small family," said Parmalee, in answer to an inquiry, "and I decided it would not be wise to try to make a turn with those power wires ahead of me. The machine could not make the turn without dropping a hundred feet, and would have gone into them as sure as fate." His landing place was a high knoll a mile north of the park.

"Are you going to make another attempt?" he was asked by one of the curious throng which quickly gathered about the two men. "No," he replied. "I am going to fly." And fly he did.

Waits for Wind to Quiet.

Parmalee announced that in an hour or so, after the wind had quieted a little, he would make a start from the field where he landed, and in the meantime Turpin returned to the field and prepared to ascend. But the wind continued strong and it was not until 4:40 that he deemed it advisable to make the attempt.

When he did so, the crowds were treated to another thrill. Turpin's machine, "The Pike," glided over the runway for half its length, lifted gracefully from the ground, then dipped dangerously toward the earth, and the aviator, seeing that there was likelihood of his grazing the crowds along the fence and of being unable, in case he passed them, to rise over the buildings which had given Parmalee such trouble, turned the nose of the machine down and landed on the edge of the track. Undaunted he tried it again 10 minutes later, only to be forced to descend again when he had barely left the ground, the machine bumping along for 40 feet and being brought to a stop upon the northwest turn of the race track.

The difficulty was that owing to the high altitude the machines could not rise at a sharp angle, and a longer starting distance than the field affords is required to clear the wires and buildings.

Parmalee Reappears.

The good-natured and expectant crowds were beginning to feel disappointed, when suddenly, a few minutes later, there was a shout from the spectators who lined the top of the fence at the north end, and a moment later it swelled into a roar of excited cheers as Parmalee's machine hove into sight. Parmalee had made a successful start from the knoll where he had landed, although he did not get well up until after his machine descended from a short skip into the air and madly careened for a few second along the uneven ground. He first headed toward the mountains, then swung in a graceful circle higher and higher toward the east, and finally pointed the nose of the plane directly toward the grandstand. He was at this time at a height of close to 500 feet, and as the huge white creature skimmed smoothly through the atmosphere, which vibrated with the hum of its big propellers, the spectators cheered, waved hats and handerchiefs, and in other ways tried to express the emotions which the truly wonderful spectacle aroused. Circling over the field, the aviator swung again to the north, flying at 40 miles an hour, and ascending to 800 feet as he flew over toward Austin Bluffs. He then turned again, and dropping with a speed that seemed to promise disaster, skimmed over the canvas along the road east of the field, and dropped within the enclosure. He missed an automobile standing in the center of the field by only a few feet and came lightly and gracefully to earth squarely in the runway.

The flight consumed about 15 minutes, and satisfying as it was, merely whetted the appetite of the crowd for something still more sensational. The desire of the crowd for more flying, however, was no more keen than that of the two aviators, both of whom were determined to give the spectators all they were looking for, even if it became necessary to take dangerous risks. Turpin would not have brought his machine to earth within the field had it not been for the danger of injuring spectators, and while Parmalee was making his flight, he sat in the hangar trying to figure out a solution of the difficulty.

It was now nearly 6 o'clock, and hundreds of spectators, believing that there would be no more flying for the day, started for home, and thereby missed the real treat of the afternoon.

"Cut a hole in the north fence wide enough to let the machines through and let us start from the field outside," was Turpin's suggestion to the officials, in which his teammate heartily coincided, and the work was immediately begun, cowboys from the wild west show pulling up the posts with ropes. The two machines were then wheeled through the aperture out into the adjoining mesa, and at 6:20 Turpin took his seat in "The Pike," made a run of 70 yards across the field, and with clear space ahead of him, rose gracefully into the air. Rising in wide circles he flew out over the northeastern limits of the city, then turned toward the field and drew a wild shout from the excited onlookers by waving his hand in gay salute.

Both Machines in Air.

As Turpin turned to the north and swung out toward Palmer park, Parmalee made a start, and the frenzy of enthusiasm which possessed the crowds reached its climax when the second machine was seen rising in graceful circles. The air by this time had become unusually calm, and the machines, both under perfect control, moved as smoothly as if they were running on rails. Round and round, like huge eagles, now climbing higher into the blue sky, now dipping in long sweeping curves toward the earth, the two biplanes made gigantic circles miles in diameter. One moment they were so near that one could see the faces of the aviators, another, and they were mere specks in the distance. Now they were approaching one another, now speeding in opposite directions, and except when miles away the peculiar hum of the propellers was the only thing to dispel the illusion that these were gigantic white birds instead of mere machines made and piloted by man.

Turpin was the first to descend. After being in the air about 25 minutes he swung down over the east side of the field, and skimming like a swallow over the level space, touched the ground, ran along for a few feet and then stopped directly in front of the grandstand, from which rose a roar of applause which he acknowledged gracefully. Turpin had covered 25 miles in as many minutes. Parmalee at this time, flying at heights of from 1,000 to 1,200 feet, was heading toward the east and he did not turn back until he covered probably eight miles.

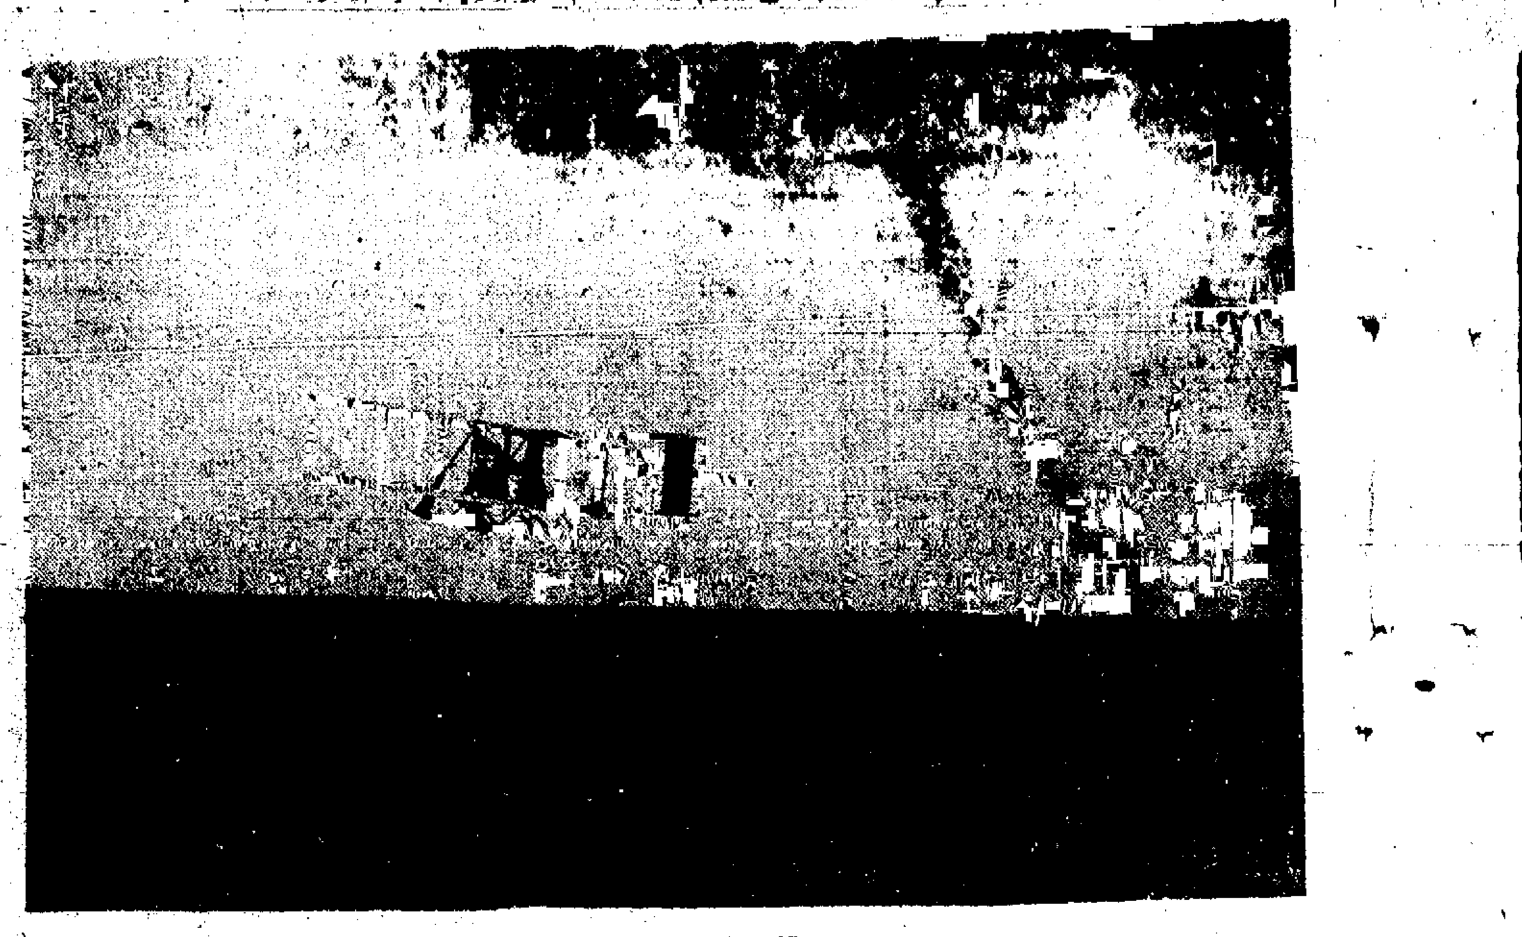

A Novel Sight.

Returning, he circled about the field and finally swooped down to earth at almost the very point from which he had begun the first flight. In making the landing, Parmalee treated the crowd to a novel sight, his machine after touching the ground, leaping again several feet in the air and coming to a stop only after having, as it were, hopped up and down several times. Parmalee had been in the air about 30 minutes, going about a mile a minute.

Both men were showered with congratulations on their daring and successful trips, and declared that the flights were fine. "After I got to going nicely," said Parmale. "I felt like going to sleep, so smooth was the sailing."

On every hand was heard the most complete satisfaction with the flights, praise of the carnival committee for arranging such an exhibition and of the aviation committee, headed by L. P. Lawton, for the excellent way in which the affair was handled, was general. Those whose craving for excitement would not be satisfied unless one of these iron-nerved young men were dashed to earth perhaps did not get their fill, but all others were more than satisfied with the flights, which proved far more spectacular and impressive even than they had looked for. The carnival officials were especially pleased, as the aviators did even more in their desire to please the crowds than their contracts called for.

During the intervals between the spectators were entertained with music by the Colorado Midland band, motorcycle races, broncho busting, a lassoing exhibition by Jane Bernoudi and tilting which proved diverting.

Despite Narrow Escape Rescued Miner Will Go Back to His Old Work

JOPLIN, Mo., Aug. 2.—Though he had just been rescued after being entombed in a mine drift 72 feet below the surface of the earth for three days, Joseph Clary, taken from his prison here today, will resume his mining operations tomorrow if doctors permit him to leave his darkened room. If not on Thursday, he will be at work as usual Friday morning.

Mining has no terrors for him, Clary says, because he believes that he has had his turn with the accidents that cause so many deaths in this district. He says that the mine in which he was entombed with the new shaft, through which he was rescued, will prove a paying venture, for he has thoroughly examined the drift in which he was held prisoner by the caving dirt of the shaft. He had gone into the mine to examine the drift when the sides of the shaft caved in last Sunday.

As the workmen in the rescue shaft today neared Clary an accident occurred, which threatened to rebury the imprisoned man and his would-be rescuers as well.

The sides of the shaft began to crumble beneath the cribbing. Fearing another cavein, the men hastily clambered up. A moment later, however, supplied with heavier backing timbers, they resumed the work and soon broke into the drift. When found Clary was soaked to skin from floundering about in pools of seepage water. His face and hair were begrimed with mud.

When he started up the shaft he complained of the light, complaining of intense pains in the eyes and head.

"Say, you boys," he said, when he heard the shouts of those about, "but I do thank you for what you have done for me. When I can see again and my legs get steady, I'm going to thank every one of you separately. This sunshine is sure real and I'm mighty glad I'm in it again even if I can't use my eyes. I guess I'm only a little tired. I'll see you all again soon."

As the cheers went up again with shouts of "You're all right, Clary," the happy man was hurried away to his home and his mother, less than a mile distant.

Banker Who Confessed to Embezzling Tries to Die

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 2.—C. A. Manker, the former banker of Pearl, Ill., who surrendered himself to the police here several days ago, confessing that he was wanted for the embezzlement of $45,000, and for whose return to Illinois a requisition was granted today by Governor Johnson, attempted to commit suicide late today by stabbing himself in the neck.

Manker, unconscious, was found on the floor of his cell in the city prison, and was removed to an emergency hospital. It was found that the knife blade had severed the jugular vein. The knife evidently had been smuggled in to Manker, and Chief of Police White ordered an investigation.

This afternoon, in Sacramento, Governor Johnson honored the requisition of the governor of Illinois for the return of Manker to Pike county. Since he gave himself up to the police six days ago, Manker has been downcast. He persisted in the assertion that his financial difficulties and his subsequent flight were the outcome of treachery on the part of business associates.

As soon as word was received here that the requisition had been procured, Manker was informed. Shortly after he made the attempt to end his life.

D. & R. G. OPERATING MIDLAND

DENVER, Aug. 2.—The fact became known today that the Colorado Midland railroad is now being operated exclusively by the Denver and Rio Grande system, the Colorado and Southern having turned over its share of the Midland operations to the Denver and Rio Grande six weeks ago at the time of the resignation of President A. D. Parker.

Covering lemons with cold water, which must be changed every week, keeps them fresh indefinitely and makes them ripe and juicy.

Gifford Pinchot to Attend Public Lands Gathering in Denver

DENVER, Aug. 2.—The public lands convention, to be held in Denver September 28, promises to stage a dramatic scene. Closely following the affirmation that Gifford Pinchot, former chief forester of the United States, intends to attend the convention, at which Richard Ballinger, former secretary of the interior, will speak, comes the word that President Taft has been invited to attend the convention.

Advices come from Washington to the effect that Gifford Pinchot and his followers are planning to come direct from the National Conservation congress in Kansas City to the Denver convention. They cannot be seated here because the call for the convention extends "only" to western states and territories."

J. Arthur Eddy, chairman of the convention, said today that he was glad to learn of the intentions of the Pinchot men.

Negotiations will be commenced immediately between the public lands convention committee of Denver, and the committees of the American Mining congress and the National Conservation congress, to arrange for President Taft's proposed visit. The mining congress meets in Chicago at the same time the Denver convention meets.

The president has accepted an invitation to speak before the mining congress after attending the Kansas City meeting of the conservationists. It is the plan of Chairman Eddy to have the other two conventions arrange the president's itinerary, so he can visit Chicago first, Kansas City second, and make Denver his third point.

The Pinchot men, according to advices from Washington, will make an effort to obtain recognition on the floor.

Rub rusty steel with emery paper dipped in turpentine to remove the rust. Polish with a fresh piece of emery paper and the results are sure to be satisfactory.

WIND REMOVES DRESSING TENT OF FAIR BATHERS

DENVER, Aug. 2.—The wind storm which swirled through Denver this afternoon did no general damage, but it caused dismay in one part of the city, and that was at Washington park, where it wrecked the tent used by the women bathers. A number of girls and young women were in the tent at the time, and those who were not enmeshed in the fallen canvas, experienced a worse shock by suddenly being exposed in various stages of attire and unattire. The shrieks of those caught in the canvas summoned the park employes, who, after first thoughtfully shooing away all visitors from the boys' bathing tent, began the rescue of the imprisoned mermaids. The nthe park policemen led in a chase after various articles of flimsy feminine apparel, which had been caught up and and carried away by the wind, and within a few minutes the victims of the storm were all sheltered in the pavilion.

YOUNG MEN ARE WANTED BY GIRLS OF GREELEY

GREELEY, Colo., Aug. 2.—The cry for young men is going up from Greeley's surplus population of young women. Statistics show that out of 600 students attending the normal college last season only 16 were "eligible" young men.

Inasmuch as the town girls also outnumber the young men of Greeley who are not in college, the conditions are becoming alarming, according to the view of some of the members of the bachelor-girls clubs, and they heartily indorse the booklet just issued by the State Teachers association, urging young men to take up the profession of teaching and prepare themselves for it at the normal college.

A misunderstanding of orders on the part of the engineer of the passenger train is believed to have caused the wreck. The injured were taken to Osawatomie, Kan.

PRESIDENT SIMON [illegible] HAYTI [illegible] TRIUMPHANT TODAY

Mob Attacks Party Enroute to Ship, Wounding Daughter of Deposed Executive

PORT AU PRINCE, Aug. 2.—The revolution in Hayti has triumphed. President Antoine Simon fled the capital today and took refuge on board the Haytian cruiser Seventeenth of Decembre, formerly the yacht, American. With him are his wife and children and a number of his followers.

The Seventeenth of Decembre lies in the harbor tonight, and it is believed Simon is awaiting the arrival of a foreign merchantman on which he can take passage for St. Thomas, D. W. I., in Jamaica.

On all sides the capital is invested by followers of General Firman, one of the revolutionary leaders.

The city itself is in the hands of a committee of safety, and there is no general disorder. Tonight numerous shots were heard, but these are believed to have been only in celebration of the overthrow of the Simon administration. Foreign interests appear to be secure. None of the foreign warships has landed bluejackets.

Wound President's Daughter.

The departure of the aged president was not without disorder, however, for as he was embarking at the wharf, there was a riotous demonstration in which the ex-president's chamberlain, Deputy Prin of Jermie and five other persons were killed, and Clementina Simon, his daughter, and six other persons were wounded. The injuries of Miss Simon are slight.

President Simon left the palace at 4 o'clock this afternoon after he had been informed that one wing of the revolutionary party, commanded by General Peralte, had denied his request for three days in which to secure the safety of the city. The general informed the French and British ministers, who went out yesterday to parley with him that, owing to recent summary executions by Simon's order the president must leave the capital immediately, or otherwise he would attack the city without delay. The German and Cuban ministers, who went to Croix des Bouquets on a similar errand, found the rebel commander there, General Duraste, disposed to grant the truce provided a committee of safety was appointed. In view of the attitude of General Peralte, however, it was deemed best that Simon immediately lay down the reins of government and leave the city.

Mob Attacks Party.

Promptly at 4 o'clock, Simon came out of the main entrance of the palace. Over his shoulder the old man who declared that he would fight to the end and if necessary die in harness, carried his rifle. With head erect he marched down to the wharf.

As Simon and his daughter gained the wharf, there was a rush of the mob. Miss Simon was the center of the attack, and several women, howling and shrieking, succeeded in pulling off her hat. Chief of Police Saint Lo rushed to the rescue and led the young woman away toward a schooner. On the gangplank, Deputy Prin offered his arm to Miss Simon. As he did so, a man rushed up and, pressing the barrel of his rifle into the deputy's face, shot and killed him.

Firing became general and before it ceased, five other people had been killed and six wounded.

When the presidential party had boarded the schooner, it ran out into the harbor and alongside the Seventeenth of Decembre, on which they took refuge. Among those with Simon, who will accompany him in exile, are General Monplaisir, minister of war, and Minister of the Interior Sylvain.

Antoine Simon assumed the presidency of Hayti, December 1, 1908, after Nord Alexis had been deposed, and on December 17 was regularly elected as the executive by congress.

U. S., FRANCE AND GREAT BRITAIN IN PACT

Means General Arbitration Between These Countries. Others Later

WASHINGTON, Aug. —The general arbitration treaties between the United States, Great Britain and France, constituting the most advanced step ever taken in the family of nations for the peaceful settlement of disputes, will be signed tomorrow. Paris and Washington will be the scenes of the conclusion of the negotiations of the world heralded convention.

The first signature will be appended to the French treaty by Ambassador Jean Jusserand, who is now in Paris, at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. This will be 9 o'clock a. Washington time. The signing of the British treaty here will not take place until 3 o'clock in the afternoon or six hours after Ambassador Jusserand has committed France to the arbitration of any dispute she may have in the future with the republic of the west.

In the presence of President Taft, who invited all nations to join hands with the United States in broadening the arbitration principle, Secretary Knox will sign both the British and French treaties in the historic east room of the White house. On behalf of Great Britain, Ambassador James Bryce will sign the British treaty. As it is the tradition that the text of no treaty shall be made public until the senate has acted on it the details are withheld from publication but their general substance is known.

Eliminate Conventions.

The new treaties are different in the important particulars that they eliminate the conventions contained in all former arbitration treaties that questions of vital interest and national honor shall not be subject to arbitration.

It remained for American diplomats to hit upon the solution of the problem providing for a judicial settlement of keen international disputes without offending the pride of the principals. This was done by the creation of the commission of inquiry which is the novel feature of the treaties.

The commission is to be made up of representatives of the two governments interested who are members of the Hague court. This commission is charged with the duty of preventing arbitration if possible. It must first investigate the difference between the countries involved and if possible recommend a settlement that will preclude the necessity of arbitration.

But there may be cases where the two nations honestly disagree. That is where the commission of inquiry is to prove its value, for if, after careful study it should decide that the difference should be arbitrated each of the parties to the treaty binds itself to accept that judgment and then the issue must be submitted to The Hague tribunal unless by special agreement some other tribunal is created or selected.

Senate Exercises Control.

To save the constitutional treaty making power of the United States senate, it is specially provided that the terms of submission of the issue to arbitration shall be subject to the advice and consent of that body. In other words while the senate cannot defeat the purposes of the general treaty by refusing arbitration it can exercise great control over the outcome by regulating the conditions of the adjustment.

In order that the other nation shall have a means of protecting itself from indiscriminate arbitration it is provided that the issue shall be submitted to the selected tribunal only after the principals have come to a thorough agreement as to the limitations to be imposed.

It is the intention of the president and Secretary Knox to follow the action taken today by negotiating like conventions with as many of the great powers as are willing to go into similar arrangements.

Already progress has been made in preparing for such treaties with Germany, the Netherlands, and Sweden and there is reasonable expectation that Japan will soon be party to the negotiations.

No great confidence is expressed by senators in the speedy ratification of the British-American arbitration treaty.

Some members of the foreign relations committee have expressed the opinion that the British treaty is technically defective.

In case of adjournment next week it would be difficult to procure action during the present session on either treaty.

KANSAS MAN KILLED BY COLLAPSE OF BUNKHOUSE

MOFFAT, Colo., Aug. 2.—R. G. Hall, a Kansas man, employed at the Hoffman logging camp 18 miles northeast of this city, was instantly killed at 8 o'clock last night when the roof of the camp bunkhouse collapsed. William Franklin, the foreman of the crew, was struck by a falling timber and received internal injuries which physicians fear may prove fatal.

K. OF C. FOR PROHIBITION

DETROIT, Aug. 2.—The Knights of Columbus in annual convention in this city, vigorously reaffirmed today the declarations of the order in favor of total abstinence.

At an executive session an attempt was made to amend the by-laws so that wine and other liquors which are now prohibited may be served at banquets, and in the club rooms of the organization. The amendment was overwhelmingly defeated.

[illegible] PLEADS FOR AID

Fire-Swept District in California Wants Aid From War Department

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Aug. 2.—Frantic appeals for troops to combat the forest fires in the mountains north of this city were sent to the war department today. Between 70 and 75 square miles of forest already have been destroyed on the watershed of the San Bernardino reserve. Following the admission today by Forest Supervisor Charlton that he was unable to cope with the situation, every civic body in this section kept the wires to Washington hot with appeals for aid.

"The fire has been devastating the San Bernardino mountains for nine days and is now beyond all control. Forest service is utterly inadequate to cope with the present situation, and nothing but troops in force seems likely to save even a remnant of mountain forests and cover. Will you urge war department to act instantly?"

This message was sent to Senators John D. Works and George C. Perkins, Congressman W. D. Stephens, the department of the interior and to Chief Forester Graves. The signers were the executive committees of the San Bernardino chamber of commerce, the tricounties reforestation committee, the merchants association and many prominent men as individuals.

Forest Supervisor Charlton was also in communication with Washington today and is said to have advised the interior department that his small force of men was absolutely helpless before the flames.

U.S. NEEDS MORE [illegible]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—General Leonard Wood chief of staff of the army today declared there is a lack of auxiliary troops especially field artillery in proportion to the infantry's strength of the organized militia, which would seriously affect the efficiency of the reserve forces if called out for national defense.

This defect is strongly emphasized in an order just issued by General Wood authorizing an increase in the field artillery for the militia. The chief of staff urgently requests the state authorities to organize additional units of this arm of the service.

[illegible] SECRETARY SCORNED

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 2.—Enraged by the dismissal of Emilio Vasquez Gomez from the post of secretary of interior, numerous former officers of the revolutionary army today declared that they would recall their followers and lead them in a second rebellion.

President de la Barra intimated that Francisco I. Madero is the one really responsible for the elimination of Gomez. He stated that he did not regard the situation as critical.

The more conservative element applauded the dismissal of the minister of interior, but the radical portion characterized it as an indication that the government is attempting to rob them of the benefits of the revolution.

CUBAN REBELS GIVE UP

HAVANA, Aug. 2.—General Acevado, who with a few men started an uprising at Begia Monday night, today sent a message to Governor Asbert, of Havana province, that he was hiding with one companion on a farm near Havana and desired to surrender if his life would not be placed in jeopardy.

President Gomez when interviewed, ruled the fugitives might come in and stand trial in the civil courts. They are expected to surrender.

Firth ordered those found in a house conducted by Nellie White at 615 Washington avenue to appear in police court at 8 o'clock this morning. All were released under bond of $15 each. Those arrested in addition to Nellie White were Frankie Parker, Alice Cole, Myrtle Adams, H. A. Peterson, H. L. Hawkins and J. Renley. The men are from Pueblo.

WHITE [illegible] SPEECH

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Charles A. White, the Illinois legislator who claims he was bribed to vote for William Lorimer for senator, completed his three-days story on direct examination before the senate Lorimer committee today. He has yet to measure wits with counsel for Lorimer in cross-examination.

Most of the day was devoted to telling how he spent the $1,000 "Lorimer money" and the $900 "jackpot" money he claims he received and in relating his attempts to have his so called confession printed. At the end of the day the manuscript was put in evidence.

The story told at the first Lorimer inquiry was varied by repeated fusillades of questions from the committee as to White's motive in accepting the bribes and then exposing them. White stuck to his testimony that he was working all the time for the good of the public. The story was also varied by differences with the testimony of James Keeley, general manager and editor of the Chicago Tribune, as to the price which White asked for his "confession" manuscript. White testified today that he asked only $3,500 and not $5,000 or $4,000.

He told how he objected to the contract because it said he "offered to sell" his story to the Tribune. White said he did not offer to sell it, but he could not tell Senator Jones what words he would have used to describe what he had done. The witness said he was told that these words made no difference anyway. He said he went to the Tribune with his manuscript because Edwin R. Wright, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, suggested that he see Proprietor McCormick of that paper.

White complained that he did not have counsel when he made the contract and that he was placed in custody the very night he signed it and kept in custody for nearly eight months. When he protested against it, White said the officers told him they had papers that might "surprise him."

He testified that he heard State's Attorney Wayman of Cook county tell the officers to keep him in charge and he had heard that Wayman had the officers take him on trips to Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, so as to keep him from appearing before the Sangamon county grand jury. At times White said four officers were with him.

One letter from White to Lorimer informed the senator that White was about to publish his exposure and had been offered $2 a word for his 30,000-word manuscript. Lorimer replied: "I would be very glad indeed to know of your success as an author."

Several hotels have refused the accommodations to 300 strikebreakers and in one hotel the entire kitchen and dining room forces walked out when they learned they were serving strikebreakers.

M'MANIGAL'S UNCLE TO BE QUESTIONED AGAIN

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 2.—George Behm, uncle to Ortie E. McManigal, the state's witness in the Los Angeles Times explosion cases, appeared today before Judge Walter Bordwell to show why he was not guilty of contempt for refusing to reply to questions put to him before the grand jury.

After a conference in the judge's chambers attorneys for both sides agreed upon a list of questions which would be reasonable and these will be put to Behm tomorrow. If he answers them contempt proceedings will be dropped.

Chairman Donaldson of the committee in charge is particularly anxious that all those intending to go be in their places in the parade on time. Tourist drivers, or those driving private vehicles, are left to their own devices as to the time of going and coming, but are requested not to block up any portion of the road, as places will be secured for all who wish to see the grand fete.

Those who are acquainted with the habits and customs of the Indians say that this may be the last time to see the thrilling and interesting ceremonial rites of the Utes in the region of their former hunting ground. For that reason, to the far-sighted, no opportunity will be lost of seeing this well-known band of redmen offer incense to the gods who stood them in such good stead until the march of civilization tore down their natural and artificial barriers and doomed them to ultimate extinction as a race. Their racial identity is a thing almost of the past, and with the passing of the years sun dances will take their place with the half mythological rites destined never to be seen by the white man's eye.

tude is much harder than at sea level. At a low elevation we wouldn't pay a bit of attention to such a wind as blew today, and in fact it wouldn't have troubled us seriously today if it were not that the direction of the wind forced us to fly over the row of buildings immediately after leaving the ground.

"Something Doing" Today.

"Neither Turpin nor I has ever attempted flight at such a high altitude, but now that we are accustomed to the peculiarities of atmospheric pressure here, I think I can promise the people of Colorado Springs a series of flights tomorrow that will make them sit up and take notice. You know I said this afternoon that if the wind would give us a chance to get off the ground without running into those barns we would give them some flights worth remembering. Well, we got the chance, and I think everybody was satisfied with the result. I am only sorry that a part of the crowd left before these flights took place.

"Understand, there is no real reason why aeroplane flights in Colorado Springs should not be as successful as anywhere else. It was merely a little harder to make a start, and the only trouble today was that the direction of the wind increased this difficulty by forcing us to fly over the buildings. After we get up in the air a few hundred feet it makes no difference what direction the wind is in or how many buildings or other objects are of the ground beneath us."

While the particular section, supposedly reserved for the maskers, embraced Pikes Peak avenue from Tejon street to Nevada and thence up Nevada to Temple theater, the entire business part of the city was willingly opened to the gay multitude which bade worry good-by and joined in the worship of the god of things that are us they are. In the final analysis, "the colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady are sisters under their skins," and men and women who stand for all that is dignified in their ordinary every-day occupations, threw their gravity to the winds.

Crowds Number Fully 25,000.

The crowds began to gather at 8 o'clock, and within half an hour the streets were transformed from curb to curb into a maze of humanity. All the better and more playful instincts of the human race were uppermost, and they were allowed full sway. The placid policeman—if he attempted to keep placid—was not immune from the attacks of the roguish girl or boy who took the occasion to remind the stalwart guardians of the peace that the time was given over to the expression of spontaneous joy.

Conservative estimates of the number who joined in the demonstration were difficult to make. It was truly difficult to make a really conservative estimate, for conservatism was thrown to the winds by all hands, but those who kept fairly level heads during the course of the evening believed that at least 25,000 people surged up and down the thoroughfares of the business district.

Banners and badges proclaimed the man or woman from this that and the other state or community, and from all appearances the greater part of the United States had representatives who took part in the festivities. Those from the southland, who sometimes call their northern brethren of cold and clammy disposition, were happily disappointed. The "old town is certainly waking up," as one grizzled and laughing veteran of the times of long ago put it, and his aphorism only emphasized the general feeling.

Nor was the scene without its really beautiful side. The national colors were everywhere mingled with those of the carnival, and the effect has never before been approached in the history of the city. With a peculiar sense of the proper display of colors and lighting effects, the decorators of the entire district had worked so in harmony that the individual decorations, whether of lights or bunting, blended into a harmonious whole. Perhaps it was the effect of the spirit of the night upon the glorious scene, but one and all, without exception, remarked on the symphony of color, sound and occasion. Vocabularies could be exhausted in a description of the entire scene, but the wonder-struck and awe-filled populace are their own best commentary of their appreciation of the evening. For many years will the pioneers-to-be recount the scenes and events of the famous "mask night" of the carnival that celebrated the fortieth birthday of the city, and local histories, yet to be written, will use that auspicious occasion with which to compare all magnificent and beautiful events of future celebrations.

Among the costumes noticed at the ball were: Indian clowns, Buster Brown, knight, Chinese, sailor, sunflower, blue bell, "night," college professor, cowboy, Florentine gentleman, jockey, housemaid, cook, chauffeur, soldier, Turk, dude, monk, gypsy, plantation negro, water lily, society lady, Spanish lady, Miss Colorado Springs, and rough rider.

While the entire attendance, included a large representation of the elite of this city, those most prominent viewed the gay spectacle from the boxes, and the conventional evening dress was adhered to chiefly, although here and there were parties in dominoes and masks.

Smart Society at the Ball.

In the box with Mr and Mrs. Chaloner B. Schley were Mr. and Mrs. Ashton Potter, Mr. and Mrs. D. Bryant Turner of Denver and Mrs. Turner Cooke. With Mrs. Tutt, Sr., were Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Tutt, Dr. and Mrs. Jesse Williamson and Miss Jessie Williamson of Wilmington, Del., and Miss Martha Kneedler of Coronado, Cal. Mr. and Mrs. George K. Shields were accompanied by Mrs. Frederick H. Morley and Miss Laura Gilpin who were their dinner guests. In the party of Victor W. Hungerford were Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Pastorius and Mr. and Mrs. John Jay Knox.

Mr. Henry Hine and daughter, Miss Marjorie Hine, had a small party of friends for dinner and they attended the ball later.

The dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. James McK. Ferriday previous to the ball were Mrs. Spencer Penrose, Mrs. Charles Farnsworth, Miss Gladys McMillan, J. Arthur Connell, Daniel Knowlton and Heny Cobb Nickerson.

Participating in a subscription dinner party at the El Paso club and then attending the ball were Dr. and Mrs. William Whitridge Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Gibbs Carpenter, Miss Francis McClurg of Denver, Miss Evelyn Willis of Columbia, Mo., and Miss Langham of San Francisco.

In the party of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Dunning, who were their dinner guests at the Antlers previous to the ball, were Mr. and Mrs. Guy Wagner, Mrs. Smith and son and Miss Portwood, all of El Paso, Tex., Mrs. Ralph O. Giddings, Miss Thompson, Robert Heffley, Robert Winkler, Harry T. Lowe and Dr. Paul M. Lennox.

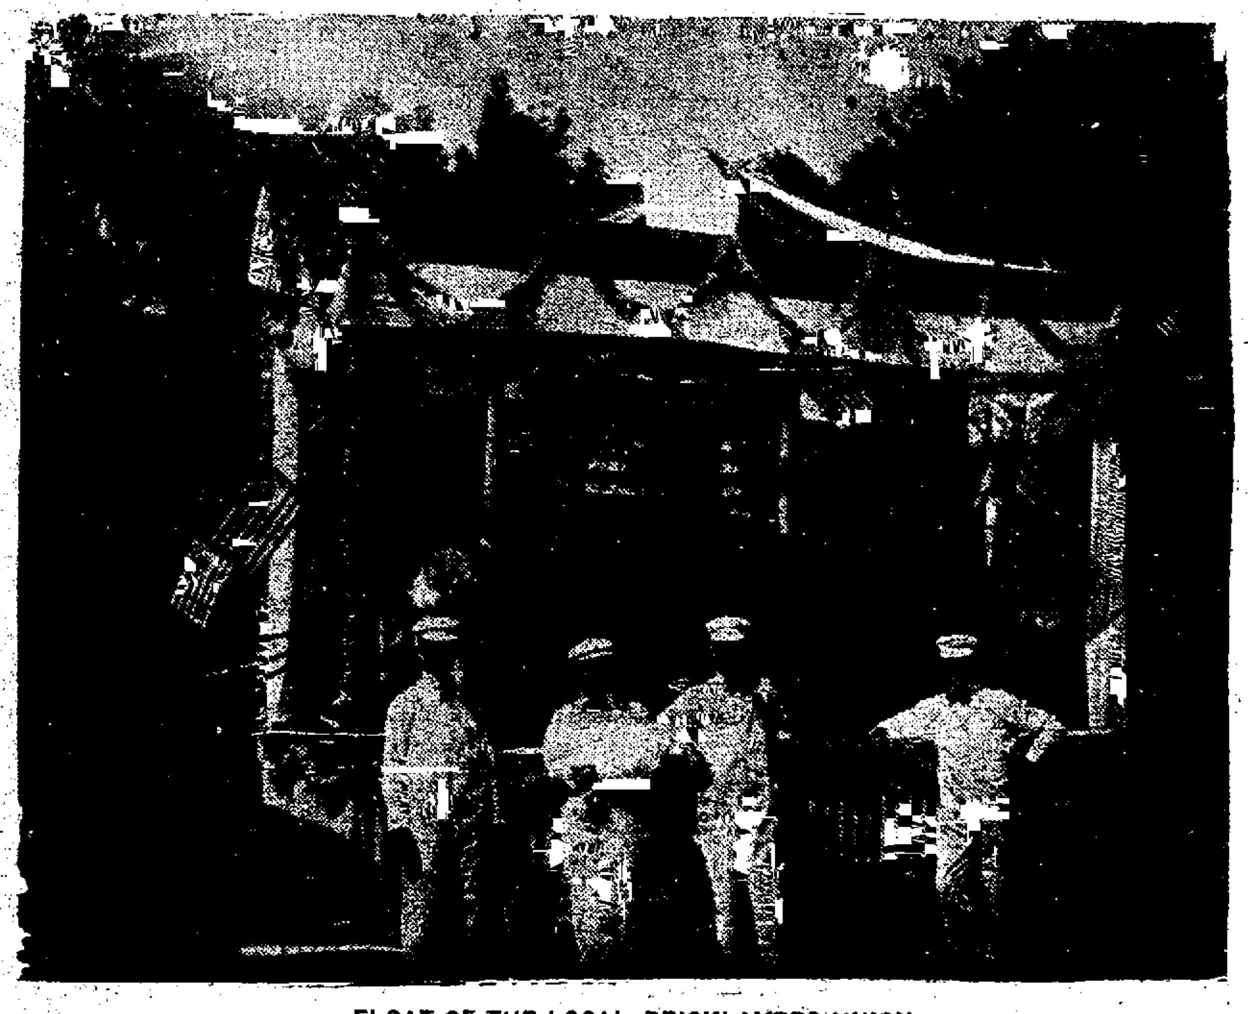

Mr. and Mrs. George B. Tripp gave a supper party last night and then with their guests repaired to the theater, where they occupied boxes. Included were Mr. and Mrs. Tripp, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Warden Reid of Kansas City, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Shearer, Mr. and Mrs. Harold C. Harmon, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Harmon of Kansas City, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Chisholm, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund C. van Diest, Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Hodgetts and George A. Krause.

Among other box holders for the ball were Dr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Faust, Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Seldomridge, Grenville Moran, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Littlefield, Dr. and Mrs. John LeRoy Hutchinson, Frank Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Sunderline, R. W. Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene P. Shove, Jay B. Lippincott, George Barton, Edward A. Rosenfeld, J. Addison Hayes and Dr. and Mrs. Charles Fox Gardiner, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Burns, J. H. Parker.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Leaders in both houses believe an agreement will be quickly reached on both the wool and farmers free list, both of which the president is said to be as determined as ever to veto. The wool bill went to a conference of both the houses this afternoon. The free list bill came back to the house with the senate's amendments attacked, and will probably be rejected and sent to conference within a day or two. The house will not act, however, until the ways and means committee decides tomorrow what should be done.

The cotton tariff bill came to the end of its general debate in the house late today and will be passed late tomorrow afternoon.

As a result of the charges and counter-charges between Democratic Leader Underwood and William J. Bryan over Underwood's position on the iron and steel schedule, it is said to be possible that a revision of these schedules will be added to the Democratic program for this session.

A movement was begun by Chairman Penrose of the senate committee on conferences to include the free list bill in the same conference that will consider the wool bill but Chairman Underwood of the house conferees declined to enter into any agreement until the ways and means committee tomorrow decides whether a conference on the free list will be demanded. If so demanded, Mr. Underwood said he would be willing to have the wool and free list bills considered at the same time.

The prediction still is for a compromise wool bill that both houses can accept, the figures named ranging from 25 to 30 per cent ad valorem on wool. Upon the agreement of Senator La Follette and Representative Underwood in this conference a quick adjustment hinges.

In the house today, Taylor of Colorado, spoke in favor of the cotton revision bill.

COULD NOT "MAKE MAN" OF HUSBAND, SO KILLS HIM

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2.—Unable, she says to make a man" of her husband, Anna Langley, a fragile little woman 19 years old, shot and killed him today. They had been married 17 months.

Early today, James Langley left home, saying he did not intend returning. Mrs. Langley bought a revolver and started on a hunt, finding him in a nearby saloon. According to bystanders, Langley turned on her with a torrent of abuse. Without a word, the girl-wife seized the revolver and fired four shots. One struck Langley and he died on the way to the hospital. The others went wild. Mrs. Langley was arrested.

"I don't see why I should be detained," she said at the city prison. "I did nothing wrong, and am not sorry. Since our marriage I have supported my husband and myself by working as a stenographer. I tried to make him stay away from saloons. I endured his abuse. I tried to instill some ambition into him and coach him for the firemen's civil examination. He would not try. I could endure it no more."

MILLIONS OF GREEN WORMS OVERRUN SOUTH DAKOTA

ABERDEEN, S. D., Aug. 2.—A section foreman on the St. Paul railroad at James, 13 miles east of Aberdeen, reports that portion of the country between James and the James river is being overrun by millions of green worms about an inch in length.

At first they were thought to be the army worm, but closer investigation disproves this. The worm has 10 legs, six at about the middle of its body and a pair at front and rear. The worm is about as large around as an ordinary match. One procession of the strange worms extended frequently a quarter of a mile according to the report. The worm has also been found in the vicinity of Stratford.

N. C. MILLER MUCH WORSE

DENVER, Aug. 2.—The condition of N. C. Miller, former state attorney general, who has been dangerously ill for several weeks at St. Luke's hospital, took a turn for the worse tonight and at midnight his condition was reported to be critical. Mr. Miller is suffering from nephritis, which was complicated last night with an attack of heart trouble.

missed by such a narrow margin. What a task they had is indicated by the fact that it was found necessary finally to empty out all but a few gallons of gasoline in order to lighten the machines as much as possible.

Familiar With Situation.

Now, after their several flights of yesterday, the two men are fairly well acquainted with the situation. They know what the machines can do in this altitude, the angle at which they can be made to rise, the way the levers must be handled to make dips, rises and turns, and they are acquainted to some extent with the vagaries of the rare atmosphere above the uneven country of this region. This knowledge they expect to put to practical use today, and that the result will be some hair-raising features is a foregone conclusion.

Both are eager to sail over the mountains, and today they will point the noses of their machines toward Pikes Peak and circle over the surrounding summits. This will be a feature of climatic interest, but even more thrilling and spectacular will be the evolutions they plan to perform above the field.

On account of the wind, today's flights will not be started until 3 o'clock, but for the next three or four hours, unless there is a 60-mile gale in progress, there will be some aerial stunts beside which yesterday's flights will pale into insignificance.

Today's carnival program also includes Indian dances at the Garden of the Gods, which will begin at 11:30 a. m. and is expected to prove one of the most novel events of the week. In the evening there will be a band concert at Stratton park and Russian ballet dancing in the pavilion.

..SE .EMOCRATS MAKE ..TER A .ACK ON B.Y.N

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Standing upon chairs, waving handkerchiefs and yelling loudly, Democratic representatives today acclaimed Representative Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, Democratic leader of the house, when he attacked William J. Bryan for criticising the former's position on extension of the tariff revision program.

It was the most remarkable scene in the house since the beginning of the extra session of congress.

Excoriating Mr. Bryan, Leader Underwood denounced his statements as false, defended his own attitude as to revision of the iron and steel schedules, and said Bryan had placed upon every Democratic member implications unfounded in fact. He called on his Democratic colleagues of the ways and means committee for corroboration of his attitude in committee and caucus.

Mr. Underwood was backed up in a similarly striking speech by Representative Kitchin of North Carolina, long a devoted friend of Bryan. Mr. Kitchin expressed a surprise that any Democrat should so malign Mr. Underwood and the party. Not a voice was raised in defense of Bryan.

It all came about from a published interview, which purported to be "authorized" by Mr. Bryan, declaring it was time Underwood was "unmasked."

"The action of Chairman Underwood in opposing an immediate effort to reduce the iron and steel schedule reveals the real Underwood," said the Bryan interview.

Speaker Clark and other tariff reformers tried to secure the passage of a resolution instructing the ways and means committee to take up other schedules, including the iron and steel schedule but Underwood and Fitzgerald, the Fitzgerald who saved Cannon in the last congress, succeeded in defeating the resolution.

"The unmasking of Chairman Underwood will serve as a useful purpose," added the interview, "if it arouses the Democrats to an understanding of the mistake made in putting Mr. Underwood at the head of the committee if he solidifies his policy of delay."

The house listened intently to the reading of the interview. Republicans applauded it. Word of the answer that Mr. Underwood was to make to Bryan had passed among Democrats and almost a full membership on the Democratic side greeted the tariff leader.

As the clerk finished reading the Bryan interview, Mr. Underwood began to speak. If Underwood's attack was remarkable for its bitterness and vigor, it was not more so than the general applause which greeted his sarcastic references to the Nebraska leader, and his specific and complete denials of the charges made by Bryan.

Court Fixes Price at Eighty Cents Thousand Feet—City Ordinance Made It Seventy Cents

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—In a decision today Judge Gibbons of the circuit court fixed the price of gas at 80 cents a 1,000 cubic feet pending the final disposition of the injunction suit brought by the People's Gas, Light and Coke company to prevent the enforcement of the ordinance recently passed by the city council reducing the rate from 85 to an average of 70 cents during the next five years. The court deferred action on the issuance of an injunction.

The court also refused to direct the gas company to impound in a special fund the amount collected from consumers in excess of the 70 cent rate while the litigation over the rate is in progress.

The decision came as a surprise to the legal representatives of the city who will appeal from the ruling.

INCREASE IN V..U..TIONS IN AGR..U..T..AL COUNTIES

DENVER, Aug. 3.—Assessor Henry J. Arnold spoke to the state convention of assessors today on his system of assessing Denver property and declared that later estimates indicate that the decrease in the valuation of Denver property will probably not be more than $5,000,000.

"If Denver should receive its just portion of the taxes paid by the railroads," said Mr. Arnold, "there would be no decrease. There would be a large increase."

It was noted at the meeting that all the agricultural counties of the state showed increases in valuations. The mining counties were either at a standstill or showed decreases.

An estimate made by Herbert C. Fairall, secretary of the State Board of Equalization, from the reports of the assessors in their speeches, shows that the outside counties will increase in valuation $5,000,000.

Las Animas county reports an increase of $800,000, the largest of any county in the state. Pueblo county will increase $680,000, and El Paso county, $291,000.

J. R. Barlow, of Garfield county was elected chairman of the conference.

C. B. & Q. RAILROAD WILL BUILD SHOPS AT DENVER

DENVER, Aug. 2.—According to the Denver Post the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad will establish in Denver within the next five years machine shops that will give employment to nearly 5,000 men, which would mean an increase to Denver's population it is estimated of 25,000 people.

The company is reported to have well-matured plans for the erection of large railway machine and repair shops, round houses, freight buildings and terminal facilities in Denver which will cost, including the land, not less than $1,250,000 and may go as high as $1,750,000.

Losing Memory, Denver Man Finds Himself on Slope of Pikes Peak

Suffering from mental collapse brought on by overwork and worry, Charles A. Creighton, a foreman in the plant of the Michael Heating company, 1956 Blake street, Denver, walked out of the place of employment early Monday morning and disappeared. When his faculties returned—at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning—he was standing between the rails of the Pikes Peak Cog road at the 13,000-foot mark.

Creighton has not the slightest idea how he reached Colorado Springs, but is of the opinion that, after leaving his workshop, he wandered about the streets of Denver until Monday night, when he boarded a train. He does not remember having left the shop, although fellow workmen informed him that he apparently was in his right mind when he departed.

When he "came to," as he expressed it, he had no idea of his whereabouts, the day of the week or the time of day. When he learned his predicament, the realization that his family would be worried about him became uppermost in his mind, and he lost no time in reaching the depot at Colorado Springs. He took the first train for Denver, arriving there at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

"I hope I never have another such experience," said Creighton yesterday over the telephone. "I can't describe the feeling that came over me when I 'came to' up there on the side of the mountain. I didn't know where I was, hadn't the slightest idea of the time and couldn't figure out for the life of me how I happened to be there. One thing I did realize, however, was that my wife and daughter would be worried about me and I certainly made tracks for the depot. I thought I would go crazy while I was waiting for the train. My brain must still have been a little hazy, because I never once thought of telephoning to let them know my whereabouts and that I was safe."

When Creighton left his place of employment he said he was going to a corner grocery to purchase a cigar.

Creighton is 50 years old and has been a resident of Denver for seven years.

MRS. WALKER DIES

Colorado Springs lost one of its long-time residents yesterday, when Mrs. Frances C. Walker passed away. She was the widow of William S. Walker, for many years identified with local politics, and later a successful investor in mining. Her death occurred at the home, 226 East Cucharas street, at 6:45 o'clock a. m., after an illness of two weeks. Funeral services are to be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, from Fairleys and Law's undertaking rooms, with interment at Evergreen cemetery.

Frances Calhoun Gardner was born at Calhoun Prairie, Richland county, Illinois, March 6, 1834, her parents having been among the pioneer settlers in that state. She resided there and in Clay, Ill., until coming to Colorado Springs. In 1854 she was married to John F. Heap, and the couple had 10 children, five of whom survive her. These are Clarence, of this city; Edwin C., a business man of the city for many years; Mrs. Ona Anderson of Butler, Pa.; Rebecca F. Mangold, wife of F. A. Mangold of Denver, and Mrs. Mary E. Gross of Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Heap died in 1873, and in 1877 his widow married William S. Walker, a merchant of Flora, Ill. To them one child was born, Albert, who, 17 years ago, at the age of 16, was accidentally killed near this city while hunting.

In 1880 Mr. and Mrs. Walker removed to this city. She united with the First Presbyterian church and remained a member constantly to the time of her death.

The members of the family are widely scattered, and none of the daughters will be able to attend the funeral. Mrs. Walker had been in the northwest for several weeks, and only recently returned home. Mrs. Anderson has been very ill from an operation, and Mrs. Mangold for some weeks has been with Mrs. Gross in California for the benefit of her health.

He was badly bruised, but suffered no other injuries.

NEWSPAPER MAN FINDS POCKETBOOK WITH $500

A Denver newspaper man, who asked that his name not be mentioned, found a pocketbook containing $500 on a seat in the Denver and Rio Grande depot yesterday. He turned the find over to Detective McCaffery, also of Denver, who is here assisting the local police department during carnival week. In addition to the money, the pocketbook contained a railway ticket to Los Angeles and cards and letters showing that the purse belonged to Mrs. William Jones. The pocketbook with its contents intact has been sent to her in that city.

ORDINANCES INTRODUCED

A more stringent ordinance covering the handling of food stuffs in Colorado Springs was introduced at yesterday's meeting of the city council by Commissioner Frost. The measure was laid on the table until the meeting tomorrow.

The new ordinance provides that merchants must cover all foodstuffs and keep them protected from flies and dirt, and no foodstuffs can be carried through the city unless covered and otherwise protected from contamination.

STOP HAIR COMING OUT

Restores Faded and Gray Hair to Natural Color. Itching Scalp Quickly Stopped.

This applies to Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, for if it does not do exactly what is claimed for it, the sales would naturally drop off. However, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy does "make good," as evidenced by its daily increasing sales. Druggists say that this preparation gives the best satisfaction of any hair remedy ever sold. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is clean and wholesome and perfectly harmless. It removes dandruff, strengthens the hair, gives new life to dull or parched hair, and gradually restores gray hair to natural color.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

PAVING ESTIMATES SUBMITTED COUNCIL

Four estimates for street paving were given to the city council by City Engineer Waggener yesterday, and tomorrow the revised plans for the downtown paving district, together with a resolution and ordinance creating the district, will be taken up by the council. All the estimates were prepared by the city engineer's office and provide for paving with asphalt concrete, bitulithic, sarcolithic mineral rubber or sheet asphalt. The estimate for sarcolithic is the lowest by about $7,500. As soon as the resolution and ordinance are passed the city will advertise for bids. It is probable that the contract will be let by the middle of September. The city engineer's figures are as follows:

Little Stories and Incidents of Carnival Celebration Told in Tabloid

Every move of the two aviators, P. O. Parmalee and T. Clifford Turpin, was commented upon yesterday afternoon by the big cosmopolitan crowd which packed the grandstand. Nothing that could be said was left unsaid. Here are a few exclamations which tell the story of the afternoon's event in tabloid:

"See that strip of even ground there, dear? That's the runway. The biplanes run along there until they go up into the air."

"Look! Parmalee's climbing in!"

"There go the propellers!"

"He is starting to move!"

"She's going up!"

Hurray, Parmalee's in the air and is sailing straight for the mountains!"

"He is climbing higher and higher. Looks as though he were 1,000 feet up!"

"Thousand feet, rats! I'll bet he is not more than 300. You're punk on judging altitude, even if you do live where there is plenty of it."

"Aw daddy, the aid flyer is falling! See, it is getting lower and lower. Aw, its almost on the ground. Hold me up, I can't see. Aw, its down. An' he only fly'd about across that field."

"Say that is a shame, isn't it. I did want to see him fly way up high. How soon do you think that the other aviator will try and go up, Joe? There listen—"

"Ladies and gentlemen: Mr. Parmalee is uninjured and he will be up in the air again in a very few minutes. At, however, Mr. Turpin will fly, and then he will go up again. Thank you."

"Say when are those machines going to go up anyway? I have waited patiently as Mary's lamb for the past half hour. By jove, fellows, Turpin, or whatever his name is, is in the machine, and he's going up. There he goes!"

"He's in the air—no he's not. He won't make it. There he goes into that pile of dirt. Wonder if the machine is wrecked?"

"More inactivity, dear. Anyway, we're having fun. Just look at that riot of color! See that cowman with the red chaps beside the biplanes! What—"

ELKS LODGE, NO. 309.
The Elks Lodge Float Was Awarded Second Prize for the Best Float in Tuesday's Civic Pioneer Parade.

"Ladies and gentleman: Mr. Ireland will entertain you by riding outlaw horses, until Mr. Parmalee goes up again. He will now ride "Simple Susan."

"There's Parmalee! He's up! Isn't that splendid. Look at him. Look how high he is! He is going to circle around the grandstand! Isn't that wonderful? After this I ride in a flying machine. No more tame automobile for me. He's been up five minutes now!"

"Look at him come down! See him warp his planes. You can't beat it, can you? Didn't he light nice?"

"There goes Turpin again! Hope he makes it. He's going. No—he won't. He is in the same pile of dirt. Too bad."

"Ladies and gentlemen: Jane Bernoudi, the peerless girl lariat artist, will show you her skill. Keep your seats for just a little while longer. Both aviators will go up again. They will do good work if you will have a little patience."

"There goes Parmalee!"

"Look how high he is going!"

"This beats the other flight!"

"Look! he is going over the city—this is going to be a long one."

"There's Turpin! He's up, and he's flying high. See, the two machines are together. Look at them turn—seems as though they were on a pivot! What do you know about that? This is going to be some flying, kid, take it from me!"

"Wasn't it splendid, dear?"

"I should say it was!"

The tall, slim girl with the intellectual brow, stood beside the big, bluff cowman in front of the grandstand, yesterday afternoon, waiting for an opportunity to ask a question. If appearances counted she might have been most anybody—a member of the reportorial staff at home, a young novelist, or an eastern girl looking for western color with which to touch up homeward-bound letters. At any rate she had a pencil and a note book in hand and when the opportunity came she grasped it.

"Would you mind telling me, Mr. Ireland, the name of the horse the colored man just rode? I know you are Mr. Ireland, for I have heard several gentlemen call you by name."

"That horse, miss? Oh, yes, it was High Tower."

"Thank you very kindly. Now would you mind telling me what you called him yesterday?"

"Wha-what's that?"

"I say, would you mind telling me what you called him yesterday. I know you cowmen have a habit of giving a horse a dozen names that is, if he is not the horse you ride regularly. It is sort of a peculiarity of yours."

Ireland, who is manager of the wild west show, smiled good naturedly.

"If I remember right," he replied, "we called him 'Simple Susan'—the name wuz hardly appropriate, Friday morning when he wuz tried out before the carnival committee we called him 'Hell-Fer-Buckin'.' This Friday we got him down as 'Buckin' Devil,' an' Saturday we're goin' tuh call him his real name, 'Waltz-Me-Around-Again-Willie.'"

"I am very much obliged, Mr. Ireland," said the girl, and she walked off, all smiles.

"No," said the fat, jolly man, "there were no foolish questions asked at the aviation meet yesterday afternoon. "I should say not! These are not foolish at all. I'll leave it to you if they are. Here's a few:

"'Is that a flying machine?'

"'Does he sit in that little seat?'

"'What makes those big things go around?'

"'You don't mean to say that a man rides in that fragile thing, do you?'

"'Are bird-men and aviators the people who ride in those things?'

"'What are flying machines for, anyway?'"

N. Howard Thorp, the cowboy author and song writer, was one of the holders of box seats in the grandstand yesterday during the aviation meet. He is a big, husky cowman, and his only sorrow was that he could not be with "the rest o' the outfit," as he expressed it. Several months ago he was injured in an accident which prevents further riding—at least for a long time to come.

Hardly was he seated before an industrious seller of most anything came around with his wares. He had balloons, squawkers, noise-makers and "the famous Howard Thorp cowboy songs in book form." Thorp listened to the vender's cry and bought a book.

"I'm going to buy one of my own books," he said, "just to see how it feels."

All afternoon he entertained a small audience with his stories of cowboy life, dropping into the dialect of the plains every once in a while. Some of his songs are "Little Joe," "The Wanderer," "Little Adobe Casa," "Texas Cowboy," "Cowboy's New Year Dance," "Bucking Broncho" and "Educated Feller."

Another accident that might have been quite bad as that of last Tuesday was prevented yesterday afternoon by the cool-headedness of Jack Ashbaugh, cowman with the Ireland wild west show at Roswell park. By causing his horse to crash into an automobile in which were seated P. F. Hartman and Leslie Carn, he prevented the animal from breaking through a fence behind which stood hundreds of people so closely packed in that escape would have been impossible.

Ashbaugh was loudly applauded by the large crowd which witnessed the incident and he was given full credit for his good work. He sustained an injured leg, which was slightly wrenched, and his horse was badly cut by coming in contact with the running board of the car, against which it fell pretty heavily. Ashbaugh attributes the cause of the accident to the horse, which he says "is just naturally foolish." The occupants of the auto were not injured and the machine was not damaged.

Those who wanted thrills and wanted to get them in front of the grandstand during the aviation meet yesterday afternoon had to "sign away their lives," which is the popular expression. In other words, they had to sign an agreement that if allowed to stand in front of the grandstand, they would assume all risk and liability for accident or death, agreeing not to hold the carnival or Wright Brothers' responsible in any case.

Among those who took their stand in this dangerous locality was Mayor Avery. All during the meet he sat on a little stool near the main doorway leading to the entrance under the grandstand.

"Did the carnival committee make you sign away your life?" the mayor was asked.

"Yes, I had to sign mine away," he replied.

"Mr. Lathrop, I have been waiting here for the last three-quarters of an hour and every car has passed me by. I know your wife so well, too, and I do so want to get out to Roswell park to see the aviators!"

This was one of the many things told Superintendent R. M. Lathrop of the street car company yesterday afternoon. Everybody wanted to go to the aviation grounds, and how to get there resolved itself into practically the biggest question of the day. Every car the company could press into service was used on the Tejon street line, and by the time each coach started on its run it was jammed full. One car in charge of Conductor No. 204 carried 207 passengers from Pikes Peak avenue to Roswell. Every inch of space was utilized, as many as 12 or 15 clinging to the hand rail on the tail end. This is the biggest crowd, speaking with absolute certainty, say street car officials, that a Colorado Springs car has ever carried at one time.

Wiseheimers got aboard southbound cars making the entire trip to Broadmoor and the canon to get a seat. Southbound card cars were packed as heavily in some instances as cars going direct to the aviation field. Along the right of way thousands of people stood, waiting for a chance to get on board, and thousands were disappointed, having to wait hours, or walk. Many took this last alternative and "hiked" out to the park.

Those aboard the cars, especially those on the tail end, "joshed" young women who stood waiting vainly on a corner for a car to stop.

"Here's room here, sister—there is one inch left. If you can ride on that you are welcome," a mischievous youngster would call out. Of course the young lady hailed would blush and turn her back, but undaunted by the cool reception which sometimes melted into a smile, the mischievous ones kept up their "joshing." At every corner men and women would laugh at the queer antics of the happy crowds aboard the cars, and many a laugh was directed at those who hung on just "by the skin of their teeth." It was great fun for all concerned save for those who did not know what minute their arms would give out and they would go tumbling to the ground.

Captain J. B. Sims, an old-time range rider of Colorado City, who rode in the civic-pioneer parade Tuesday afternoon, remembered the day as the forty-third anniversary of a battle between the settlers of the Pikes Peak region and the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians. In remarking about it yesterday he said:

"The fight took place on the spot now occupied by the Antlers hotel. Frank and George Robbins were killed, as was Charles Everhardt, and [illegible] Baldwin was scalped and left on the field for dead."

Colorado Springs is changed from a city of 29,000 inhabitants to one of nearly 65,000. Yesterday it was estimated by railroad men and city officials that in all there were about 35,000 visitors, several thousand of whom came in Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and yesterday. This is the greatest number of people ever gathered here at one time, and in all probability the number will be greatly increased before the week is over. So far there has been no cry of lack of accommodations, and it is doubtful if there will be any.

Victims of the runaway accident, in which eight persons were hurt in front of the grandstand Tuesday by a horse ridden by Lieut. H. M. Ragle, company A, Colorado National guard, are recovering from their injuries, and it is expected that all will be out in a few days.

Manager J. B. Ireland of the wild west show at Roswell park, said yesterday that tomorrow he will give an added attraction which would be out of the ordinary. What it is, he would not divulge. For the occasion he has again employed Jane Bernoudi, the lariat thrower, and Black Diamond, the colored rider.

Miss Bernoudi is recognized as the premier woman rope artist of the west, and yesterday afternoon her work was loudly applauded. Many times during the afternoon she caused merriment by roping some unsuspecting cowman, and once she undertook to capture the automobile in which carnival officials were riding. She did so, and the machine came to a stop.

Violet and Her Press Agent Here With Wild Tale of Bold Kidnapers

'dash' (business of holding up index finger and looking wise)

This is the story of the failure of a press agent to get away with a fake kidnaping staged in Denver at 10 o'clock Tuesday night and exposed when the beautiful Violet Mann, an Orpheum actress, staggered into police headquarters here early—very early—yesterday morning

The plot was elaborate The pretty Violet person looked as though about to faint when she confronted the desk sergeant at 5 o'clock yesterday morning Her clothes were torn and bedraggled her golden hair was hanging down her back and she had rings—rings of real blood you know—on her fingers

She gasped out a pitiful tale of being kidnaped by two bold and very bad men in Denver tossed into an automobile and whirled away to Colorado Springs In the northern part of town Miss Mann declared the men had dumped her out of the machine and then started back toward Denver A timely friend was on hand to rescue the maid and assist her to the police station

At headquarters the officer in charge listened to the tale of woe Then he spoke kindly He said he was glad very glad to hear such a remarkable story But it comes a trifle late Miss Mann he continued Chief Armstrong in Denver, called me on the telephone a few minutes ago and asked me to treat you kindly when you arrived Your chauffeur has been caught and has confessed Will be glad to see you when you call again

The press agent a man named Birch and Miss Mann came to Colorado Springs on a train reaching here about 2 o'clock in the morning Then to make a good appearance before the police the girl tore her clothing and Birch supplied a few drops of real blood by smashing himself on the nose It was a good makeup to carry out the kidnaping yarn but the police were wise

It was necessary to wire to Denver for money before the girl and her press agent could get out of town They left about noon

HOUSE REAPPORTIONMENT BILL UP IN THE SENATE

WASHINGTON, Aug 2—Final debate on the congressional reapportionment bill to increase the house membership from 391 to 433, occupied practically all of today's session of the senate. Senators Root of New York and Burton of Ohio opposed the bill and O'Gorman of New York and Shively of Indiana supported it The bill probably will pass the senate tomorrow.

Senator Root will offer an amendment tomorrow to maintain the present house membership. He contended that a large body lends to legislative inefficiency and gives each district less chance of making its needs known

MEXICO BENDS TO WILL OF INSURRECTO CUSTOMS MEN

JUAREZ, Mex., Aug. 2.—The insurrecto element, which the government sought to oust from the customs service in this city to make room for former federal employes, has won out in its show of forcible opposition to the government's plans. Today an official communication was received from the national treasury department at Mexico City notifying Collector Aspe that it had been decided to retain the men in the service and federal appointments will be mailed them in a few days. The men have continued in the exercise of their accustomed functions today and there has been no evidence of disorder.

A COLD STEAK ECONOMY

When there is any left-over steak you can make a tasty little dish by cutting it up as you would cutlets, and after marinating, roll in eggs and crumbs and fry in deep fat. Garnish with lemon and a few sprigs of parsley. This will prove a real-kitchen economy and at the same time provide a really delectable little cash.

People Will Talk You Know

And that's the reason why Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines are advertised so little nowadays. They have made hundreds of thousands of cures in the past 40 years, and some of the grateful people whom they have restored to health are to be found almost everywhere. There's scarcely a hamlet that doesn't contain some. Look them up. Interview them. They are living, walking, active advertisements.

For Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines.

You can believe your neighbors. Therefore ask them. What cured them will very likely cure you, if similarly afflicted—only give them a good, fair trial.

It's a good, sound, common sense policy to use a medicine only of KNOWN COMPOSITION, and that is not in accordance with secret nostrum or patent medicine drugs. The most intelligent people, and many of the most successful, regular practicing physicians, follow this judicious course of action. The leading medical authorities of all schools of practice, endorse the ingredients composing Dr. Pierce's medicines. These are plainly printed on wrapper and attested under oath. There's no secrecy; an open publicity, square-deal policy is followed by the makers.

We have a profound desire to avoid all offense to the most delicate sensitiveness of modest women, for whom we entertain the most sincere respect and admiration. We shall not, therefore, particularize here concerning the symptoms and peculiar ailments incident to the sex for which Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has for more than 40 years proven such a boon. We cannot, however, do a better service to the afflicted of the gentler sex than to refer them to Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a great family doctor book of 1000 pages, bound in cloth and given away gratis, or sent paid, on receipt of 21 one cent stamps to cover cost of wrapping and mailing only. All the delicate ailments and matters about which every woman, whether young or old, single or married, should know, but which their sense of delicacy makes them hesitate to ask even the family physician about, are fully discussed in this great book. EXIT THE KNOCKER

HAVE you noticed that since the beginning of the Carnival movement several months ago you have not heard a single knock or a single serious criticism of the project? The first suggestion of a big celebration to commemorate Colorado Springs' fortieth birthday was received with approval, and the enthusiasm has steadily grown until now that the overwhelming success of the enterprise is fully demonstrated, everybody is wondering why Colorado Springs has not been holding such a carnival every summer in the past.

The success of this event shows beyond doubt that there is actual need of an annual carnival for the entertainment of our summer visitors. As a matter of fact, this celebration has attracted thousands of people who otherwise would not be here this week. This is evident to the most casual observer. The hotels and boarding houses are crowded, and it is safe to say that Colorado Springs is now entertaining fully 20,000 visitors.

But we believe that an annual carnival would be well worth its cost in money and effort even if it did not attract a single additional visitor. The problem which has always confronted Colorado Springs, and which for years has remained unsolved, is the provision of more entertainment for the tourists. The lively interest which our visitors are displaying in the present celebration shows the need of continuing it from year to year. The tourists are here to have a good time, and we cannot offend them by providing more pleasure for them than they had expected. Of course, they want to take in the scenic attractions, and they will do that anyway, but eventually, when they have made all of the trips and visited all of the mountain resorts, they are ready for some other form of amusement.

And there is no more satisfactory amusement to be provided than a summer carnival with such features as are included in this week's program. It will be several years before aeroplanes lose their power of entertaining the people. A real Wild West show is always a novelty to Easterners. These are two features which could be used again next year, and it would not be a difficult matter to find others.

The Summer Carnival should be made a permanent feature in Colorado Springs, and it is safe to say that the success of the present celebration has supplied the only incentive needed to establish it on a firm basis.

THE GLAD HAND

WHEN two thriving cities are separated by only 80 miles of space there is bound to be a healthy rivalry which on occasion degenerates into jealousy. 'Twas ever thus, and probably always will be, and at times there has been apparent a little of the ill-feeling between Colorado Springs and Denver that exists between Portland and Seattle, Dallas and Fort Worth, Houston and Galveston, and a dozen other near neighbors that might be mentioned.

But in recent months this feeling has been overcome to a remarkable extent, largely through the sensible efforts of the Chambers of Commerce of the two cities to create better relations. Denver, and especially its newspapers, exhibit less of the patronizing spirit, and down here we are showing less jealousy of Denver's claim that it is a tourist resort.

On the present occasion, the Denver papers have shown themselves thoroughly alive to the importance of giving their support to an enterprise which tends to build up a bigger and better Colorado Springs, and thus eventually a greater Colorado. They have devoted unlimited space to the Carnival from the beginning, and since last Sunday all of them have featured it as the big story of the week. Yesterday The News paid editorial tribute to Colorado Springs as follows:

Colorado Springs is forty years old. We are sure she doesn't look it, except in prosperity. She is enough of that to be 100 at the least. But as for all marks of decrepitude they are far from her, and long may they remain so.

Colorado Springs is a city unique in the world. With a world of distinctly Colorado feeling in many ways, in some others she is and has been from the first a suburb of the east, the old east, the east which never crosses the Alleghanies if it can help doing so. This is not said in disparagement; but merely to state a fact. And it speaks volumes for the city's vitality that she is able to manage her suburban estate at a distance of 1,500 miles from her original source of supply. It tells of attractiveness without a peer; and tells as well of a sturdy devotion to the upbuilding of a community. Here's luck to Colorado Springs.

BOOSTS THAT COUNT.

These are the things that help. Denver is the metropolis of Colorado and of the entire mountain region. It has certain advantages peculiar to itself, and Colorado Springs should do everything in its power to help make Denver make the most of them. On the other hand, Colorado Springs is pre-eminently the health and pleasure resort of the Rocky Mountain Region. It possesses the natural advantages of unsurpassed climate and a location immediately adjacent to the most inspiring scenery in the West. No other city possesses such attractions; consequently no other city can hope to displace or even seriously rival Colorado Springs as the premier resort of the West.

The cities of Colorado are steadily being drawn together in a closer union, the ultimate effect of which will be the development of every portion of the state along the best and broadest lines. There is no denying that Colorado's progress has been retarded in the past by the lack of the spirit of all for one and one for all. Happily the days of petty jealousies are over. Colorado is now advancing with giant strides, and Colorado Springs is in the front of the procession.

MOVED, SECONDED, PUT AND VOTED.

From the Providence Journal

"We have a new member, Mr. Pierpont Morgan of New York." With these words the kaiser cast a unanimous vote for the admission of the distinguished yachtsman to the Imperial Yacht club. It is said that some of the members think his action a trifle arbitrary But if the kaiser had proposed Mr Morgan in the regular way, would any of them have ventured on a blackball?

THE CAMORRA TRIAL.

From the San Francisco Chronicle

Good American citizens are heartily ashamed of the manner in which criminal justice is administered in our courts and the outrageous and unnecessary length of trials in criminal cases.

But when we contemplate the trial of some 36 prisoners, alleged members of a secret society, for the murder of Genarro Cuoccolo and his wife, which has been going on at Viterbo, Italy, since March 11, one is inclined to consider our administration of criminal justice both decorous and speedy. The opinion has been expressed that this trial would last a year. Jurymen could be got only by the severest of measures, it evidently being considered that for a juryman to vote to convict would be equivalent to committing suicide.

It is not surprising that jurymen should wish to avoid passing on such a case, not only by reason of perhaps a full year's imprisonment which it involves, but because of the power of the society, with its limitless ramifications and the relentless persistence with which it pursues its intended victims.

The testimony of Captain Fabroni of the Italian national police, who under orders from the government has been for years investigating the society, discloses the existence of an organization covering all southern Italy, whose sole object is plunder, without murder if possible, with murder when necessary. Murder is the inevitable penalty of treachery, and apparently of any effective opposition to the society.

Blackmail by the society seems universal. The society collects toll from all engaged in gainful occupations even from beggars who infest the cities of southern Italy and up to the great public service and other corporations, which pay regular toll for the protection of their property.

And the power of the society is shown by the fact that its protection is effectual If the toll is paid the property or the individual is safe, for the criminals are either all members of the society or fear its vengeance if its protection is not respected.

It is unnecessary to say that the existence of such a society is the result of economic and social conditions and that its existence can end only by relieving the economic pressure.

The Italian government has doubtless long known all about the society. With so extensive a membership it is the simplest of detective work to find out about it. Making public the information is a wholly different matter.

What the Italian government has undertaken in this trial is to obtain legal proof of the existence and nature of the society with the intent to crush it out of existence.

There is little probability that it will succeed, regardless of the result of this particular trial. When the entire fabric of society is rotten little good is accomplished by the excision of a small patch.

The society, also, has a historical background in that it was instituted many years ago, when the wretched Bourbon dynasty was fearfully misgoverning southern Italy and brigandage and patriotism were almost synonymous. Without the habit of mind which grew up under those conditions it is improbable that such a society could exist. It is equally improbable that it will cease to exist until better economic conditions offer better and more certain rewards to honest industry.

CONGRESS AND GOOD ROADS.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Senator Swenson's proposition to establish another "pork barrel," for the annual distribution of $20,000,000 for the improvement of country roads, is a good point at which to draw the line against the further extension of congressional activity within the states. Congress, no doubt, has the power "to establish post roads;" that congress should take upon itself the care of building roads for the benefit of people who will not go to the pains or expense of building roads for themselves is an idea fraught with various kinds of mischief. That the proposition comes from a Virginia Democrat is a striking illustration of the extent to which former political convictions even the pride of the Old Dominion—have become absorbed in the one idea of getting something at the public crib

The maintenance of good roads is peculiarly the business of the people who habitually use the roads—that is, of the neighborhood In Pennsylvania it has been a perplexing question how far the state whose interest and complete authority are unquestioned, could wisely assume any of the responsibility that belongs to the counties and the townships The question has been solved by making the state appropriations for county roads contributory and proportioned to the actual local expenditure, confining the direct work of the state to the main highways, connecting county seats, which are a matter of general state concern. The purpose of the state is not so much to lighten the local burdens as to equalize them and to make local effort more effective by scientific direction and cooperation.

We have not taken up this work in Pennsylvania any too soon, but we have at last got it upon a sound basis, and may expect its gradual development to the advantage of the whole commonwealth and of every part of it in proportion to its own activity. It has been a stimulus to effort to recognize that there were other states whose highways were better than ours. It never occurred to anybody in Pennsylvania that all the other states ought to combine to make up our deficiencies

Down on the southern border of Virginia, where Mr. Swanson lives, the roads are deplorable Nearly all the roads in the state are bad enough, but these are so near to no roads at all that he is probably right in his thought that it is impossible to extend the rural free delivery in his neighborhood until the "post roads" can be in some way improved But that is the business of the people of Pittsylvania county. It is enough to tax the rest of us to supply the postal service, if they wish it to reach them they must make themselves accessible, so it

Very early in the history of the United States congress undertook the construction of a national highway from the Atlantic coast to the Ohio That was a national necessity, both for ordinary communication and for military purposes, but in the gradual settlement of the country and the development of the means of communication the necessity passed, and congress has undertaken no road-building since. The people who have built up the two score and more of states have made such roads as met their requirements and those that provided the best roads have prospered most There is not any state too poor to improve its highways If it waits for a subsidy from congress it will only drop farther behind

There is no national necessity that the rural postman shall reach Chatham, or any other of the hundred country towns of Virginia, over a smooth road; but Chatham's claims are probably as great as those of the thousands of towns from the Atlantic to the Pacific that would expect their congressmen to get them a share of the national appropriation if Senator Swanson's scheme prevailed Appropriations of this kind, for improving navigation upon unnavigable streams, for public buildings in remote towns and the like, have been one of the most demoralizing influences in our politics. Every kind of legislation has come to be viewed in the light of what it involves for each member's district. In all these instances there is the reasonable excuse that the appropriations are for necessary national purposes and the local benefit is only incidental—like the local interest in the tariff The idea of congressional appropriations for local road-building surpasses anything yet suggested by the "new nationalism" in the way of substituting a scramble for spoils in the place of local responsibility and self-respect.

SIZZLING DAYS.

How thankful we should be, my friends, the weather is so warm! No frosty sky above us bends, we fear no arctic storm' Sweet summer lingers with us yet, the good old fashioned sort, and down my face refreshing sweat is rolling by the quart, The sun is sizzling through the skies, and paints its pathway red, the dear, delightful, sportive flies are dancing on my head And as I contemplate the boons that cluster over me, I eat another dish of prunes and shed some tears of glee. Now while we loll in comfort here, let's think of others' woes, the Eskimo who drives his deer among the drifted snows—what would he give to sit with us, the mercury beside, and fan himself, and cuss, and cuss, while being slowly fried? What would the man of Lapland give to quit his native soil, in this, our sunny land, to live, and watch his whiskers broil? I do not have to shovel snow, and that is surely nice, and never am I asked to throw coal ashes on the ice you do not see me on the fire big chunks of cordwood slam What more could any man desire? I'm happy as a clam.

Copyright, 1911, by Walt Mason.

Do you ever listen to your own voice?

If you don't, please let me suggest it as a valuable little experiment to make occasionally.

What would we think of a girl—or a man either for that matter—who never looked in the glass? But how many people never in all the time of their lives hold up the mirror of self-inspection to their voices!

The girl who spends an hour or two daily before her mirror anointing her face with lotions and creams and powders and solicitously squinting at it from this angle and that, probably doesn't think of giving 10 minutes a year to inspecting and attempting to improve that other great tool of her personality, her voice.

Gladstone once said, "Ninety-nine men out of ever hundred never rise above mediocrity because the training of the voice is entirely neglected and considered of no importance"

That is a sentence which not only the men who wants to rise above mediocrity, but also the man or woman who wants to be a pleasing and attractive friend, will do well to consider.

The voice is a wonderful instrument. By the person who knows how to play more than one or two monotonous notes upon it, it can be made a veritable Hamelin piper's pipe to charm people into doing what he wants them to.

Our late lamented O. Henry has a witty little story about two men, one of whom was, to use his own expression, "a gargoyle with a silver tongue," and the other—to quote again, "a ringer for Hermes, but with a voice that sounded like a leak dripping in a tin dishpan at the head of the bed when you want to go to sleep." These two men went after the same woman. The "gargoyle with the silver voice" got her.

Like many of O. Henry's tales, this one has a kernel of suggestion as well as a bushel of laughter.

Of course we can't all have silver tongues, but we can all have pleasant and well modulated voices And the first step to this end is to listen to them. I don't mean to sit down and talk so as to hear our own voices. We wouldn't really get any idea of them that way. The way to hear one's voice as it naturally is, is to suddenly listen to it in the midst of a conversation and compare it with other people's

Do we speak too loud?

Do we talk always in one or two monotonous keys and thus lose the music of voice change"

Do we talk too rapidly?

Do we pitch our voices from our heads or throats instead of from the diaphragm, as we really should?

These are some questions for us to ask ourselves in front of the mirror of voice inspection.

MAJESTIC VAUDEVILLE FEATURE OF CARNIVAL.

From the standpoint of the entertainment afforded the city's guests, the special carnival program of high-class Sullivan & Considine vaudeville which Manager Tammen of the Majestic is offering this week is one of the features of the gala celebration, and carnival visitors are finding it one of the most pleasing diversions of their sojourn in the Pikes Peak region.

From the standpoint of economy it is doubly attractive, for in no entertainment is bigger value given for the money than in the Majestic show, which consists of an hour and a half of diversified entertainment, with comedy predominating, all of which can be seen for the trifling sum of 10, 20 or 30 cents. Performances are given at 2.30, 7 30 and 9.10 p m

Of special interest in view of the reminiscent nature of the celebration is the appearance of Miss Sadie Sherman, who is a member of a long line of patriots, in an entertaining program of songs and character delineations Last evening the veterans of the region gathered to do honor to Miss Sherman, who is one of the most talented stars who has visited Colorado Springs in a long time

Other features of the classy bill are the laughable sketch of Frank Graham and Edith Randall, "A Gay Old Boy," the funny hodge podge of mirth and dancing, "Sixty-five on the Second Floor Back" by Edward Barto and Florence Young, the excruciatingly absurd juggling novelties of Charles D. Weber, the thrilling aerial feats of La Vier, the Majestiscope motion picture plays, "The Divals" and "The Vagabonds" and the concert orchestra program No fun lover can afford to miss it

"HOUSE OF A 1,000 CANDLES"

Despite the many counter attractions, "The House of 1,000 Candles" which Theodore Lorch is presenting at the Opera House all this week, with a matinee Saturday afternoon, is playing to a series of capacity houses. This drama will be presented every night this week

In the first act of "The House of a Thousand Candles," the hero is surprised by a shot of a pistol which breaks a wineglass which Bates the butler has just placed on a tray in front of him How this trick is accomplished is of course a stage secret but the illusion of the bullet hitting the glass and smashing it into a thousand pieces is perfect.

As we told a short history of Theodore Lorch's life in this column yesterday, the following brief summary of Cecil Fay's career may be of interest to her many admirers in this city Miss Fay is a Texas girl, hailing from Sherman. Her real name is Hannah Cecil Fay Miss Fay says that she was never stage-struck and in fact, never cared about going on the stage Miss Fay's sister was an actress, and it was in her company that Theodore Lorch played for a season or so

One day Miss Fay's sister played Sherman. The ingenue was ill and Miss Fay took her place. She continued with the company all season and though today she declares she still is not stage-stuck she loves the work and every year finds her advancing in her work.

Commencing Monday, Wilton Lackaye's "The Battle," will be presented for the first time in this city. "The Battle" is by Cleveland Moffett and was first produced by Wilton Lackaye. Mr. Lorch presented it in Oklahoma City with great success.

CIRCUS HERE NEXT TUESDAY

Great Interest Is Centered in the Coming of the World's Best Show.

When the big circus trains begin to unload their wonders in Colorado Springs next Tuesday, August 8, and an army of workmen sets up ten acres of tents and hoists a thousand flags and banners into the heavens, it will be the cue for the business man to lock his office or store, put on his Sunday clothes, take his children by the hands and hoof it to the show grounds, as he did when he was a boy. In that city of tents the wonders of the world will be gathered and the man who retains a sufficient memory of his youth to see things through a boy's eyes will have the time of his life

The event means more this year than ever before, because it is the return of an old favorite after several years of world traveling The Forepaugh and Sells Brothers' circus has grown and improved since it was last seen here. Its old friends will scarcely recognize it It is something vastly different from what it used to be, yet there is not a time in its history that it was not considered the best show in America by those who keep posted in such matters.

The parade will take place at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of show day. It will be the same elaborate street pageant that received such unbounded praise when it passed over the boulevards of New York City. Not a thing has been changed since then. The downtown ticket office will open early in the morning. It will be located at the Busy Corner, and all reserved seats and admissions will be sold there at the same prices charged at the regular ticket wagons on the grounds. This office is operated for the benefit of those who wish to avoid the rush on the grounds. It is a convenience that will be appreciated and should be taken advantage of.

The railroads are expecting to handle the record-breaking crowd that will surely come from the surrounding towns and farm country. No circus day in the past year has ever occasioned the genuine excitement that this one has already aroused. It will be a big day in local amusement affairs and a chance of a lifetime for those who like novelty and splendor and lots of it It is doubtful if there will ever be another opportunity to see such wonderful acts as those of the Ty-Bell Human Butterflies, the sensational double-somersaulting automobile, Captain Webb's two troupes of trained seals and sea lions, Professor Taylor's monkey circus, the Pajaro family of Gypsy riders, the Elliott family of aerialists, the greatest company of clowns ever seen in America, and the great Hims-Kimball company of [illegible] bats.

A ONE-DAY TRIP OF WONDERS

The wonderful ride to the still more wonderful gold camp of Cripple Creek is acknowledged by all travelers to be the grandest in the world.

UNKNOWN FAIR FACES

Though I am faithful to my loves lived through,
And place them among Memory's great stars,
Where burns a face like Hesper, one like Mars;
Of visages I get a moment's view,
Sweet eyes that in the heaven of me, too,
Ascend, though virgin to my life they passed,
To these within my destiny seem glassed
At times so bright, I wish that Hope were new.
A gracious freckled lady, tall and brave,
Went in a shawl voluminous and white
Last sunset by; and going sow'd a glance
Earth is too poor to hold a second chance.
I will not ask for more than fortune gave,
My heart she goes from—never from my sight!

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

August 3, 1891.

The explosion of an oil lamp caused a fire at the millinery store of Mrs. S. C Stout on Pikes Peak avenue The blaze was put out by the Hook and Ladder company, which formed a bucket brigade. The Gazette report stated that "The Crowells and Jacksons wet their hose but did not find it necessary to turn the water on the the fire."

Dr. Reudi, one of the leading physicians at Davos Platz, Switzerland, arrived at the Antlers hotel with the intention of living permanently in Colorado Springs

History has always attached much importance to the Number Seven. "Of all numbers there is no one which commanded, in a higher degree, the esteem and reverence of mankind." The Gazette has taken this charmed number, and has woven into stories on a variety of subjects a Series of Sevens, beginning each Monday and continuing during the week.

TOMORROW—ST. ANDREW OF SCOTLAND.

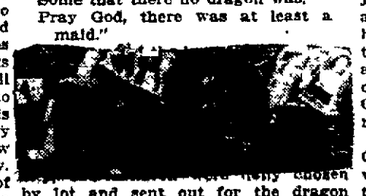

Although St. George of England is named as fourth among the Seven Champions of Christianity, by rights he should have been first, for he was not alone the leader of the valiant knights of the faith, but he was the spokesman of the party. It was through his craftiness that his six companions were rescued from Kalyb, the enchantress, and his adventures were far more exciting than either of the other six.

St. George is the titular saint of Genoa, and in 1222 the great national council held at Oxford, during the reign of Henry III, ordered his feast to be kept as a holiday on April 23 and in 1344 the Order of the Knights of St. George, or "The Blue Garter," was instituted in honor of this saint.

Endless legends are told of St. George, such as the apparition of the Knight to Richard in his expedition against the Saracens and the effect of the vision on the king's army when told them; while there are few who have not heard the legend of St. George and the dragon. Even this legend is condemned as a myth, and as Butler writes, like "the stories of the combat of St. George and the magician Athanasius, and other trumpery came from the mint of the Arians."

An old English ballad runs —

"Some say there was no George,
Some that there no dragon was,
Pray God, there was at least a maid."

[illegible] by lot and sent out for the dragon to feed upon.

At last the lot fell on Cleodolina, the king's daughter, whom he greatly loved. In his grief he offered everything, nay all he possessed to save her from this horrible fate. But the people insisted, and the king submitted, only asking for a respite for eight days. At the end of the time, decked in her royal robes, the princess went out toward the place where the dragon came for his daily meal. Just then St. George, on his way to join his legion, appeared. Learning the cause of her tears, the knight said to her: "Fear not, for I will deliver you." She replied: "Noble youth, tarry not lest thou perish, with me, but fly at once, I beseech you."

"Think not that I will fly," said the knight "God forbid' I will lift my hand against this loathsome thing and through the power of Jesus Christ deliver you

Making the sign of the cross, St. George began the terrible struggle, and at length pinned the dragon to the earth and bound him with the girdle of the princess and the subdued monster was led by them like a dog. As they approached the city the people were filled with terror, but St. George cried: "Fear not! Only believe in the God through whose might I have conquered the adversary, and be baptized, and I will destroy him before your eyes."

That day twenty thousand people were baptized After that St. George slew the dragon and cut off his head before the eyes of all the people After this he proceeded on his journey into Palestine, where the edict of Diocletian against the Christians had just been posted at the temple. St. George indignantly tore it down, and for this act was condemned to eight days of cruel torture. He was bound to a cross, scratched by sharp iron nails, scorched and burned by torches and salt rubbed into his wounds Then a cup of poisonous wine was given him. Making the sign of the cross and recommending himself to Heaven, he drank of the contents of the chalice without injury. He was brought to the temple and commanded to offer sacrifice, but he prayed to God, and the temple and the priests were destroyed by thunder and lightning Then the proconsul ordered him beheaded, and the gallant Christian knight willingly bent his neck to the stroke

St. George, like his six brother Christian champions, attended the wedding of the emporer of Greece, took part in the religious campaign into Africa and Asia, and when news of his death reached England, the king, being a virtuous and noble prince, in remembrance of the Christian champion, ordained forever after a solemn procession to be kept in his royal court on the 23d of April, naming it St. George's Day, upon which day he was most solemnly interred in the city where he was born, and caused a stately monument to be erected in his honor. The king likewise decreed, by consent of the whole kingdom, that the patron of the land should be named St. George, the Christian champion, who had fought so many battles for his honor. The king likewise decreed, by consent of the whole kingdom, that the patron of the land should be named St. George, the Christian champion, who had fought so many battles for Christendom.

Local Motorcyclists Smash Amateur Mark for Half Mile

Local motorcyclists furnished lively entertainment for the crowds at Roswell park yesterday afternoon between the flights of the two aviators, Parmalee and Turpin, and the race they staged on the half-mile track is one long to be remembered. Few realized that the riders were amateurs, for their work was that of old-time professionals. One world's record on a half-mile dirt track for amateurs was smashed by Frank Stratton, who rode five miles in 6 minutes 45 seconds, on an Excelsior. William Glaskin, on an Indian, rode second, his time being 6 minutes 49 seconds. Alva Stratton, Excelsior, came in third, and Emmett Knight, Thor, fourth. William Johnson, Excelsior, was last.

Four races were run, and, in two, five riders participated. In the second race each man finished in the same position as in the first. The only difference was the time, Stratton coming in four seconds ahead of his first mark. In the first race he rode the five miles in 6:49, and in the second he rode it in 6:45. He was awarded the big silver loving cup by the carnival committee.

On several occasions one rider succeeded in getting ahead of another on the turn, and many times the big crowd applauded enthusiastically. On account of the track, which was rough, the riding was dangerous. Several accidents were narrowly averted, and many a rider saved himself by a hair's breadth.

ZOOS AND ALL-STARS WILL PLAY TOMORROW

Those Zooz and the Denver All-Stars will furnish their quota of carnival week entertainment tomorrow afternoon in the Coughlin yard. The game starts promptly at 3 o'clock, and quite an outburst of fans is expected to witness the encounter.

Mr. Gail announces the arrival of a new flinger, a Mr. Clayton, after whom a town in Nebraska and a small river somewhere else has been named. In addition to this distinction, Mr. Clayton is touted as some pitcher. Edmunds will be back of the log, and other gents at present not known to the scorers are to be among those present in the arena.

The All-Stars are quite lusty, and are setting out on a tour of the state. They like the Zoos pretty well, and hope to lose the first game to them. The Zoos' lineup will not be sprung until tomorrow. Denver will bat in this order:

Leisering, rf; Bostick, 2b; Greenstein, ss; Miller, c; Johns, lf; Smith, cf; Talpers, 3b; Shlorneman, 1b; Judson, Johnson, p.

GRAND CIRCUIT RACE RESULTS

DETROIT, Aug. 2.—Miss Stokes, bay filly, who as a yearling held the trotting championship, lived up to her great reputation when in three hotly contested heats she won the long end of the $11,000 purse and the handsome silver cup in the trotting division of the horseman futurity, the main attraction of the Grand Circuit program today.

This stake brought the three-year-olds together for their first clash this year and the fast time shows the class of the starters, only three of which remained to the finish.

In the final heat Miss Stokes led all the way, but was extended to the limit to stave off the rush of Justice Brooks and Main Leaf at the head of the stretch. At the finish she was a length to the good.

The division of the purse gave Miss Stokes $5,400 and the $500 silver cup. In addition, $200 goes to the nominator of her dame.

The pacing division of the futurity, value $4,000, brought out only three starters.

By winning the 2:11 trot Belvasia earned a part of the $13,500 which Tom Murphy paid for her Monday. Results:

Pacing, 2:12 class, purse $1,000, 3 in 5, Black Joe won in straight heats. Best time 2:07½. Game Maid second, Nellie Temple third.

Trotting, 2:11 class, purse $3,000, 3 in 5, Belvasia won second, third, and fourth heats and race. Best time 2:08¼. Chatty Direct second. Charley Thomas third. Douglas McGregor won first heat. Time 2:08¼.

The Horseman and Spirit of the Times futurity for 3-year-old trotters, 3 heats, value $11,000. Miss Stokes won second and third heats. Justice Brooke won first heat. Main Leaf third. Margaret Parrish, Lady Jay, Atlantic express and Centerville started. Time 2:08½; 2:08¾; 2:08¾.

The Horseman and Spirit of the Time for 3-year-old pacers, three heats, value $4,000. Brandon Direct won second and third heats. Fleeta American won first heat. Olive O'Berirnie third. Time 2:09½; 2:10¾; 2:10¾.

AT BUTTE

BUTTE, Mont., Aug. 2.—Arasee, at four to five, won the feature at the track of the Butte Jockey club today, defeating Spohn after a game race in which the mud seemed to retard the latter horse. Pickanniny had the last race all to herself. She set the pace all the way, winning as she pleased, and furnished one of the surprises of the day. Shooting Spray showed that he was a good mudder, winning the third race at odds of nine to one.

IT WAS ALL THE SAME TO HIM

From the Boston Transcript.

A man who was dunned by a bookseller for a book delivered some time before returned the bill with this written on it: "I never ordered this book. If I did, you did not send it. If I got it, I paid for it. If I didn't, I won't."

'Frisco Fans Anxious for Bout Between Bill Papke and Klaus

By HARRY B. SMITH.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 2.—Next to the Wolgast-McFarland match, there is no card that would cause more of a stir than Billy Papke and Frank Klaus. However much one may dislike Papke for his traits of an in-and-outer, the match would decide the perplexed question of who is to be the middleweight champion of the world.

Papke didn't endear himself to the San Francisco public in his last showing in this city, to-wit: with Joe Thomas. At the same time, he is one of the few men who are prominent in his division, and, when he wants to, can put up an amazingly good bout. Of all the other middleweights, the Pittsburger has the best right to challenge Papke. There was some chance to get a line on Klaus in his bout with Montana Sullivan in Oakland, and his work was sufficient to start a controversy as to the outcome of a bout with the Illinois Thunderbolt.

Cyclone Johnny Thompson has had his nose put out of joint by his extremely indifferent showing in the east one night this week with Lewis. Judging from all of the accounts, Thompson had hard work getting started. That reminds one of the Johnny Thompson who used to box the San Francisco middleweights. It also tends to strengthen the suspicion that Johnny got an unusually lucky win over Papke in Australia.

Now that the news has come from Papke that he is willing to box here in September and possibly in August, if that is necessary, Coffroth intends to close the match as soon as possible, if not for the one month, then for the other.

One-Round Hogan plans to go east this time without a manager. He feels, as many other boxers have felt, that a manager is excess baggage, and that he might as well save the percentage that he was formerly compelled to hand over.

There are boxers, of course, who have done as well without managers; who have, in fact, been their own managers. Jack Johnson has been one of these. Don't smile at this statement. Jack has had many managers, but they have been managers in name only, and when it has come to the dictating of terms, the colored champion has always been to the front.

But they are not all like Johnson in the boxing game. I don't hold any briefs for the managers of boxers, but, on the whole, I am inclined to believe that the 25 to 33 per cent that is usually allotted to a manager is well earned, and a good investment. The average boxer isn't a business man, and needs a financier and a shrewd judge of human nature to get the best possible conditions. Further, the ordinary boxer is no press agent, and in these enlightened days requires the services of a manager who can boost him; in other words, keep him in the sporting columns. Willis Britt, for example, was worth his weight in gold to fighters, merely because you could never lose track of his men.

"I'm No Robber," Says Johnson, Then He Signs Up With Curran

DUBLIN, Aug. 2.—It has been rumored for some time that this city was soon to be visited by the all-conquering Jack Johnson, but it was not thought that the big negro was coming in his professional capacity of trouncing Irish boxers.

Such seems to be the case, however, and Petty Officer Curran, who claims the sparring championship of Ireland, seems booked to be his next victim.

The match was arranged in London, where Johnson is toying with a guitar at the Oxford Music hall on a fabulous salary. The possessor of the "golden smile" was at first not disposed to take the offer seriously.

"I am not over here as a robber," he said sweetly. "I like the Irish people immensely. Let Curran keep his title.

"Still," he continued, "I am in the business." So, somehow or other, the match was arranged. The date will be, in all probability, August 5.

A local syndicate is putting up the purse and the match will go as much as twenty rounds if Curran can stand the strain. With his shrewd turn for business, Johnson has insisted that it take place indoors, as the suggested outdoor contest "was entirely dependent on the weather."

Petty Officer Curran is chiefly known to fame as the man who beat Jem Roche, also beaten by Tommy Burns. He has also never been knocked out. He is the only serious rival of Bombardier Wells for the heavyweight championship of the British isles.

Curran is very game and seems fairly cheerful over the prospects. Between his onerous duties of twanging a guitar at a few thousands a week, Johnson is said to have undertaken a little mild training. He does not appear worried, but smiles magnificently at the crowds who watch him passing down the Strand in his automobile.

FORT ERIE RESULTS

FORT ERIE, Ont., Aug 2.—Olambala defeated a field of handicap horses in the mile and three-sixteenths race today and clipped a full second off the track record by covering the distance in 1:57 1-5. In the race for Canadian-owned horses Gelatine won by five lengths. Jockey Davenport was suspended for the rest of the meeting for rough riding on Mad River in the second race.

DUKE AS BACKER FOR AMERICA EXPENSES FOR POLO

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The plans of the Duke of Westminster to assist the Hurlingham club to recover the international polo trophy appear much more comprehensive than the announcement of yesterday. The duke is determined to do for British polo what Sir Thomas Lipton did in his vain efforts to win back the America yachting cup. He will bear the entire cost of the team in every respect.

According to his lordship, the best string of ponies obtainable will be procured and agents will shortly start on a quest for the corralling of the thoroughbreds. The duke believes that one of the main reasons for the defeat of the Hurlingham was inferior horseflesh. In addition to gathering together all the necessary material, he will defray the transportation of team and ponies and in all probability will accompany the team on their trip.

He hopes that the American association will provide a date sufficiently late in summer so as not to conflict with his season's engagements at home. The duke is a fine poloist. In a recent match against Rochampton he dislocated his shoulder, but this hurt is now fully healed.

NEW YORKER PICKS DETROIT AND GIANTS TO LAND PENNANTS

By MANHATTAN.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—On form, if I had to pick the clubs which will contend for the world's championship this fall I should pick Detroit and the New York Nationals. With the race as close as it is in both leagues it is of course impossible to foretell the winners, but with an even break in luck the New Yorkers and Michiganders look to me right now as the best of the lot.

McGraw has got as good a pitching staff as there is in the country today. His men are not sluggers as a whole, but they are what is better, run getters. He has whipped his team into as pretty a baseball machine as one would wish to see, and they look as though they could stand the tremendous strain of the phenomenal race in the National league at least as well as any of the other contenders.

And it is nerve which will win that National league pennant, cold unadulterated nerve.

It would not surprise me if some of the five teams bunched for the lead would blow up at any time under the strain but I do not believe it will be New York.

The Tigers' bats and base running ought to win for them. In Cobb, Crawford and Delehanty, Jennings has the greatest trio of batsmen who have played together since the celebrated Big Four of a generation ago.

After all, it's runs that win games and there is no surer way of getting runs than a trio of stick artists who can consistently bat above .340.

NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—On a much larger volume of trading the stock market today manifested a pronounced inclination to seek a lower level. Prices held fairly steady at the outset, but early in the session considerable selling movement, at times strongly suggestive of bearish initiative, resulted in a number of severe net losses. The heaviness of the list probably was traceable to a number of causes bearing more or less directly upon security values.

An incident which added much to the day's unsettlement was the action of the American Tobacco company directors in deferring payment of the quarterly dividend on the common stock. Tobacco shares were materially affected, the common stock making a net decline of 12 points on the curb, with a loss of over 5 points for Standard Oil, whose affairs are in the way of reorganization. The fortnightly settlement there was accomplished without strain but disappointment was expressed at the showing of the Harriman lines.

Distinct weakness was shown by United States Steel. The selling was naturally associated with developments bearing on the federal inquiry into the company's purchase of Tennessee Coal and Iron. In point of fact, however, steel was much stronger than many other speculative leaders, both Union Pacific, Northern Pacific and Reading losing two or more points. Bethlehem steel preferred declined as much on a denial of rumors that dividends are to be resumed in the near future.

The bond market reacted in sympathy with stocks. Total sales par value $2,639,000.

United States bonds were unchanged on call.

CHICAGO MARKET

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Alleged fear of reciprocity coupled today with absence of exports had a bearish influence on wheat. The market closed at prices varying from the same as last night, to ½c decline. Other leading staples showed net gains all around, corn ½@⅝@¾c, oats ⅜@½ to ⅝ and provisions 5@7½ to 12½c.

Although black rust reports from Minnesota especially were serious they did not bring commensurate buying orders for wheat. Pit gossip was to the effect that the restraining cause checking a desire to purchase was dread as to supposed possible results of reciprocity. In addition, local exporters declared there had not been a workable foreign bid received here since Saturday. From the start, moreover, prices had been handicapped by an official estimate that Italy would have a crop this year 40,000,000 bushels bigger than for the previous 12 months. September ranged from 90¼ to 91¼ with the close steady ⅛c down at 90⅝@¾c.

An opinion from a leading expert that the condition of corn showed a falling off of 12 points from a month ago sent the market for that cereal to a materially higher level. Prices changed for the September option ran from 63⅞ to 63c, with last sales firm at 64⅝c, a net gain of ⅝@⅝c. Cash grades were only in meager supply. No. 2 yellow finished at 64¼@⅝c.

Forecasts of a greatly reduced yield led to a rise in the price of oats. High and low points reached by the September option were 41⅞@41c. The close was 41⅝c representing a gain of ½@⅝c over last night.

Provisions ruled firmer on account of packers buying. Pork wound up ½ to 7½@10c above figures current 24 hours before; Lard at 5@7½ to 12½c advance, and ribs with an increased cost of 7½c to ¼ of a dollar.

Scores of Colorado Springs Readers Are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty.

When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick.

Backache and many kidney ills follow.

Colorado Springs people endorse our claim.

Philip Gamble, 719 S. Nevada street, Colorado Springs, Colo., says: "I was troubled a great deal by my kidneys. My back ached intensely, particularly when I stooped, and often it was difficult for me to straighten. If I took cold it settled in my kidneys and caused my complaint to become worse. Doan's Kidney Pills taken according to directions brought me prompt relief and in December, 1906, I publicly recommended them. Since then, when I have had backache, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and they have promptly checked the attack. I will always speak in the highest terms of this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

COPYRIGHT 1914 CLARA E SIMCOX 535 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

THE old question of the survival of the fittest is raised when one attempts to sound the most popular note in this season's fashion vagaries. All the authorities on modistic s have excelled themselves in orts to display a huge collec- nodels. Paris sent over some styles, but these have only he purpose of quickly enforc- charms of certain lines and ef- ew have been accepted wholly were presented. The four g French frocks I am illustrat- week meet in every way the ients of the American woman. n you will observe that the re draped in a most artistic t a simplicity is emphasized in odels in a marked degree, a y that in no way detracts from uresque. In Fig. 1 a new effect is shown in the skirt. erial is arranged in soft folds eft hip, then swathed around re and draped to convey the its being tucked into the belt to hang in careless folds, but ty this mode of draping is ated in the most skillful man- is little frock is in dull gold Chine, faced with black chif- the embroidery is in dull gold ed green on a cream ground. of elegance is shown in the girdle, which is of quaint embroidery, studded with n view of the popularity of ird decorative touches—an an- uckle, a medallion, etc.—the uld be kept wide open for such things—strings of quaint artistic beads, old bits of enamel work and other trifles, and treasured stores ransacked, moreover, for old ribbons. If dimmed by age all the better, for we are living in eclectic times, and side by side with the most vivid colors that have been countenanced for decades are the dullest, dreariest nuances, many, however, very attractive when judiciously applied. But we are just in touch with the moment when the woman who dresses with personal distinction deals with generalities rather than detail. She will grasp the general evolution of dress and without any slavish imitation select with a broad mind the styles best suited to her own peculiar idiosyncrasies.

In Fig. 2 a charming suggestion is shown for a summer frock. The straight skirt that hangs in soft folds is in white figured crepe de Chine. The silk is patterned with a litle spray in tender willow green. The corsage and tunic, which is all in one, is of plain white silk. Around the neck and sleeves is a double frill in white and pale green tulle. The hat worn with this little frock is in soft white hemp trimmed with wide silk ribbon and lined with green.

In Fig. 3 I am illustrating a gown similar to the one worn by the dainty actress, Mlle. Jeanne Provost. Mlle. Provost, who was the first French woman to wear the trouser skirt and who has now created a sensation by appearing in public in her bare feet, shod in pretty sandals, wears a gown designed on the same lines. It is in heavy white silk crepe trimmed with embroidery, gold and black, on a green ground. The fish-wife drapery is bunched up at the back to form the fashionable bustle. Carrying out the vogue for tassels, as a decorating touch on a gown, black silk tassels, with green and gold metal caps adorn the corsage. A further charming feature is the quaint upstanding frill of net encircling the throat.

Chartreuse colored crepe de Chine is the medium employed in Fig. 4. Unfortunately in the sketch one cannot see the exquisite color scheme in this creation. The embroidery is in faded tones of mauve, pink and gold on a cream colored ground. These colors are also blended on the four long tassels on the skirt. A new effect is shown in the pleated tunic. The back is shaped the same as the front, going up in the center, but the sides are very long, and each point is weighted down with a heavy tassel. The goal attained in these French frocks is a clever simplicity. Those who visited Paris after the influx of foreign buyers had departed were astonished to find that many eccentric, vaunted styles had vanished into space and, perchance, were being sadly plagiarized in suburban and provincial places of other countries. The artiste dressmaker calls upon her own good taste and skill in modifying the styles which she deems too outre. In these illustrations are shown the styles of summer gowns that the ultra fashionable Parisian will wear at Trouville, Deauville, Dinard and other celebrated watering-places.

The Blouse and Its Varieties.

The quaintest little blouses are now being worn. The reign of the separate waist is undoubtedly reopened. With a charming skirt of queer impressionist mauve silk, that is being made for the trousseau of a June bride, will be worn a fragile little blouse of tucked ivory mousseline de soie, the sleeve set in at a deep armhole, with a certain amount of fullness that seems to be eventually arranged to swirl around the arm. Beyond a deep swathed belt of the figured silk turned over at its upper edge with lime colored chiffon, there is no attempt to connect the blouse with the skirt. It is absolutely a thing apart. The neck is scooped out in a deep round and finished with a wide upstanding frill of mousseline, which seems made to caress the throat. The more completely one goes into the subject of these fragile blouses the more exhaustively novel do they appear. And I am particularly persuaded of their success in connection with the beautiful spring silks embroidered or woven with little boquets of flowers, the skirts of which so justify a cnight up drapery or even an discreet slit filled in with a faked petticoat of chiffon and lace. The little vests to the blouse are fashioned oftentimes from one of the many delicate French laces that now abound, or to soften, and at the same time fill in the V shaped hiatus. There is arranged a little folded kerchief of white tulle.

The styles in blouses range from classic simplicity to a complex frou-frou, but it is to be remarked that there has been a growing penchant for a long narrow square in front, in lieu of the now somewhat wearisome V shaped point. The extreme length exacts that it shall be partially filled in, and this is variously contrived with fichu folds of tulle, a tiny plissé frill of net, or a straight band of antique embroidery or metrit lace. The delicate Spring chiffon blouses seem but frothy trifles that look as though the first zephyr they would meet would blow the whole affair to bits, yet they run into extremely high figures. The finest of hand embroidery laces and tulle are used for these confections.

It is amazing how strong the vogue for chiffon, net and tulle has been, and still is. Couturières for several seasons have been fascinated by the decorative possibilities of maline. The manufacturers of this ephemerality must indeed be shaking hands with themselves, for tulle requires replenishing quite frequently, and it is also impossible to get much of an effect on a dress without using a considerable quantity, nor has the silk Alencon net, which is so much used this season for fragile little blouses, very great staying powers. Very pretty models are made up in two shades of ninon and in two contrasting colors, and some of the most successful are in black and white, a magpie effect. The striking effect of a black and white combination is too greatly appreciated by the smart woman to permit her to relinquish it. A blouse of white ninon with a quaint black design has a double upstanding frill of black and white mousseline at the waist, coming above a deep swathed belt of black satin lined with white, which terminates in a hugh Japanese bow at the back. This blouse is to be worn with a white crepe de Chine skirt. The collar, vest and undersleeves are of fine piece lace.

Soft finished organdy is greatly in demand for neckwear, those styles which approximate the Japanese and Medici collars. No matter what Paris may launch later, these collars are the forms which are universally accepted in this country, not only because they are becoming, but because they are so well suited to hot weather wear. Many of the crepe shirt waists have a high turnover collar made of a double thickness of organdy or a roll over flat collar in organdy with a Periwinkle jabot of filmy lace. The Periwinkle jabot is the quaint name given to the cascades of lace which fall on either side of the collar. A curious new style of sleeve on a blouse looks like a wrap of net bordered with taffeta. Other sleeves show latupshade ruffles, finished with a narrow band of black velvet. In some of the newest models a return to the over blouse is shown, or, again, the sleeveless waistcoat with an embroidered net or printed chiffon underblouse. A charming style on this order has been made to wear with a gown of pale yellow. The blouse was of white chiffon, with a delicate flower pattern in pale mauve. The yellow silk was used as a waistcoat, with a gold and mauve strap or sash across the front from one shoulder down to the waist, where there was a waist belt of mauve and yellow, blended with a golden cord ornament and falling ends.

So long as we wear tailor mades we must have our comfortable, boneless shirt waists. The shirt waist has a distinct character of its own, provided it is kept essentially a tailored waist and not in any detail be permitted to travel off into the realms of the blouse proper. It should be a plain affair of silk or crepe de Chine, crepon or heavy linen with severe lines and a lack of ornamentation. First Consul collars in organdy is one of the new features on these crepe models. Others have a double hoop collar that leaves the waist well open at the neck.

The Revival of the Medici Collar.

The little upstanding collar which we term the "Medici" seems to have taken on a new lease of life. It has reinstated itself both on our indoor garments and our outdoor. For indoor wear you may make them of any sort of lace provided that the mesh is heavy enough to support a milliner's wire under its outer edge, or may evolve them from chiffon, tulle or gauze ribbon provided that the material is closely pleated or fluted and made to stand far out from the throat at the back and sides. In front the Medici tapers into rather sharp points that join several inches below the throat, or that run to either side of the V or square cut neck. For evening wear the little upright collar is often outlined with diamante work and encrusted with jewels, the sparkle of which is both effective and becoming. The Medici appears upon every sort of garment, coats, wraps, robes d'interior, dinner and tea gowns, blouses and walking suits. It is a decidedly attractive finish on a tailor-made when the collar tapers off to form a quaint little inner vest for the coat, which may have gauntlets of the same contrasting material.

Summer Fabrics.

Although in this country crepe in its various weaves will be more popular than voile, the leading French modistes have made some most successful models in voiles. White cotton crepe is a highly admirable fabric, the same is quite true of cotton voile. Both are well suited to warm weather wear in this country, and there seems no good reason why one should be discarded and the other selected. There are some strange things done in the way of fashion; here is certainly a case in point. I myself show a predilection for the crepe weaves. Diaphanous styles have led us into all of the most filmy fabrics for both day and evening dresses. At the same time Fashion has decreed for certain parts of the summer girl's outfit, such as our wraps and tailored suits, fabrics that look thicker than they really are. So that there is a curious "extreme" in materials - some parts of the outfit will be of a gossamer lightness and others seemingly too heavy for even the chill of a summer evening at the shore or mountains. Little butterfly mantelettes of taffeta and smart silk coatees and boleros will be worn over the transparent dresses. The little mantelette is made on quaint lines in any of the new novelty silks and taffetas. It is an amusing copy of those worn at the time of the Empress Eugenie. Then there is the bolero of the Directoire, made of plain silk, and the loose dolmanlike affair made of chiffon taffeta and trimmed with ruches and flounces. All these are the wraps that will be worn over the light summer gowns. Embroidered batiste, net, point d'esprit, Irish and French linens, ratines, dimities, golf cord crepes and novelty fabrics will all play a large part in the summer wash dresses. Just at the moment of writing the Pompeiian striped bengalines and taffetas are rarely seen but in the ultra fashionable models. These materials in the dull rich shadings which are really characteristic of the ancient fabrics have not as yet come into popular usage, but undoubtedly they will be very prominent later. Pompeiian red, dull green, dark navy blue and kindred shades appear in the striped silk materials which are in variably used for the jumper, collar and cuffs on the bodice and for the draping on the skirt.

IN THE EYES OF THE NATION

THE events following the occupation of the strike district by Federal troops afford a lesson in the value of military efficiency. It is less than a week since the troops arrived, but they improved conditions within twenty-four hours, and now the whole aspect of the case is changed. The reaction from the battle at Ludlow had a sobering effect on both sides. There were indications that they would welcome an excuse to quit fighting, and the news of the President's decision to send troops gave them the opportunity. It would be hard to guess whether the soldiers were welcomed with greater pleasure by the operators, the militia or the strikers.

Major Holbrook's methods have been highly effective. As fast as is practicable he is disarming all combatants, and it is noteworthy that all of them strikers and mine guards alike are giving up their weapons willingly. As a preventive measure, he has placed an embargo upon the importation of arms and ammunition into the state. This may cause some loss and inconvenience to dealers in sporting goods and others who are in no way concerned in the strike, but if it helps to clarify the situation in the strike district it is well worth while.

The legislature is in session. Every member realizes, or should realize, the gravity of the situation. It is a safe assumption that wise leadership will prevail, and that the problem will be met in a spirit of fairness and tolerance and without attempt to gain personal or party advantage. The Governor's appeal to the President for troops thrust Colorado into the spotlight before the nation, and today our strike situation, and the efforts of the Legislature to remedy it, are the subject of comment in every newspaper in the land. Thus, in a sense, the Legislature is on trial before the nation.

HELP THE GOOD CAUSE

THE special fund for the Chamber of Commerce has been increased in the last week to $10,000. This means that $6,000 remains to be subscribed, and, since the last part of a subscription fund is always the hardest to get, there is uphill work before the committee.

There are scores and hundreds of people in Colorado Springs who profit largely through the work of the Chamber of Commerce without even being aware of the fact. Most of them, of course, contribute nothing to its support. The benefits of its work to the proprietors of resort attractions, hotels, and other concerns which receive the direct patronage of tourists, is obvious. But the Chamber of Commerce is not merely a tourist-boosting institution. Through its fifteen standing committees and its various sub-committees, it is constantly engaged in a variety of enterprises for the betterment of Colorado Springs and the Pikes Peak Region. It deals with a multitude of questions affecting the public welfare, and the benefits of its work are shared by the entire population.

Obviously the organization can have no means of revenue except the dues paid by its members and the subscriptions of its generous friends. The sum total received in dues is not enough to carry on the work planned for the year hence the necessity of the present campaign. All of which is good and sufficient reason for welcoming the finance committee with a smile and sending it away with a generous check.

MIDDLEMEN AND THE H. C. OF L.

A COMMISSION which has been studying the high cost of living problem in New York city for two years reports that the only way to reduce expenses to the householder is to enable the small retail dealer to get his supplies quickly and cheaply. Therefore it recommends that the City of New York establish in each borough of the city a terminal market, the effect of which would be to reduce the profits of the middlemen. [illegible], has studied the problem in Chicago. Its conclusion [illegible] only the wholesaler and jobber, [illegible] profits. Of [illegible] seasonable fruits and vegetables, [illegible] profits were frequently found to exceed 300 per cent.

This question has been pretty thoroughly studied for the last ten years, or since the cost of living began to increase abnormally. So many factors enter into it that generalizations are unsafe; nevertheless, a few definite conclusions have been reached, one of the most certain of which is that the middleman adds very greatly and unnecessarily to the cost of living. It is equally certain that, in most lines of business, he cannot be dispensed with at least not unless those businesses are completely reorganized but there is no particular reason why his numbers and his profits should not be materially reduced.

An interesting and important effort in this direction is made in the recent order of the Postmaster-General relating to the shipment of farm produce by parcel post. Under the plan adopted, an enterprising farmer who lives within fifty or seventy-five miles of a city large enough to afford a market ought to be able to build up a profitable business with private customers. True, some preparation would be required, and it would have to be made systematically and thoroughly. He would have to visit the market, select his list of customers and establish personal relations with them; then he would have to make every effort to insure the prompt delivery of his goods in satisfactory condition.

As the case stands now, eggs, butter, vegetables and other country produce, sometimes cost the consumer in the city three or four times as much as the farmer receives for them. The principal reason is that they pass through the hands of three or four middlemen, each of whom must make a profit. With a rational development of the parcel post, it ought to be practicable to increase the farmers' profits and reduce the cost to the consumer, and at the same time insure the delivery of the goods in better condition than is possible with present methods.

THE GLOCKNER BENEFIT

NO CITY in the West has better reason to be proud of its hospitals than Colorado Springs. The climatic advantages of this city in the treatment of disease have for years attracted here large numbers of patients, whose presence demands the best facilities. The result has been the establishment of several of the largest and best equipped hospitals in the West. Next Friday and Saturday a dance carnival is to be given at the Burns Theater for the benefit of the Glockner sanatorium. Similar attractions in the past have been well patronized, not only because of the worthiness of the cause, but of the excellence of the performance, and from present indications this one will be no less deserving of support.

ROCKEFELLER AND THE C. F. & I.

To the Editor of The Gazette.

An unbearable state of affairs! What has Mr Rockefeller done against the general public in Colorado to merit the abuse he is receiving from the press of Colorado? He came to the rescue of the C. F. & I. company when it was on the verge of bankruptcy. He brought his millions and put this company on its feet. He has never made an investment that paid poorer, and has never been abused in this manner before.

Let us exercise common sense and, in place of abusing those who invest their money and use their brains to develop our state and its resources, at least protect their property rights and treat them with the respect they deserve. And then we will grow to our natural size and I hope we will not be obstructed by agitation and too much politics.

Though Mr Rockefeller is the richest man in the world without any question whatever he has made his billion dollars by the grandest organized method of business that was ever conceived by the human mind through the grandest system of organization known to the world of business and he has given to the world under a grand system like a god of power. Such a man deserves the respect of the world.

FROM OTHER PENS

OUR WAR IN COLORADO

From Collier's Weekly.

The trouble in Mexico comes from the failure of our methods of conducting relations between nations. If war is waked, it will be done (on our side) according to the laws of war. The trouble in Colorado comes from the absolute failure of government there. That war—for it is war—has been conducted according to the practices of savagery. The alleged representatives of law and order have willfully destroyed property, have killed unarmed persons—including women and children—and have turned machine guns on whole families. This is anarchy, and every one of us is vitally interested in the establishment of something like justice and government a long the autocrats and incendiaries, capitalistic or trades-union, who now ravage Colorado. The primary responsibility rests upon the mine owners, resident or absentee, including the much-abused Rockefeller interests. Paraguay and Uruguay

BY [illegible]

Author of "[illegible]"

Paraguay and Uruguay are usually mentioned together like Tweedledum and Tweedledee. They are two South American countries which lie between Brazil and Argentina (this being their chief mission. For if they did not lie between Brazil and Argentina these two large countries would soon be jostling each other with battleships and other well-known and effective josters.

"If the ordinary citizen were to demand the privilege of voting against the particular president who is running either country."

Paraguay is as large as [illegible] and has about as many people. They are [illegible] Indians, diluted with a little foreign blood and varnished over with enough civilization to make them wear cotton shirts and trousers in summer. If winter, they do not need them. Uruguay is as large as Nebraska and [illegible] almost a million people, chiefly creoles of Spanish descent. It is more prosperous than Paraguay and the use of schools and soap are much more [illegible] understood.

Paraguay and Uruguay are republics, modeled after the ordinary American stock company in which the president runs things to suit himself. They were inoculated with it about a hundred years ago, but it never took. If the ordinary citizen were to demand the privilege of voting against the particular president who is running either country, he would not be shot at sunrise because that would be too long to wait. Presidents of both countries have been short-lived, as a rule, however, and urging them on to a better land has been a favorite diversion.

Both countries consist of broad plains, which grow cattle and horses in great abundance. Oranges are used for cattle food, thus showing the great need of an orange trust. The climate is so good that talking about the weather is an unknown art. Ocean steamers ramble up and down the Paraguay and Parana rivers, but an American in either country is not half as common a sight as a warthog on a city street.

Paraguay and Uruguay get along no better together than the above mentioned Tweedledum and Tweedledee. For many years they quarreled continually. In 1876 Uruguay, Argentina and Brazil all jumped upon Paraguay together. At the end of the war Paraguay had decreased in population from 1,400,000 to a little over 200,000. Thus Paraguay can boast of having suffered the bloodiest war in history. When it was over there was only one man left to every four women, and a husband is still a scarce and much longed-for luxury in that country. Owing to the great competition, being a husband is still the chief and most profitable occupation of the Paraguay man, and work and disease are regarded by him with equal horror. For this reason we need not fear Paraguay as a business rival for some centuries to come.

Ice Dissolvers

BY RUTH CAMERON

The ice was dissolved from a stiff and uncomfortable little gathering the other evening when one of those jolly people who always have some ice dissolver about them, asked if we knew what letter could be put before e-n-y to make a word. She pronounced it like "any," and of course we all started going through the alphabet in our minds, fitting each letter on, and discarding each in turn.

Naturally the last particle of ice dissolved when, after we had all given it up, she asked us what was the matter with d-eny.

Of course we had passed that over because in our minds we had been pronouncing it as one syllable instead of two and hadn't recognized the familiar little word in that guise.

Now parlor tricks like this are not particularly dignified or intellectual, but I think they are worth while keeping in our minds for just such occasions.

This one is a new form of the old "what does so-met-i-mes spell?"

If you try the e-n-y trick be sure to pronounce it. You will be amused and surprised to see how many people will firmly assert that there "ain't no such critter."

Another interesting little brain teaser is to think up what three words in the English language end in "dous." There is no catch in this. Although it seems strange there are only three at least so I've been told on very good authority. They are tremendous, stupendous and hazardous.

What three words can be made out of idolatry using each letter once, three including idolatry I mean. An unkindly person once gave this riddle to a friend to solve, stating that there were four words. The friend found the three and at last accounts was still looking for the fourth. Which reminds me of a story told of a famous humorist and a famous bishop. The humorist when dining at the bishop's home one evening whispered this little rhyme into his ear at dinner.

"When long ago from out the ark
The animals came in pairs,
Which animal was it that listened
For the footsteps on the stairs?"

Some weeks later the bishop and the humorist met again and the bishop said "Will you tell me the answer to your conundrum. Which animal was it that listened for the footstep on the stairs? I've racked my brain and I can't think of any plausible answer."

"Answer?" said the humorist, "why there wasn't any. That rhyme just popped into my head so I repeated it to you."

You have probably heard the old story of the man who, when taking a guest through his family picture gallery, pointed to one picture and said, "Brothers and sisters have I none, but that man's father is my father's son." But there are enough people who haven't heard that yet to make the hunt for the relationship a good ice breaker.

As a rule, these little parlor tricks are not particularly dignified nor intellectual, but they do [illegible] very handy now and then.

As one editor puts it, "He (the editor of a paper) has limitless chances to make an ass of himself every day, and there is no limit over his errors." Is it to be expected that any man will invariably be right, 3,000 times out of 3,111, day in and day out, month after month, year after year? Have a heart, then.

But this is only a beginning. To stop law breaking by force will do for the time being; to stop it permanently in such areas, the conditions leading to it must be corrected. And this is by far the biggest contract.—Colorado City Iris.

The most encouraging feature in the situation in Colorado today is the almost unanimous recognition of the fact that fundamental conditions must be improved.

If peace is restored in the coal fields, it is every good citizen's duty to do his utmost in an endeavor to heal the wounds caused by the trouble, to soften and remove the bitterness engendered, to rebuild Colorado's good name and to restore Colorado's good will in the country at large. It is every loyal citizen's work and work hard with those ends in view.—Fort Collins Courier.

TROUBLES OF CHILDHOOD

There are many aches and pains of childhood which a mother tries to relieve until a doctor's services can be secured, or which seem too trivial for a doctor's advice. The following suggestions are for cases of that sort. Whenever a child shows symptoms a mother does not understand, the wise thing to do is to call the doctor. Many long serious illnesses can be prevented if a physician is called promptly. Especially is this true of diphtheria and sore throat.

EARACHE—Never put laudanum or oil in the ear. Dry heat will generally relieve the pain at least temporarily. A bag filled with salt and heated and bound over the ear, or the tip of the finger of an old glove filled with hot salt placed in the ear is a good method. The head can rest on a hot water bag. An older child will complain of pain in the ear, but a young baby's earache may be told when the child is restless and fretful during the day and wakeful at night and screams when the ear is touched. The neglected earaches of childhood are responsible for most of the deafness of middle life. The child should be taken to a throat specialist, as the cause is generally found there.

HEAD LICE Saturate the head thoroughly with kerosene oil and sweet oil, equal parts, and rub thoroughly into the hair and scalp. Tie up in a towel for 10 to 12 hours. After removing the towel wash the head with warm water and baking soda (one teaspoonful to two quarts) and Castile soap. Rinse thoroughly. Be careful to keep the child away from flame of any kind. Or use tincture of larkspur instead of the oil mixture. Directions for use are the same. The use of one of these methods once a week will cure and prevent "nits."

HIVES—Hives are generally caused by indiscretion in diet. Strawberries, shell fish, etc., cause hives in some people. A saline laxative should be given, such as Epsom salts, sodium phosphate. The itching can be relieved by bathing with a strong solution of bicarbonate of soda. Gauze saturated with the solution and laid on the affected surface relieves a severe rash.

WARTS—Grease the surrounding surface or put a cloth over it with a hole large enough for the wart to protrude. Touch the wart with a silver nitrate stick or a match covered with absorbent cotton and dipped in acetic acid.

TOOTHACHE—If there is a cavity, a small piece of cotton soaked in oil of cloves, chloroform, oil of peppermint, may be inserted into the tooth. If not, rub cayenne pepper on the gum, or a tiny strip of mustard plaster. Hot water held in the mouth sometimes relieves the pain. The child should be taken to a dentist as soon as possible to save future trouble.

COLD OR FEVER SORES—These are generally the result of digestive disturbance. The sore should be bathed frequently with a boracic acid solution and then dusted with a powder (equal parts of boracic acid and zinc oxide). Spirits of camphor, applied several times a day, is drying and healing. The child should not be allowed to pick these sores and muslin mittens may have to be worn to prevent him.

CONSULT A SURGEON.

D. O. H. writes: "On taking a physical examination recently, I was informed that I had a 'slight curvature of the spine,' this being quite noticeable just above the small of the back. I am quite positive that this has developed within the last seven or eight years, and would like to know if it has or is likely to have any ill effects, and if it can be corrected? I am now 23 years of age. Are cases of this kind common?"

REPLY

A lateral curvature of the spine may be caused by habitually standing on one foot. It is important that you consult a surgeon at once.

BOOKS ON NERVE CONTROL.

H. N. J. writes: "Please tell me where I can get a book on how to control the nerves. I am very nervous and know I am a neurotic and am bound to overcome this condition."

REPLY.

Ask your bookseller to get you "Control of Nerves," by Courtney, "The Human Machine," by Bennett, or "Calm Yourself," by Walton. You may be able to get them at the public library.

SEE BABY SPECIALIST.

C. E. S. writes: "Our baby boy, 19 months old, is becoming bowlegged. He was delicate during the first year, but since then has gained in flesh rapidly and now weighs 26 pounds. We think the bowleggedness is caused by his gaining weight faster than his legs developed and gained strength. What would you advise?"

REPLY.

The bowing of the bones of the legs show they are not quite as well nourished as they should be. There is some fault in the child's diet or digestion. You should consult a baby specialist.

In the meantime do not let the baby stand too much upon his feet. Such conditions can be corrected if taken in time; otherwise, the bones become permanently deformed.

GET RID OF INDIGESTION.

A. C. R. writes: "I am a man in the 40s. I have a pain which starts in the right side of my neck, low under the ear, and extends down the shoulder through all my arm. Also my nails are extremely brittle. I have had indigestion for quite a while. Would indigestion cause the condition described?"

REPLY.

Yes: indigestion might cause all the trouble of which you speak.

Get rid of your indigestion and then you will be sure.

Reduce your diet and live more in the open air.

SAFE TO MARRY.

F. N. writes: "Would it be safe for a woman, 23 years of age, who is apparently in good health, except that she does not menstruate only every two and sometimes three months, to marry?"

REPLY.

Yes. Menstruation, as the word indicates, usually occurs every 28 days or once every lunar month.

There are many women who enjoy perfect health who do not menstruate so often. Some have intervals of several months and remain in normal health.

FAMOUS "HOLY BASIS" BROKEN

London letter to the New York Times.

The Rome correspondent of the London Daily News says that the "holy basin" kept in the cathedral in Genoa, which is considered the oldest and most historically important relic in the world, has been accidentally broken.

The basin, which is an octagonal vase cut out of a precious stone akin to the emerald, is supposed to be the famous holy grail, which was venerated by the Knights Templar. It was brought to Genoa in 1101 by William Embriaco among the spoils of the conquest of Caesarea, and since that time has been held in the highest veneration.

The details of the accident are withheld, but it is known that the vase was broken in fragments beyond the possibility of repair.

'TRADE BIG SIX? PIPE DREAM!' RUMOR PUTS MATTY WITH CARDS'

ST. LOUIS, May 4.—Christy Mathewson, famous Big Six member of the New York Giants, will succeed Miller Huggins as manager of the Cardinals about June 15, according to information received today by the St. Louis Times from a person close to Huggins, who refused to permit the use of his name.

The reported trade for Mathewson will send Lee Magee and Ivey Wingo, the two Cardinals who made the journey around the world with McGraw's troupe, to the Giants.

Inability of the little manager to handle the big fellows, constant quarreling in the camp and the poor start this spring are the cause of the sensational switch.

NEW YORK, May 4.—"There is about as much truth in the statement that Christy Mathewson will manage the St. Louis Cardinals as there would be in a report that King George would take charge of the team," said Secretary Foster of the Giants today when asked regarding the report from St. Louis that Big Six would succeed Miller Huggins some time in June.

"There's nothing to it. Some one has been hitting the pipe again," said Foster.

ALONG THE SPORTSMAN'S BEAT

By GEORGE E. PHAIR.

THAT'S A CINCH.

"The team is hitting much too hard."
Is Charley Weeghman's cry.
"We must enlarge our baseball yard
And build the fences high."

And, from these same remarks, 'twould seem
He does not own the South Side team.

IN A WAY, Charley Comiskey has it on Charley Weeghman. He never will have to kick because his team is hitting too much.

IN FACT, Mr. Weeghman seems to think the Feds are a lot of glorified bounders.

MR. COFFEY, who busted his mitts on Mr. Flynn's dome, is not a scientist, but he could write a dissertation on the specific density of ivory.

UNDER THE present arrangement in Toledo, all the profits of boxing shows will go to charity. Und the same arrangement, all the boxers will be objects of charity.

EVAN ENOUGH there is no more money in promoting fights, there is no law to prevent a promoter from quitting the game and earning an honest living.

NOT SO AS YOU CAN NOTICE IT.

"There is no money in the game," the fight promoter spoke.
And yet you hardly ever see a fight promoter broke.

ABE ATTELL could give Kilbane a regular fight if he could come back, but we have a hunch that his present comeback is for publicity only.

SPEAKING OF comebacks, there is Cleveland. But it is hard to tell whether the Naps came back or the Sox went back.

REPORTS FROM Cleveland indicate that the Sox have stopped counting their world's series dividends until further notice

THE BOX (OFFICE) SCORE.

I met a baseball magnate and I asked about the game.
"What was the score?" I asked him, and a thrill went through his frame.
A smile of peace and happiness was in his eager eye.
"Attendance, twenty thousand," was the magnate's glad reply.

NEW YORK, May 4. Manager Charley Herzog of Cincinnati today was suspended for three days for his run-in with Umpire Quigley at Pittsburg on Saturday. He, it is said, objected too strenuously to a decision by Quigley at second base in the first inning

Northwestern Baseball Stars Posed as Juniors; Now Faculty Is Wise

CHICAGO, May 4.—Northwestern university athletic authorities have started a quiet investigation in the cases of Pitcher Ray M. Kisner and Outfielder A. G. Schmidt, two freshmen who posed as junior dental students. Because of the uncertainty regarding the other members of the baseball team, the game with Purdue at Lafayette today was canceled, as was the game with Indiana at Bloomington yesterday.

Several other dental students, also on the team, are charged with having guilty knowledge that Kisner and Schmidt were freshmen, but failed to report that fact to Coach Grady or Director Omer.

It is expected that the matter will be passed upon finally early this week, so that practice can be resumed for the Wisconsin game at Madison on Friday and for the Minnesota clash at Minneapolis on Saturday.

DICKSON WOULD NUMBER PLAYERS TO HELP FANS

Would Print Numbers in Programs and Aid Public in Deciding Identity of Men on Diamond

George M. Dickson has a baseball scheme that is being seriously considered by several managers. Dickson believes that the public would enjoy seeing the games and the various players' parts played in the game if a system of numbering every player was used. He suggests that every player have a number that is given to him at the start of the season.

For example if in the entire league there are 160 different players, every player could have his own number 1 to 160. Opposite the names of the players in the score program would be printed the same number that the player on the diamond wears on his arm.

The advantages of this scheme Dickson thinks are many. He said a fan often reads of a certain famous player being brought or traded from another team. The fans, knowing this player's number, would easily and instantly spot him the minute he came upon the diamond. Dickson also says that often the program says that Brown, Smith, Jones, White and Doe are the pitchers.

Who Is the Pitcher?

There are a lot of fans, according to Dickson, who can't tell which one is really pitching, but by the number system everybody would know without delay and annoyance. Dickson also says that, according to the baseball managers, it is the star player who is the drawing card. Dickson believes that if the number system were used the spectators would know who was on the bench as well as on the field and thus know whether any stars were not in the game and exactly at what time such stars might be pressed into service.

"I believe that ball players, the same as motor cars in a race, should have their numbers," says Dickson. "Take, for example, our own National car No. 8, that won the 500-mile race. It is a very simple matter to keep track of the cars and their positions, how they drop out of the race by their numbers, and even the unitiated enjoys the race because of the simplified manner of getting next through the numbers."

Another California White Hope Bites the Dust of the Ring

NEW YORK, May 4.—Jack Davies, California's latest aspirant for heavyweight honors, was knocked out by Al Reich of this city, former national amateur heavyweight champion, in the first round of a scheduled 10-round match tonight. Davies went down three times before the knockout. A left jolt and a right uppercut ended the bout

BOYS IN A KAFIR CONTEST

From the Kansas Industrialist

The boys of 11 counties in the southwest corner of Kansas are to have a Kafir growing contest this year—a contest that will bring substantial prizes and plenty of honor to the winners. The contest is being organized by L. H. Gould, a graduate of the Kansas Agricultural college and district demonstration agent for southwestern Kansas. In a recent two-day motorcycle trip over his district, Mr. Gould talked about this contest at 20 rural schools. More than 200 boys signed up for the work, and a great many more will enroll within the next few weeks.

Preliminary contests will be held in each of the counties. The winners in these county contests will be sent to Manhattan next winter, for farmers' week, to enter their Kafir in the state contest. Any boy may enter the state contest but the winners in these counties will have their expenses paid. In Kearny county the first five, and in Stevens county the first four boys will be sent. The other nine counties are planning to pay the expenses of the boy who takes a first in the preliminary.

After the county contests, the winners from the 11 counties will take their Kafir to Dodge City and enter it in a district contest. The winner here will have his expenses paid for a 10-weeks' course at the Kansas Agricultural college next winter.

Each boy will grow an acre of Kafir. He will be graded 30 per cent on yield, 30 per cent on net proceeds, 20 per cent on the exhibition of grain and 20 per cent on an article telling how to grow an acre of Kafir

MAGNATES PLAN TO DELAY OPENING OF THE SEASON UNTIL MAY 1 BECAUSE OF RAINS

Poor Attendance on Cold Days This Season Would Extend Year Until October 20

By FRANK G. MENKE.

NEW YORK, May 4. It's quite likely that the regular baseball season will open around about May 1 next year and in all future years. And it's also quite likely that hereafter the organised major league magnates will stop the little practice of trying to garner extra shekels by staging exhibition games in their home towns before the regular season opens.

The poor attendance at most of the opening games this year, and the lukewarm interest that was shown in baseball up to the first of May finally has convinced the magnates that although the fans love the national game, they love their health just a little bit more and refuse to be present in large numbers at games that are played during the raw, chilly days of April

For many years the fans have advocated a later opening. They have argued that if the league opened around about May 1 a 154-game schedule still would be possible by reason of shifting the closing date from around October 6 to October 21 or so. But the moguls, with a proud and haughty air, inquired "who's running this here pastime anyway?" and went right ahead and opened the season at a time that suited them—which was around about April 14.

Fans Begin to Balk.

The fans stood for it until this year. Then they balked. They decided that they could see just as good a ball game in May or June as they would see on the opening day, or any day during April, and not run such a chance of contracting pneumonia and a few other ailments one gets when one sits out in the open for a couple of hours and tries to keep warm on hot dogs and peanuts

The magnates now seem to see the error of their ways, and it is said they have tentatively decided to open the season hereafter around about May 1, when it is almost a certaint that the weather will be balmy

The magnates have learned another lesson, too. That is with regard to exhibition games. In the last two or three years these money-mad persons figured that it would be a nice little lucre-gathering stunt to stage a few exhibition combats in their home towns before the regular season opened. But they were poor mathmeticians. In the first place the fans didn't turn out in any quantities at these games, and in the second place, when the regular season did open it was found that the exhibition games had taken away much of the fans' baseball appetite. As a result the opening day crowds have been disappointingly small

April Showers Disappointing.

Postponing the opening of the season until May 1 and having it conclude about October 20 no doubt would bring bigger returns for the moguls. The weather up to the latter part of October usually is mild and pleasant. But during April practically every club in the league suffers from three to seven postponements on account of rain, wet grounds or cold weather.

Later in the season these games are played out in double headers. A double program usually draws an extra crowd, but it rarely brings enough extra people to make up for those who would have attended the regular game had it not been postponed.

Postpone City League Plans Until Friday; No Grounds Yet Secured

Owing to the fact that grounds have not yet been secured with any degree of certainty, the organization of a city baseball league, planned for last night, has been postponed until Friday night. Managers of all six teams were present and the matter was thoroughly discussed and met with favor but until grounds can be arranged nothing can be decided.

Long Island Society Folk to Be Hauled in Court for Betting

NEW YORK, May 4.—Scores of men and women prominent in society and especially in the affairs of the Rockaway hunting club, may be forced to appear in court at Cedarhurst, L. I., on Thursday, and explain all alleged betting transactions of Saturday at the racing meet of the club course

The sheriff's constables allege that in the pockets of Frank M. Flood and Francis C. Fox, who were arrested at the track as bookmakers were found slips indicating wagers on various races, and on each slip were the initials or the name of a man or woman. Flood and Fox were released in the custody of their counsel

Subpoenas for the persons whose names appeared on the slips are being prepared according to Louis M. Reisig, justice of the peace

Tigers to Speed Up the Schedule to Complete It; Good Workout Last Night

From now on until the days when collegians leave the campus and go back to the farm for some real work, the Tigers will have to play about two games a week to complete the schedule. The locals were out for practice last night for the first time in over a week and showed considerable form despite the long layoff.

The game with the Aggies Saturday should prove interesting, because the Farmers have sworn revenge for the bad walloping given them several weeks ago. However, they have encountered similar weather to that endured here

IRIS STENCIL DESIGN

This design stenciled on gray linen, using soft lavender, china blue or a delicate yellow for the flowers, and gray green for the leaves, would be very cool and restful in effect, for the Summer living room. The small sketches show some of the different ways in which the stencil may be applied.

The simple motif may also be used on a chair covering or table runner.

Cotton voile to match the linen in color with a border of the Iris makes charming portieres, being less transparent than scrim. They have more body and yet are light and cool looking.

Tube oil paints are used with just enough turpentine or gasoline to make the paint flow easily. These colors do not fade, launder well and are therefore very durable.

If a more elaborate effect is desired, the design may be outlined with rope silk or couching cord; either outlining the separate parts of the design or leaving a narrow space of linen between the design and outline, work around the motif as a whole, black silk gives the best effect in this work.

Other materials which may be used with good results are unbleached muslin, denim, burlap, arras cloth and pongee.

Patchwork Quilts for Summer Cottage

There is nothing like the old-fashioned patchwork quilt for use with a four-post bed. Even though the bed be a copy only of the antique, the quilt needs to be of the same era, especially if the room is furnished with rag rugs. Now and then at fairs and among private customers one finds a woman who knows how to make rag carpets and mats and there is nothing more appropriate for the bedroom floors of the Summer cottage.

Patchwork has periodical revivals, but even then it is never entirely out of fashion. Many women to-day hoard scraps of silk for this purpose as their mothers, grandmothers and great-grandmothers did before them.

It is possible to keep pieces of certain colors for certain quilts, thus using blue and white for one room or pink and white for another. Appliques cut from flowered cretonnes are charming on dimity bedspreads. In the time of our grandmothers the flowers and leaves had to be laboriously cut out of colored patches, then be fitted together with infinitesimal stitches. The writer possesses a wonderful bedspread with red poppies and green leaves and stems, worked into a border all the way round the spread.

Squares of patchwork were the first sewing put into the hands of tiny maidens in those days and served as a daily "stint" for years to come.

STITCHERY FOR CHILDREN

The quaint embroidery patterns of cunning little animals, birds or figures depicting Mother Goose rhymes, offer possibilities for the mother to teach the first steps in embroidery as all these designs are done in a simple outlining or cross stitching. These patterns will hold the interest of a child and if used to decorate some of her own belongings, will not only keep the little fingers busy, but will implant a love of needlecraft as well.

Aprons, a scarf for the dressing table, covers for school books, bibs and rompers for the small sister or brother, can all be ornamented in simple but fascinating patterns. Bean bags with an animal figure in cross stitch on each side will add to the fun of the work.

Mercerized cottons, which will stand any amount of washing, can now be secured and the embroidery should be done in the mercerized colors.

LINEN EMBROIDERED SETS

Among the hand-embroidered accessories being worked by clever needlewomen are sets for Summer frocks, including collar, cuffs and sash or girdle of colored linen worked in Oriental embroidery. One notable design worked on reseda green linen had an eight-inch sash long enough to go once around the waist and knot the second time on one side of the front, with end reaching below the knees. These ends were scalloped and embroidered in dull blues, rose and yellow to correspond with the turnover collar and elbow cuffs. The whole was intended for wear with a white linen morning dress or perhaps a [illegible]

Gifts the Invalid Would Appreciate

A THERMOS bottle would bring a lot of comfort, and some hot water bags have such beautiful covers that they are pleasing as well as useful. An Indian blanket would keep off many a draft and make a varying temperature unnoticed, and a night bottle with a glass tipped over it and a spoonful of cordial in the stopper would be handy in case of a chill.

One of the new cache night gowns of chiffon would be very convenient to slip into to take a meal or when an unexpected guest arrives. A canary would chirrup many a weary hour away and a food-warming plate such as are used for babies, would keep many a cup of bouillon warm while the tray is being carried.

An attractive rose bowl or long-stemmed vase would lend its charm to the invalid's bouquets and an electric flash light, within reach at night, becomes almost indispensable.

A pine or rose petal pillow would emit refreshing fragrance for many a year to come, and the sick person appreciates many changes of cheery bath robes, negligees and dainty fancy slippers.

A tea wagon wheeled up beside the bed would vary the meal service pleasingly, and a sleepy hollow chair or a reclining chair with a foot rest would be the nicest kind of a place in which to convalesce.

A prettily lined and ribbon-bedecked box filled with the patient's favored toilet preparations is practical, dainty and very acceptable, and a pretty lacy boudoir cap would be appreciated.

MANY SOUTHERN WOMEN PROMINENT WORKERS

So many Southern women have become famous in literary work that it seems to have become an accepted fact among the uninitiated that this is the special "bent of the highly educated women from the sunny South who have "come North to seek fame and fortune." It is true that the list of women writers who claim Southern birthplaces is remarkably long, but there are also many talented Southern women who are rising to prominence in other lines.

Take, for instance, the two Deaver sisters from Lexington, Va. Miss Lillian Deaver practically engineered the work of the Woman's Fusion party in the recent election in New York, and it was she who, as secretary, accompanied Mrs. Borden Harriman to Washington when the latter was called before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Her sister, Miss Mary Deaver, has been acting as welfare secretary to the employes of the Hotel Astor. She has introduced all sorts of help under the backing of the management, such as an emergency hospital, separate bedrooms, where it can be arranged, and has even persuaded the New York Board of Education to establish a night school in the hotel for teaching the foreign women and girls employed there.

PECULIAR MARRIAGE LAWS

Did you know that in Massachusetts a man may marry his deceased wife's sister, but cannot espouse her grandmother?

An epileptic woman is allowed to marry in Utah after she reaches the age of forty-five.

Whites and negroes or mulattoes are not allowed to intermarry in Maryland, but they can marry in Pennsylvania and return to their native State without being considered lawbreakers.

A man may marry his deceased wife's sister in West Virginia, but that State will not permit him to marry his stepdaughter.

SOMETHING NEW IN LUNCHEON SETS

Very practical, and dainty withal, are the newest designs in luncheon sets. Of heavy linen or crash in putty or natural shades, the edges of the various pieces are finished with small scallops in Chinese blue, Nile green, old rose or Van Dyck brown—the four shades that best accord with the usual dining-room decorations and with almost any of the Oriental table potteries. These sets consist of a center mat of twenty-four inch circumference and a dozen each of plate and tumbler mats, while in extra pieces in matching colors and designs, come long scarfs for the sideboard and serving table. The value of the luncheon set is obvious. It is an immense saving of laundry, since when an accident happens to one mat another may be substituted and the table napery kept looking fresh for several days in succession.

HOW LONG IS A YARD? A FOOT?

How rarely do women stop to consider the origin of the yard measure which is used so frequently in the sewing room! It is a fact, however, that the yard as standardized to-day only became authorized in 1826, when John Bird calculated it by means of the seconds pendulum. A yard in the reign of Henry I of England measured the length from his Majesty's nose to the end of his thumb. Henry VI was responsible for the earliest yard stick now in existence, but the earliest foot rule on record was made in Greece, from the length of the foot of Hercules.

Edward II of England decreed an inch to equal the length of three barley corns, and while barley corns are not all the same size, this measurement is still approximately used for determining the size of shoes, each succeeding number being a third of an inch (equal to one barley corn) larger than the preceding shoe.

ELEANOR NORRIS' ANSWERS

Stenciled Curtains.

D.—The material suitable for stenciled curtains are scrim, Calcutta cloth (which is a fine cheesecloth), crossbarred muslin, dotted Swiss and lawn.

Any color scheme could be carried out in a conventional design, so the colors used would depend entirely on the decorations of the room. Where brown is the prevailing tone, the tip of the petal of the flower should be in a clear yellow, shading into a golden brown at the base, with the leaves in a soft gray green. These colors would be especially good on a cream scrim or Calcutta cloth.

If more delicate tones are desired, blue, softened to a gray for the petals with gray green for the leaves or jade with gray green leaves would be suitable. These colors would be very dainty for a bedroom, using crossbarred muslin or dotted Swiss.

New Sachets.

Mrs. G. G.—Sachets are something that never come amiss. If made of a generous size and filled with lavender or spiced rose leaves, they find a very welcome place among the household linens. If small and filled with one's favorite sachet, they are just the thing to tuck among one's personal belongings or pin into gowns.

The newest sachets for the linen shelf are made of Cubist silk in a straight or long bag tied with a bright ribbon, and enclosed in a striped box with a Cubist picture pasted on the lid. Of course the box is square.

For personal use, the newest sachets are made of small squares of ribbon each of a different color, packed in a round box, covered with silk or paper designed from old-time patterns.

Lamp Shade for Girl's Room.

A. B. H.:—The lamps having a wood or glass standard seem to be particularly fitting for a young girl's room. The shade which usually has a white ground can either be stenciled or embroidered to match any color scheme. The shade of a white lamp seen recently by me was of white pongee, which was embroidered at regular intervals a cross-stitched rose in two shades of pink, with a few green leaves. This was then covered with a coarse white net and a narrow, pink braid finished the edge of the top and bottom. The effect was very charming and could easily be copied.

A blue motif could be carried out on the foundation silk if blue is the dominant note in the room.

Scarfs for the bedroom furniture, cross stitched, with the same motif as that used to decorate the lamp shade, can be readily made.

How to Join Lace.

Mrs. T. T.—You can join the lace so that the joining will not be visible. Place one end over the other so that the mesh and pattern will exactly correspond and then with a fine sewing thread overhand together, sewing over the threads of the mesh and around the pattern in a diagonal line.

After the lace is joined, the rough edges (one on the upper and the other on the underside), are cut close to the diagonal stitching. After the lace is pressed, this joining cannot be detected.

Corners of lace can be mitered in the same way and the yoke or collar made to look as though it had been woven in one piece. Fold the lace to form the corner, then cut the lace through the center almost to the edge, and lap one side over the other, then join by overhanding through the mesh and pattern.

Gold and silver lace for yokes can be joined in this way, using a gold or silver thread to overcast the lace together.

To Embroider Dragon.

Mrs. W. N.—The dragon motif would in itself be sufficient decoration for the reading lamp mat. The gold thread should be used to accentuate and bring out the other colors of the embroidery.

Work the scales in long and short stitch in two shades of Oriental blue. Outline the body with the darker shade of blue and the few short lines that give the contour in the lighter tone of blue. After the scales and body are embroidered, put a few running stitches of gold thread through the scales, so as to give the glint that will make the embroidery more effective.

The claws and crest should be outlined with the gold thread, while the tongue should be in pink in half Kensington stitch, that is long and short stitch.

Embroider the pupil of the eye in white and the eyeball in gold.

The dragon is a very appropriate decoration to be used in the den or library as it the Japanese symbol of ambition and power.

To Transfer Design.

Mrs. W. K. J.—Perforated patterns are not sold. The designs are all drawn so that they can be transferred directly from the paper, and in this way are given to our readers.

To transfer, lay impression paper right side down on the material, and on it place the pattern. Fasten the pattern very securely either with thumb tacks, pins or weights, so that there will be no danger of its slipping out of place and then trace the entire with a sharp, hard pencil, keeping the line firm and even. The design will then be transferred, ready to be embroidered.

A sheet of impression paper can be purchased for ten cents in any art or stationery store, and one sheet will transfer a great number of patterns as it can be used again and again until worn out.

French Summer Frocks Show a Marked Simplicity

COPYRIGHT 1904 BY CLARA E SIMCOX 333 FIFTH AVENUE NEW YORK

THE old question of the survival of the fittest is raised when one attempts to sound the most popular note in this season's fashion vagaries. All the authorities on modistic have excelled themselves in rts to display a huge collec- odels. Paris sent over some styles, but these have only e purpose of quickly enforc- arms of certain lines and ef- w have been accepted wholly were presented. The four French frocks I am illustrat- week meet in every way the nts of the American woman. you will observe that the draped in a most artistic a simplicity is emphasized in ls in a marked degree, a that in no way detracts from resque. In Fig. 1 a new fect is shown in the skirt. rial is arranged in soft folds t hip, then swathed around and draped to convey the ts being tucked into the belt o hang in careless folds, but this mode of draping is ed in the most skillful man- little frock is in dull gold Chine, faced with black chif- he embroidery is in dull gold l ivery on a cream ground. f elegance is shown in the girdle, which is of quaint embroidery, studded with view of the popularity of d decorative touches an an- kle, a medallion, etc.—the d be kept wide open for such things strings of quaint artistic beads, old bits of enamel work and other trifles, and treasured stores ransacked, moreover, for old ribbons. If dimmed by age all the better, for we are living in eclectic times, and side by side with the most vivid colors that have been countenanced for decades are the dullest, dreariest nuances, many, however, very attractive when judiciously applied. But we are just in touch with the moment when the woman who dresses with personal distinction deals with generalities rather than detail. She will grasp the general evolution of dress and without any slavish imitation select with a broad mind the styles best suited to her own peculiar idiosyncrasies.

In Fig. 2 a charming suggestion is shown for a summer frock. The straight skirt that hangs in soft folds is in white figured crepe de Chine. The silk is patterned with a little spray in tender willow green. The corsage and tunic, which is all in one, is of plain white silk. Around the neck and sleeves is a double frill in white and pale green tulle. The hat worn with this little frock is in soft white hemp trimmed with wide silk ribbon and lined with green.

In Fig. 3 I am illustrating a gown similar to the one worn by the dainty actress, Mlle. Jeanne Provost. Mlle. Provost, who was the first French woman to wear the trouser skirt and who has now created a sensation by appearing in public in her bare feet, shod in pretty sandals, wears a gown designed on the same lines. It is in heavy white silk crepe trimmed with embroidery, gold and black, on a green ground. The fish-wife drapery is bunched up at the back to form the fashionable bustle. Carrying out the vogue for tassels, as a decorating touch on a gown, black silk tassels, with green and gold metal caps adorn the corsage. A further charming feature is the quaint upstanding frill of net encircling the throat.

Chartreuse colored crepe de Chine is the medium employed in Fig. 4. Unfortunately in the sketch one cannot see the exquisite color scheme in this creation. The embroidery is in faded tones of mauve, pink and gold on a cream colored ground. These colors are also blended on the four long tassels on the skirt. A new effect is shown in the pleated tunic. The back is shaped the same as the front, going up in the center, but the sides are very long, and each point is weighted down with a heavy tassel. The goal attained in these French frocks is a clever simplicity. Those who visited Paris after the influx of foreign buyers had departed were astonished to find that many eccentric, vaunted styles had vanished into space and, perchance, were being sadly plagiarized in suburban and provincial places of other countries. The artiste dressmaker calls upon her own good taste and skill in modifying the styles which she deems too outre. In these illustrations are shown the styles of summer gowns that the ultra fashionable Parisian will wear at Trouville, Deauville, Dinard and other celebrated watering-places.

The Blouse and Its Varieties.

The quaintest little blouses are now being worn. The reign of the separate waist is undoubtedly reopened. With a charming skirt of queer impressionist mauve silk, that is being made for the trousseau of a June bride, will be worn a fragile little blouse of tucked ivory mousseline de soie, the sleeve set in at a deep armhole, with a certain amount of fullness that seems to be eventually arranged to swirl around the arm. Beyond a deep swathed belt of the figured silk turned over at its upper edge with lime colored chiffon, there is no attempt to connect the blouse with the skirt. It is absolutely a thing apart. The neck is scooped out in a deep round and finished with a wide upstanding frill of mousseline, which seems made to caress the throat. The more completely one goes into the subject of these fragile blouses the more exhaustively novel do they appear. And I am particularly persuaded of their success in connection with the beautiful spring silks embroidered or woven with little boquets of flowers, the skirts of which so justify a caught up drapery or even an discreet slit filled in with a faked petticoat of chiffon and lace. The little vests to the blouse are fashioned oftentimes from one of the many delicate French laces there has been a growing penchant for a long narrow square in front, in lieu of the now somewhat wearisome V shaped point. The extreme length exacts that it shall be partially filled in, and this is variously contrived with fichu folds of tulle, a tiny plissé frill of net, or a straight band of antique embroidery or metal lace. The delicate Spring chiffon blouses seem but frothy trifles that look as though the first zephyr they would meet would blow the whole affair to bits, yet they run into extremely high figures. The finest of hand embroidery laces and tulle are used for these confections.

It is amazing how strong the vogue for chiffon, net and tulle has been, and still is. Couturières for several seasons have been fascinated by the decorative possibilities of mulline. The manufacturers of this ephemerality must indeed be shaking hands with themselves, for tulle requires replenishing quite frequently, and it is also impossible to get much of an effect on a dress without using a considerable quantity, nor has the silk Alencon net, which is so much used this season for fragile little blouses, very great staying powers. Very pretty models are made up in two shades of ninon and in two contrasting colors, and some of the most successful are in black and white, a magpie effect. The striking effect of a black and white combination is too greatly appreciated by the smart woman to permit her to relinquish it. A blouse of white ninon with a quaint black design has a double upstanding frill of black and white mousseline at the waist, coming above a deep swathed belt of black satin lined with white, which terminates in a huge Japanese bow at the back. This blouse is to be worn with a white crepe de Chine skirt. The collar, vest and undersleeves are of fine piece lace.

Soft finished organdy is greatly in demand for neckwear, those styles which approximate the Japanese and Medici collars. No matter what Paris may launch later, these collars are the forms which are universally accepted in this country, not only because they are becoming, but because they are so well suited to hot weather wear. Many of the crepe shirt waists have a high turnover collar made of a double thickness of organdy or a roll over flat collar in organdy with a Periwinkle jabot of filmy lace. The Periwinkle jabot is the quaint name given to the cascades of lace which fall on either side of the collar. A curious new style of sleeve on a blouse looks like a wrap of net bordered with taffeta. Other sleeves show lampshade ruffles, finished with a narrow band of black velvet. In some of the newest models a return to the over blouse is shown, or, again, the sleeveless waistcoat with an embroidered net or printed chiffon underblouse. A charming style on this order has been made to wear with a gown of pale yellow. The blouse was of white chiffon, with a delicate flower pattern in pale mauve. The yellow silk was used as a waistcoat, with a gold and mauve strap or sash across the front from one shoulder down to the waist, where there was a waist belt of mauve and yellow, blended with a golden cord ornament and falling ends.

So long as we wear tailor-mades we must have our comfortable, boneless shirt waists. The shirt waist has a distinct character of its own, provided it is kept essentially a tailored waist and not in any detail be permitted to travel off into the realms of the blouse proper. It should be a plain affair of silk or crepe de Chine, crepon or heavy linen with severe lines and a lack of ornamentation. First Consul collars in organdy is one of the new features on these crepe models. Others have a double hoop collar that leaves the waist well open at the neck.

The Revival of the Medici Collar.

The little upstanding collar which we term the "Medici" seems to have taken on a new lease of life. It has re-instated itself both on our indoor garments and our outdoor. For indoor wear you may make them of any sort of lace provided that the mesh is heavy enough to support a milliner's wire under its outer edge, or may evolve them from chiffon, tulle or gauze ribbon provided that the material is closely pleated or fluted and made to stand far out from the throat at the back and sides. In front the Medici tapers into rather sharp points that join several inches below the throat, or that run to either side of the V or square cut neck. For evening wear the little upright collar is often outlined with diamante work and encrusted with jewels, the sparkle of which is both effective and becoming. The Medici appears upon every sort of garment, coats, wraps, robes d'interior, dinner and tea gowns, blouses and talking suits. It is a decidedly attractive finish on a tailor-made when the collar tapers off to form a quaint little inner vest for the coat, which may have gauntlets of the same contrasting material.

Summer Fabrics.

Although in this country crepe in its various weaves will be more popular than voile, the leading French modistes have made some most successful models in voiles. White cotton crepe is a highly admirable fabric, the same is quite true of cotton voile. Both are well suited to warm weather wear in this country, and there seems no good reason why one should be discarded and the other selected. There are some strange things done in the way of fashion; here is certainly a case in point. I myself show a predilection for the crepe weaves. Diaphanous styles have led us into all of the most filmy fabrics for both day and evening dresses. At the same time Fashion has decreed for certain parts of the summer garb, such as our wraps and tailored suits, fabrics that look thicker than they really are. So that there is a curious extreme in materials—some parts of the outfit will be of a vaporous lightness and others seemingly too heavy for even the chill of a summer evening at the shore or mountains. Little butterfly mantelettes of taffeta and smart silk coatees and boleros will be worn over the transparent dresses. The little mantelette is made on quaint lines in any of the new novelty silks and taffetas. It is an amusing copy of those worn at the time of the Empress Eugenie. Then there is the bolero of the Directoire, made of plain silk, and the loose dolmanlike affair made of chiffon taffeta and trimmed with rouches and flounces. All these are the wraps that will be worn over the light summer gowns. Embroidered batiste, net, pount d'esprit, Irish and French linens, ratines, dimities, golf cord, crepes and novelty fabrics will all play their part in the summer wash dresses. Just at the moment of writing the Pompeiian striped bengalines and taffetas are rarely seen but in the ultra fashionable models. These materials in the dull rich shadings which are really characteristic of the ancient fabrics have not as yet come into popular usage but undoubtedly they will be very prominent later. Pompeiian red, dull green, dark navy blue and kindred shades appear in the striped silk materials which are invariably used for the jumper, collar and cuffs on the bodice and for the draping on the skirt.

WHAT THE PRESS AGENTS SAY

"ASHES OF THE PAST"

Doc Watkins, a sleek gambler and his wife, Connie are suspected of fleecing a newcomer in camp. They are escorted to the edge of the town by a committee of citizens and ordered not to come back. Connie is very much broken up. She becomes weary after a while, and cannot go farther. Watkins threatens to leave her. She pleads with him in vain, he jeers, repudiates her, and starts away. She steals up behind him and is about to knife him when both are startled by a noise. Connie conceals her knife.

A young husband and wife with their baby, have come overland from the east in a covered wagon to seek their fortune. When near their goal their tired horses fall, the wagon overturns and rolls down the steep embankment. The father and mother are killed. The baby in its wad of bed clothes is caught behind a rock, and is not hurt. It is the baby crying that Connie and Doc hear. They find it but cannot see the debris of the wagon of the dead bodies or the parents at the bottom of the gulch. Connie and Watkins rescue the baby and Connie becomes very attached to it. Watkins is then told he can go if he likes and he does. While he is gone a couple of Mexicans see Connie and the baby alone and fight for her one being killed. The other attacks her, but Watkins in the meantimes has repented and the love for his wife and dawning affection for the child calls him back and he arrives at the camp just in time to rescue his wife from the Mexican. The two are reunited and decide to give up their gambling life for the sake of the child.

[illegible] of Religion of Athens in Fourth Century After [illegible] by [illegible]

Prof. Clifford H. Moore of Harvard gave the third lecture in the course on Greek religion, at Perkins hall, last night. The next lecture by Dr. Moore will be given Thursday evening on "Religion in Athens of the Fourth Century. Plato and Aristotle." The fourth lecture in the course on "Latin Poets" will come on Friday morning, May 8, at 9:40 o'clock, and the subject will be "Catullus."

Last night Dr. Moore presented the effect upon Athens of the defeat of the Persians in 480 B. C.

"A new national spirit was awakened in Greece and Athens found herself the supreme state," he said. "In the brilliant half-century known as 'the Periclean age,' the gods who had given victory were not forgotten. But the expanding empire, with its growing power and wealth, came to include even religious interests, and religion became a state concern, belief in the gods was 'absorbed' in patriotism. The supreme expression of this is found in Pericles' funeral oration at the close of the first year of the Peloponnesian war, for there is no word about the gods, no expression of solace in the hope of immortality, but in the service of the state Pericles saw all incentive and every reward.

"Still it must not be thought that the practice of religion by individuals ceased. Nor did higher concepts fail to develop in men's minds and to find expression in the work of poets, especially in Pindar and the tragic poets, Aeschylus and Sophocles. The gods of Pindar, though anthropomorphic, are by no means the limited creatures of the Homeric pantheon. Sin consists in passing the bounds appointed between man and God or man and his fellow-man, and is punished in the realm beyond the grave. Reincarnation may lead the soul ultimately to final happiness. The doctrines of the two tragic poets are similar. Aeschylus emphasizes the primitive aspect of divine justice, and pursues a guilty family from generation to generation. Sophocles lays especial stress on purity of heart which is the substance of piety toward the gods. Thus, while the mysteries continued to provide emotional satisfaction for religious longings, the poets were teaching purer and nobler ideas as to justice, morality and religion.

"Toward the close of the Fifth century new forces appeared which were to transform religious thought. The Peloponnesian war brought about the humiliation of Athens and led men to reconsider the basis of their beliefs. Euripides, the dramatic poet, was chief spokesman of this time. Although not a systematic theologian, he repeatedly attacks the current polytheism; to him God and sin are mutually exclusive terms. His criticisms of the current theology prepared the way for the construction of a new religious system."

EVACUATION OF SALTILLO SAID TO BE PREMATURE

CHIHUAHUA, Mex., May 1, via El Paso, May 4.—Reports of the evacuation of Saltillo are premature, it is officially stated here. The rebels expect an important battle before the city is taken and for this purpose forces are now in motion from Monterey and Torreon.

A review of the troops headed by Carranza and Villa, was held today and tonight. The two leaders members of the cabinet, the military staffs and a number of lesser officials participated in a love feast at the gubernatorial palace. As the troops were passing the foreign club General Carranza espied an American newspaper man among the spectators. He halted the procession, while he turned aside to shake the foreigner's hand. The act was plainly intended to make evident to Mexican onlookers that the official attitude toward Americans is friendly. In fact every Mexican understands that antiforeign agitation or demonstration means death to the offender. When Carranza leaves here it is understood that the Constitutionalist capital moves with him first to Torreon, and then, with little delay to Monterey.

From the latter city he will direct the campaigns against Tampico, Saltillo and after that, against San Luis Potosi, Zacatecas and Aguas Calientes.

The rebel-American phase of the occupation of Vera Cruz, which for a time after the issuance of Carranza's note to Secretary Bryan looked grave, is considered closed. General Carranza assumes, and is believed to have official reason for so doing that the Americans will leave Mexican soil immediately upon the complete triumph of the revolution.

ANTI-AMERICAN SENTIMENT IS SHOWN IN BRUSSELS

BRUSSELS, Belgium, May 4.—Under the auspices of the local Hispano-American committee, there was a demonstration in this city today in favor of Mexico and against the United States. Several hundred persons, chiefly students from the University of Brussels, Liege and Louvain, took part. The demonstrators marched with flags to the Mexican legation, where speeches were made on the subject of "American Aggressions in Mexico."

Carlos Pereyra, the Mexican minister appeared and said in reply that the community of sentiments of the Latin-American countries, in the face of foreign aggression, meant the integrity of these states.

"A collective moral force is stronger than armies," he declared.

it has now been six months since I took any medicine at all. I hope my little note will assist you in helping other women. I now feel perfectly well and in the best of health."—Mrs. AUGUST W. KONDNER, 1632 Hollins Street, Baltimore, Md.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, [illegible], irregularities, etc.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

GEN. CHASE WILL ASK FOR GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL

DENVER, May 4.—Announcement was made today that General John Chase shortly would ask the governor for authority to convene a general court-martial to try cases in line with the findings of the military commission which investigated the Ludlow battle and fire.

When informed of the intention of General Chase, the governor stated that he would comply with the request.

It seemed probable, however, that the military cases, as well as those pending in the civil courts for law violation incident to the strike, would not be brought to trial until the public mind relaxed from the intense excitement of the last two weeks.

Caillaux Fights Bloodless Duel With D'Aillieres

PARIS, May 4.—A bloodless duel with pistols was fought today by Joseph Caillaux, former minister of finance, and Fernand D'Aillieres, his opponent at the recent election for the chamber of deputies. The cause was the publication of some alleged insulting words by M. D'Aillieres regarding the killing of Gaston Calmette by M. Caillaux's wife.

The encounter occurred in the Parc des Princes motordrome and the distance between the duelists was 25 paces. General Dalstein was director of the combat.

M. D'Aillieres was the first to shoot. Then M. Caillaux, who had not yet raised his arm, discharged his pistol in the air and the affair was over.

On leaving the park M. Caillaux was hooted.

THE CHICKS CAN BE SAVED

Right Methods Do Prevent Heavy Losses in Young Poultry

From the New York Sun.

Loss of chicks during the brooding time is far greater than it should be. The reasons are clear. In the first place there is carelessness. Chicks taken from a warm incubator are placed in cold receptacles, carried a considerable distance to the brooder and dumped upon bare or nearly bare floors.

How long would the most robust human body survive such treatment? How long would any baby survive it?

It is not unusual for a kind of ragtime schedule to be followed in feeding baby chicks. They are fed whenever the spirit happens to move their owner and whatever he happens to have on hand. A goat or a boa constrictor might thrive on such a schedule. Chicks will not. Chicks are thrust into dirty, vermin infested places and forced to drink from moldy germ laden vessels. In the ensuing struggle the chicks are quickly worsted by the combined armies of vermin and germs.

Hobbies are gratified at the expense of these flocks; brooding system having nothing whatever to commend them are tried out. Things good in moderation are carried to deadly extremes. Brooding devices wrong in principle, faulty in construction or nonadaptable are used. Chicks have to crowd at the center for warmth and are trampled to death or smothered; or they are denied the exercise and fresh air they need. Even with a really good brooder and good care and feeding.

Heavy losses during the brooding times are not inevitable. There is no good reason why they should occur. Care in selecting equipment and common sense treatment of the chicks will almost certainly bring to maturity a high percentage of the hatch. Experience has proved this.

There is nothing like the old-fashioned patchwork quilt for use with a four-post bed. Even though the bed be a copy only of the antique, the quilt needs to be of the same era, especially if the room is furnished with rag rugs. Now and then at fairs and among private [illegible] one finds a [illegible] who knows how to make rag carpets and [illegible] and there is nothing more appropriate for the bedroom floors of the Summer cottage.

Patchwork has [illegible] revivals, but even then it is never wholly out of fashion. Many women to-day hoard scraps of silk for this purpose as their mothers, grandmothers and great grandmothers did before them.

It is possible to keep pieces of certain colors for certain quilts, thus using blue and white for one room or pink and white for another. Applique cut from flowered cretonnes are charming on dimity bedspreads. In the time of our grandmothers the flowers and leaves had to be laboriously cut out of colored patches, then be fitted together with infinitesimal stitches. The writer possesses a wonderful bedspread with red poppies and green leaves and stems worked into a border all the way round the spread.

Squares of patchwork were the first sewing put into the hands of tiny maidens in those days and served as a daily "stint" for years to come.

STITCHERY FOR CHILDREN

The quaint embroidery patterns of cunning little animals, birds or figures depicting Mother Goose rhymes, offer possibilities for the mother to teach the first steps in embroidery as all these designs are done in a simple outlining or cross stitching. These patterns will hold the interest of a child and if used to decorate some of her own belongings, will not only keep the little fingers busy, but will implant a love of needlecraft as well.

Aprons, a scarf for the dressing table, covers for school books, bibs and rompers for the small sister or brother, can all be ornamented in simple but fascinating patterns. Bean bags with an animal figure in cross stitch on each side will add to the fun of the work.

Mercerized cottons, which will stand any amount of washing, can now be secured and the embroidery should be done in the mercerized colors.

LINEN EMBROIDERED [illegible] SETS

Among the hand-embroidered accessories being worked by clever needlewomen are sets for Summer frocks, including collar, cuffs and [illegible] or girdle of colored linen worked in Oriental embroidery. MANY SOUTHERN WOMEN PROMINENT WORKERS

So many Southern women have become famous in literary work that it seems to have become an accepted fact among the uninitiated that this is the special "bent" of the highly educated women from the sunny South who have "come North to seek fame and fortune." It is true that the list of women writers who claim Southern birthplaces is remarkably long, but there are also many talented Southern women who are rising to prominence in other lines.

Take, for instance, the two Deaver sisters from Lexington, Va. Miss Lillian Deaver practically engineered the work of the Woman's Fusion party in the recent election in New York, and it was she who, as secretary, accompanied Mrs. Borden Harriman to Washington when the latter was called before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Her sister, Miss Mary Deaver, has been acting as welfare secretary to the employes of the Hotel Astor. She has introduced all sorts of help under the backing of the management, such as an emergency hospital, separate bedrooms, where it can be arranged, and has even persuaded the New York Board of Education to establish a night school in the hotel for teaching the foreign women and girls employed there.

How to [illegible] Lace

Mrs. T. T.:—You can join [illegible] lace so that the joining will not be visible. Place one end over the other so that the mesh and pattern will exactly correspond and then with a fine sewing thread overhand together, sewing over the threads of the mesh and around the pattern in a diagonal line.

After the lace is joined, the rough edges (one on the upper and the other on the underside), are cut close to the diagonal stitching. After the lace is pressed, this joining cannot be detected.

Corners of lace can be mitered in the same way and the yoke or collar made to look as though it had been woven in one piece. Fold the lace to form the corner, then cut the lace through the center almost to the edge, and lay one side over the other, then join by overhanding through the mesh and pattern.

Gold and silver lace for yokes can be joined in this way, using a gold or silver thread to overcast the lace together.

To Embroider Dragon.

Mrs. W. N.:—The dragon motif would in itself be sufficient decoration for the reading lamp mat. The gold thread should be used to accentuate and bring out the other colors of the embroidery.

Work the scales in long and short stitch in two shades of Oriental blue. Outline the body with the darker shade of blue and the few short lines that give the contour in the lighter tone of blue. After the scales and body are embroidered, put a few running stitches of gold thread through the scales, so as to give the glint that will make the embroidery more effective.

The claws and crest should be outlined with the gold thread, while the tongue should be in pink in half Kensington stitch, that is long and short stitch.

Embroider the pupil of the eye white and the eyeball in gold.

The dragon is a very appropriate decoration to be used in the [illegible] or library as it the Japanese symbol of ambition and power.

To Transfer Design.

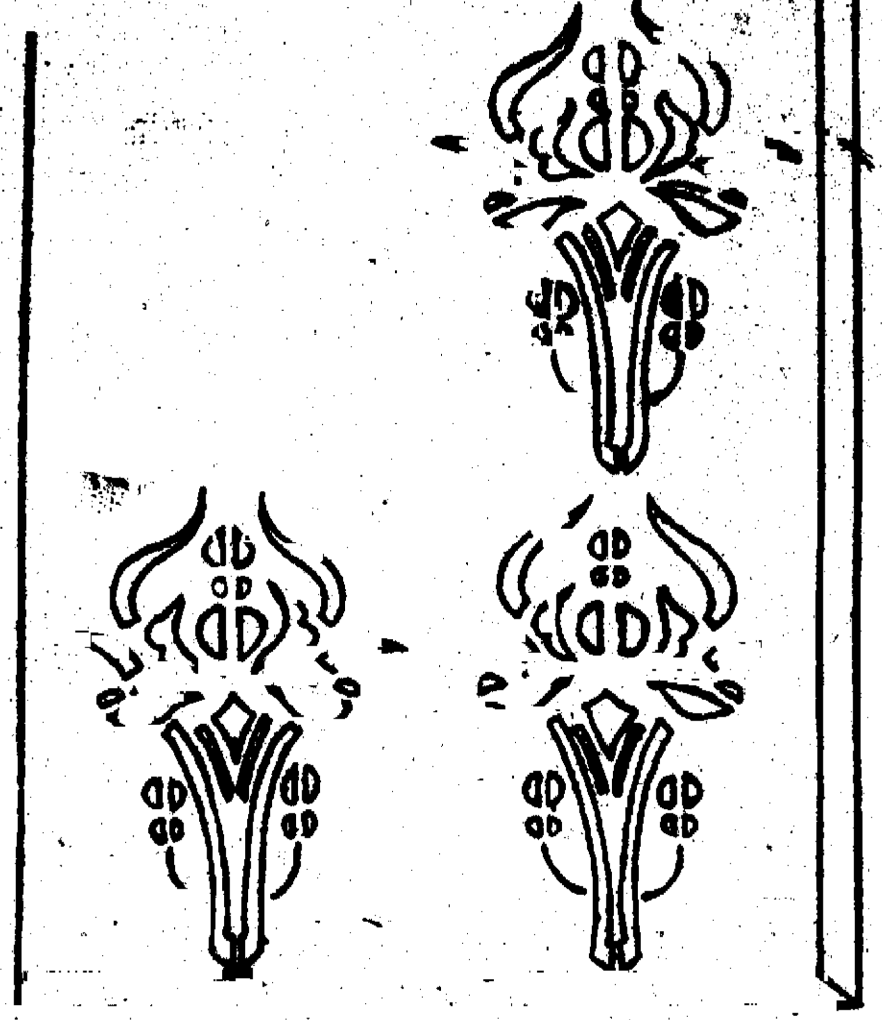

Mrs. W. K. J.:—Perforated patterns are not sold. The designs are all drawn so that they can be transferred directly from the paper, and in this way are given to our readers.

To transfer, lay impression paper right side down on the material, over it place the pattern. Fasten the pattern very securely either with thumb tacks, pins or weights, so that there will be no danger of its slipping out of place and then trace the entire with a sharp, hard pencil, keeping the line firm and even. The design will then be transferred, ready to be embroidered.

A sheet of impression paper can be purchased for ten cents in any art [illegible] [illegible] will [illegible] for a great [illegible] of patterns [illegible] it [illegible] be [illegible] until [illegible]

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®
NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

CHICAGO, May 4.—[illegible] buying here had an important bullish influence today on wheat. In the end, the market was easy but [illegible] to [illegible] net higher. Corn closed ⅜ to [illegible] up, oats off a shade to ⅛ and provisions with a gain of 2½ to 7½.

In the wheat trade it was virtually conceded on both sides that the situation was a case of phenomenal harvest promise in this country for 1914, against fairly bullish conditions throughout the rest of the world.

May wheat bulged so suddenly at one time as to put shorts into a good deal of a flurry. The upturn, however, attracted much hard winter wheat here from the west, purchases to arrive being 450,000 bushels. Tightness in regard to the May delivery was also partly relieved by Chicago sales of 650,000 bushels of contract wheat to go to store.

Delay in Argentine corn shipments, a condition due to heavy rains starting afresh, made the corn market here strong. Argentine damage estimates were raised 10 per cent. It was also pointed out by the bulls that the former big stocks here had been more than cut in half, and were now down to normal. Some of the consequent upturn in prices though disappeared as a result of profit taking in the last hour.

Oats at the outset were firm with other grain, but the good outlook for the growing crop led to realizing sales by holders and brought about a reaction.

Provisions lost much of an early advance. The dullness of the cash trade offset to some extent the effect of grain strength and of the lighter run of hogs west.

[illegible] of it at [illegible]. We stock [illegible], which was in [illegible] all of [illegible] except during yesterday's [illegible] was [illegible] today. The upturn was leisurely, with no attempt at aggressive operations on the buying side; but the strength of the market's position was unmistakable.

Quotations advanced steadily until the leading [illegible] were 1 to 2 points higher, although these gains were cut down by a reaction in the last hour. Extensive covering on the recent rise apparently relieved the pressure against the shorts and today's buying seemed to be principally for the long account.

The best showing of the day was made in the forenoon following the announcement of President Wilson's appointments for the federal reserve board. The street was well pleased with today's announcement.

Railroad stocks were most prominent in the day's rise.

The bond market was irregular. Movements were irregular, aside from Rock Island collaterals, which gained nearly two points. Total sales par value $1,725,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call.

TELEGRAPH POLES OF CONCRETE

From the Engineering Record

The Pennsylvania railroad is using as an experiment, some reenforced concrete telegraph poles which show a satisfactory degree of resisting power during such conditions as prevailed during the blizzards of last February. The new poles stood the test, while wood poles snapped like pipe stems.

It costs approximately $125 to make and set up with proper foundation a single reenforced concrete pole. But that it does not cost a great deal less than that amount to buy and install a wood pole equally strong is a statement that will surprise many persons.

Timber suitable for telegraph poles of first magnitude and suitable strength is growing harder to find, although reforestation now under way will perhaps expand the supply considerably within the next 50 years. Concrete is a commodity available in inexhaustible quantity. It is not cheap, although readers of popular articles recommending it as a substitute for wood often represent it as being cheap. But it is economical, as it is practically everlasting as well as sufficiently strong to stand a strain [illegible] [illegible] wood [illegible] down.

REBELS WILL PUSH FIGHT TO CAPITAL

Carranza Goes South This Week to Direct the Campaign

EL PASO, Tex., May 4.—General Carranza has formally declined the suggestion of the mediators that he cease hostilities against Huerta pending the outcome of the plan of mediation. His note, sent to Washington yesterday was made public here today.

No importance is attached here to the report that the rebels and federals at Tampico are arranging a truce. It is assumed that if true the cessation of hostilities is for the purpose of burying the dead or removing the wounded.

Carranza's Note.

"I again direct myself to you, for the purpose of answering your respectful message relative to the armistice, calling your attention to the fact that in the international conflict the United States was intentionally provoked by Huerta and for the solution of this I [illegible] accepted in principle only the good offices of Brazil, Argentina and Chile and [illegible] is independent of our internal strife for liberty, [illegible] it inconvenient, for the [illegible] cause, that I represent, to suspend hostilities and military movements because said suspension would only accrue to the benefit of Huerta in the civil war now going on in Mexico between the usurper, Huerta, and the Constitutionalist army under my command. The sovereign citizenship [illegible] with all activity to reestablish as soon as possible the [illegible] order which will produce peace.

"By virtue of the above I state to you that I cannot accept the armistice which you propose.

"Consider my acts solely as one who is acting with the determination of doing what he considers best for the interests of his native country."

Goes South This Week.

General Carranza, shortly after his arrival at Torreon next week, expects to visit the city of Durango, in the state of that name, to establish a civil government.

The situation there has caused the supreme chief much anxiety because of the dominance of the Arrieta brothers, Benjamin and Dominguez. These men, having recruited 3,000 or 4,000 men, announced allegiance to Carranza, but it is alleged that they have merely used the Constitutionalist banner as a cloak for looting and outrage.

At the battle of Torreon General Villa assigned them to a position forming a link in his lines around the city. The Arrietas, intent on their looting in Durango, declared that they would fight only in that state. By their nonarrival the federal general, Velasco, had no difficulty in escaping when he concluded to evacuate the city.

Flee Back [illegible].

For their disobedience, General Villa ordered the brothers under arrest, but as the execution of the order would have required an army, it was never made effective. The Arrietas, however, resenting Villa's action, offered their services to Huerta, but experienced a change of heart before the plan was carried out.

They reopened negotiations with Carranza, under the terms of which they agreed to join in the general rebel movement and to protect any civil government which Carranza might install in the state. It is under the terms of this agreement that General Carranza will make his trip.

Former PRIDE Of Washington. Her Present DISGRACE

Thirty Thousand People Live on Alleys Which Bisect Fine Old Residence Estates--Congressman Borland Would Have Government Build Homes for Poor of Capital.

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM P. BORLAND, center, at top. Other views are in the slum districts.

William P. Borland, Representative to Congress, is urging the passage of a measure to put the United States in the building and loan business.

Borland, in common with other lawmakers of the country, is a resident of the District of Columbia for a large portion of each year and while there he has come to several startling conclusions. One of these is that the City of Washington, the capital of the greatest Republic on earth, is the champion hardluck town anywhere. While it is the town where the laws are made the people themselves are so shorn of any semblance of self government that they would trade places with Ireland any minute.

Washington has 30,000 people who live on alleys. They are contaminated with disease and are a menace to the nation because from Washington people go to all parts of the country carrying the disease with them.

Borland believes that if the United States went into the loan and building business these poor alley dwellers of Washington could build homes for themselves and pay it off on the installment plan. The United States Government furnishes half of the money for running Washington and the rest of the revenue is derived from taxation.

Present conditions in Washington are due to the ambitions of Major l'Enfant, who laid out the city in immense residential blocks. Borland does not blame l'Enfant. In his day Washington was a little bit of a town and the United States was a little bit of a country. There were few people here and there were no such things as slums. Washington was to be a beautiful city. It was to be a second Paris. It was to be filled with noble homes, the residences of the chief citizens of the republic.

Then Washington grew. When it grew real estate went up in price. Men didn't want so much property because taxes were high. Besides it was good property to sell. They sold small parcels of it and then a problem arose. What were the people to do with the long skinny lots with narrow fronts.

A few real estate men in some of the more congested parts of the city hit on the plan of bisecting the lots and putting houses on the alleys. From the alley house came the alley tenement. In these narrow confines thousands of children see the light of day for the first time.

Way up the avenue Washington is a city of beauty. It has mansions and magnificent buildings. Back in the slum district it is one of the most squalid cities in Christendom. To improve these conditions Borland presented a bill to provide for the construction of sanitary dwellings at low rental for unskilled wage earners in the District of Columbia. The bill provides for bonds to be issued by the District of Columbia for $10,000,000. Each year $1,000,000 is to be used in building homes for the people.

GROWING CITY ALWAYS HAS HOUSING TROUBLES.

Speaking in Congress recently in favor of the passage of the bill Borland said:

"As soon as a city begins to grow and land values become an important element some of the population who are well to do, and frequently those who are in very moderate circumstances, move gradually out from the downtown sections to the suburbs, where they can find the surroundings and conveniences of modern civilization and refinement. That generally leaves a large section of the city, wherein land values have grown very high, devoted primarily to the use of business. Those business uses include, of course, the office buildings, the retail section, and the financial district, but they also include the hotels, many apartment houses, and a large number of buildings designed for human abodes for a more or less transient element of the population; not always a dependent element, frequently a prosperous element, but still a more or less transient element of the population.

"All through the business sections of every great city there is another residential section. It is the residential section of the poor, that section which with a sweeping injustice we sometimes denominate "the slums." It is the section where the irregularly employed poor must live; where people must live who must be close to where there is a chance for a job; where people must live who can not afford to pay car fare to and from their work, whose employment is at irregular hours, perhaps, and on irregular days; where people must live who are temporarily out of employment and who have not the necessary credit and the necessary facilities to rent for a fixed term one of the better homes farther out.

"Now, that class is sweepingly denominated the slums. I am optimist enough to believe that the so-called "slums" shelter a large percentage of worthy people. While that class of property shelters the criminal and the semicriminal element of the city, it also unfortunately shelters a great percentage of the industrious poor. I undertake to say that two-thirds of the dwellers in the so-called slums do not belong to the criminal nor to the semicriminal class. They are the class of toilers who are the by-product of the wealth and progress of the city itself.

"We take ample care of the well to do; we beautify the city for the rich, we tempt them to move out in the beautiful park districts of the city, and yet we take no care of a part of the problem that is just as necessary to the vital commercial life of the city, the industrious, floating, irregularly employed poor. We allow them to drift into the slum sections of the city.

"The city of Washington was laid out originally on very generous lines. The streets are broad; great avenues and squares; large blocks of ground for residential purposes. Evidently the men who laid out the city of Washington believed that it would always have a semirural aspect, that the dwellings would be surrounded by large, spacious grounds and lawns, and that there would be a semirural life, and so they laid it out on that generous plan for those purposes. The blocks are large, and they include the regular alley which used to be and still is a feature of the regular American city life. I undertake to say that the alley is an economic anachronism. There may have been a time when the residents needed an alley, when every man had a back garden of limitless expanse, usually flanked at the rear end by barns and outbuildings which sheltered the animals—horses, cows, and other domestic animals. In those days, probably an alley was a necessity to a resident district. Today the alley is useless in a resident district, and it is only necessary in a city as a back passage to a warehouse, a store, or a hotel.

COMING OF ALLEY DAYS.

"The situation here in the city of Washington in regard to alleys is this. These blocks, as I said, were of very generous size. I understand that after the Civil War, when Washington began to fill up rapidly with people they began to build on these broad, handsome streets, and the frontage of the street being the most valuable part of the property it was built up on as narrow a line as possible. Some of the houses are very narrow, occupying the full frontage allotted to them, and they run up three or four stories or more in height.

"That left a back part of very generous proportion, the interior of these great squares, practically useless until some genius discovered that the ground inside of the block, being very accessible to business, to residences, and to hotels, had a commercial value, had a rental value, and then they began to construct these alley tenements.

"I have a little map, or a little sketch, here, in which you may be interested, showing these black spots, or squares, which contain inhabited alleys in the District of Columbia, and it shows there is hardly a section of this city, no matter how crowded it may be with a self-respecting, clean, refined population, but what there is directly adjacent to them these alley tenements.

"The death rate in the city of Washington, according to the census of 1910, was the third highest in the United States. It is 19.8 per thousand.

"When I came to find out where this death rate was highest, as shown by the figures, I found that the death rate in the alleys is 160 per cent of the death rate on the resident streets. The death rate in the alleys runs over thirty per 1,000; so that it is the infection of the alleys that brings up the death rate of the District of Columbia. It not only brings up the death rate of the alley population, but it brings up the death rate of the population who live in houses on streets as well for we find that the death rate of the streets, not including the alley tenements, is higher than the death rate of the average municipality of the size of Washington in this country. It is two or three points higher than the death rate of the great cities of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

"I could tell you many stories of the actual conditions in these alley tenements. Some of them are in a deplorable and revolting condition. They are the natural incubators of crime and disease. They are so because of the fact that they are hidden away from the inspector of the police and the health officer. The owners of these alley tenements have been placing a tremendous burden upon the rest of the municipality in compelling it to try to police and keep sanitary those alley tenements.

"Many of these alley tenements are built in the form of a letter "H," so that until you have gone seventy-five or eighty feet through a ten-foot passageway between high walls or high board fences, when you turn suddenly into the inhabited portions of the alley, it is impossible to see the ramifications spread out before you.

ALLEY DWELLERS ENTER SOCIAL LEADERS' HOMES.

"I have said that these alley dwellers are largely of the servant class, who go to the homes of their employers in the morning and return to these tenements in the evening, every day.

"There are plenty of drawing rooms in this city that have never been open to members of Congress. I undertake to say there are plenty of drawing rooms in Washington that I have never been in and never will be in. But I undertake to say that there is not a drawing room or a home in Washington which is not open to alley contagion, and which alley contagion does not enter. It not only enters those homes which in many respects have the power to protect themselves, but it enters the homes of your constituents and mine, who come here to perform service for the great General Government of the United States. There are 40,000 people gathered here on the pay roll of Uncle Sam, coming from every section of the country with their families to make their homes here.

"In many cases, living on humble salaries, they must find homes on streets adjacent to these alley tenements. Their back doors, their back yards, their back gates must open upon these noisome, crime-breeding, moral cesspools of the alleys. They find it impossible to keep their children out of the alleys, even when they are at home, in their own neighborhoods, and certainly impossible when they are on their way to and from school. Why, I have one picture here which shows a schoolhouse at the very corner of one of these alleys, where a great many of these arrests have been made. Here is a picture of the east half of Fenton Court. There is another half of Fenton Court which I could not get into this picture. The names are not all filled in on Fenton Court, because we did not have time. These is a public school right at that alley, and that alley has become one of the playgrounds of the children of that neighborhood. In 1912 there were eighty-three arrests in that half of Fenton Court, eighty-three arrests in the children's playground of the Blake School. There is not a family in Washington that can escape the alley contagion.

"These alleys, then, must be eliminated. They ought to be eliminated and turned into these minor streets, and the rehousing of these people ought to go on just as fast as possible. Why, it does not make any difference what the cost is, of course. We know where to put them. Every man here has had more or less experience as to where they ought to fall and could fall with no great hardship. The greatest cost we are paying is in the cost of human lives, the cost of wrecked hopes, the cost of blighted careers, the cost of deformed, imbecile, invalid, and crippled children, the cost of ignorance and vice and crime that permeates the whole community, and that cost is heavier than the cost of dollars and cents. There is no cost so heavy as the cost of vice, as the cost of ill health, as the cost of ignorance and of crime. It is the heaviest cost that any community in the world bears. The greatest asset that a nation or a city has is its men. The greatest crop that the nation raises is a crop of sound, healthy children, and if it does not raise that crop it does not make any difference how many splendid palaces or Greek temples adorn its capital. It must raise a crop of men, of honest, self-respecting toilers, of men of intelligence, of men of moral backbone, of men of physical courage and nerve to solve the great problems, men to grow under an advancing civilization step by step, men to bless the community in which they live."

Women Can't Teach in Vienna.

Women have been shut out, temporarily at least, from any new places in the teaching staffs of the Vienna public schools. The cry of unjust discrimination has been raised, and the whole question of women's employment in Austria is under review.

The exclusion of women is taken by the Vienna City Council on the ground that "so few vacancies exist that no further applications of women will be received until further notice." Nothing is said, however, about men teachers.

Since the population is increasing steadily and new schools are constantly required, the action is regarded as extraordinary. Some trace it to the agitation among women teachers for pay on equal terms with men.

Women teachers are now paid on a far lower scale than their male colleagues, although they perform the same work and have been required to go through exactly the same course of preparation and take the same examination as the men. For some time they have been voicing their complaints at this treatment, alleging that nearly all the best positions in the schools are reserved for men.

The Christian Socialist majority in the City Council, however, argues that, as women are not heads of families with children dependent upon them for support, they have no claim to be paid as high salaries as men. The women deny that this has anything to do with the case, and say that, even if it had, they, too, are often called upon to support aged parents or younger brothers and sisters.

Throughout Austria the employment of women in professional and commercial occupations is increasing steadily. Young women are generally willing to work for lower wages and are constantly crowding out the men. Many ticket clerks in the railway stations are women, and government offices and banks are constantly adding women to their staff.

TRAINS DOGS AS GOAT HERDS

A Mexican [illegible] Brings Puppies Up to Be Better Than Men

From the Youth's Companion.

Just before the Rio Grande crosses the boundary line between Colorado and New Mexico, it enters a box canon whose walls in some places are a thousand feet high and almost perpendicular. For a number of miles, before it enters the canon, the river flows through a rough country that is worthless for farming purposes. The pasturage even is so scanty that it is suitable only for sheep and goats. The few settlers are all Mexicans.

Wolves and coyotes haunt the hills and ravines along the river bank, and the herds must be watched day and night. Near the entrance to the canon lives a Mexican rancher who owns several large herds of goats. He has found out how to herd his flocks without hired help. He sends the herd out on the range under the care of dogs, each of which has been raised among goats, and has, in fact, had a goat foster mother. This man describes his method of training his dog herders as follows:

"My dogs are a cross between the shepherd and Scotch collie. As soon as the pups are born, I take those that I want to make into herders away from the mother dog and put them to nurse a nanny goat, one puppy to a goat. The goat [illegible] agrees with them perfectly. They are never permitted to run with other dogs, and know no companions except goats, and by the time they are grown they have a thorough knowledge of their adopted relatives. You might almost say that they were half goat.

"After the puppies get their teeth, I have to watch them carefully, for now and then one of them will get the habit of biting the goats. That trait renders the dog absolutely useless for my purpose, and I immediately kill him. But [illegible] very rare. The dog raised in this way soon becomes a natural guardian of goats, and at a year or so can be put in charge of a herd. The herds go to the hills in early spring and remain there till the first snow comes. The dog stays with his herd day and night. He takes his charges to the best grass in the morning and rounds them up at night on some good bed ground, just as a human herder would do. And all the time he keeps a sharp lookout for prowling wolves or coyotes. I almost never lose any goats to these animals.

"I send food to the dogs once a day. The only time a dog will leave his herd and come in to the ranch is when I fail to take him something to eat. And then he is impatient to get back to his work, and as soon as he has got his meal hurries away.

"I find the dog herders more satisfactory than men. They understand their business thoroughly and they are always faithful. Moreover, I do not have to pay them wages."

COINCIDENTAL MISHAPS

From The Strand.

Now and then one comes across [illegible] of what might be termed hereditary accidents. A groom in the employ of a gentleman living at Dyserth, North Wales, was kicked to death by a horse belonging to his employer, who at once got rid of the brute. He then took the son of the dead man into his service in a similar capacity as his father. Almost exactly a year later the son was kicked and killed by a foal of the [illegible] which had killed his father.

At the French railway station of La Ricamarie, a young man named [illegible] Fontvielle was employed as shunter. One day in September [illegible] he was crossing the rails just in front of a couple of carriages pushed by a locomotive when he was [illegible] suddenly. Before anything [illegible] to help him, the carriage [illegible] the locomotive had passed over [illegible], killing him instantly. On examination, it was found that the heel of his boot had caught between two rails at the points. At the inquiry a witness stated that the young man's father had met [illegible] an exactly similar manner on the self-same spot.

On December 30 of the same year an American named [illegible] Turner was killed at Port Morris, N. J., in the same fashion as was Fontvielle, namely, by getting his heel caught in the "frog" of a switch. Ten years earlier his father had come to his end by the same means at the same place, and the identical fate befell his grandfather, who was trapped in the same switch in the year [illegible].

In August, 1906, two friends, William Connolly and Patrick Cantwell, were drowned by the upsetting of a "float" on the Grand canal near Tullamore, in Kings county. These two men had been born on the same day, 36 years earlier, they were baptized in the same water, and they were buried together after a joint funeral in the church yard at Rahan.

TRAINS DOGS AS GOAT HERDS

A Mexican Rancher Brings Puppies Up to Be Better Than Men

From the Youth's Companion.

Just before the Rio Grande crosses the boundary line between Colorado and New Mexico, it enters a box canon whose walls in some places are a thousand feet high and almost perpendicular. For a number of miles, before it enters the canon, the river flows through a rough country that is worthless for farming purposes. The pasturage even is so scanty that it is suitable only for sheep and goats. The few settlers are all Mexicans

Wolves and coyotes haunt the hills and ravines along the river bank, and the herds must be watched day and night. Near the entrance to the canon lives a Mexican rancher who owns several large herds of goats. He has found out how to herd his flocks without hired help. He sends the herd out on the range under the care of dogs, each of which has been raised among goats, and has in fact had a goat foster mother. This man describes his method of training his dog herders as follows.

"My dogs are a cross between the shepherd and Scotch collie As soon as the pups are born, I take those that I want to make into herders away from the mother dog and put them to nurse a nanny goat, one puppy to a goat The goat milk agrees with them perfectly. They are never permitted to run with other dogs, and know no companions except goats, and by the time they are grown they have a thorough knowledge of their adopted relatives. You might almost say that they were half goat.

"After the puppies get their teeth, I have to watch them carefully, for now and then one of them will get the habit of biting the goats That trait renders the dog absolutely useless for my purposes, and I immediately kill him But biters are very rare. The dog raised in this way soon becomes a natural guardian of goats, and at a year or so can be put in charge of a herd The herds go to the hills in early spring and remain there till the first snow comes The dog stays with his herd day and night, drives his charges to the best grass in the morning and rounds them up at night on some good bed ground, just as a human herder would do And all the time he keeps a sharp lookout for prowling wolves or coyotes. I almost never lose any goats to these animals.

"I carry food to the dogs once a day. The only time a dog will leave his herd and come in to the ranch is when I fail to take him something to eat. And then he is impatient to get back to his work, and as soon as he has got his meal hurries away

"I find the dog herders more satisfactory than men. They understand their business thoroughly and they are always faithful Moreover, I do not have to pay them wages."

GAZETTE 50 CENTS A MONTH

COINCIDENTAL MISHAPS

From The Strand

Now and then one comes across cases of what might be termed hereditary accidents A groom in the employ of a gentleman living at Dyserth, North Wales, was kicked to death by a mare belonging to his employer, who at once got rid of the brute He then took the son of the dead man into his service in a similar capacity as his father Almost exactly a year later the son was kicked and killed by a foal of the mare which had killed his father.

At the French railway station of La Ricamarie, a young man named Benoid Fontvielle was employed as shunter. One day in September, 1903, he was crossing the rails just in front of a couple of carriages pushed by a locomotive when he was seen to stop suddenly. Before anything could be done to help him, the carriages and the locomotive had passed over him, killing him instantly. On examination, it was found that the heel of his boot had caught between two rails at the points At the inquiry a witness stated that the young man's father had met death an exactly similar manner on the selfsame spot.

On December 20 of the same year an American named Samuel Turner was killed at Port Norris, N. J., in the same fashion as was Fontvielle, namely, by getting his heel caught in the "frog" of a switch. Ten years earlier his father had come to his end by the same means at the same place, and the identical fate befell his grandfather, who was trapped in the same switch in the year 1883

In August 1906, two friends, William Connolly and Patrick Cantwell, were drowned by the upsetting of a 'float' on the Grand canal near Tullamore, in Kings county These two men had been born on the same day, 36 years earlier, they were baptised in the same water, and they were buried together after a joint funeral in the church yard at Rahan

Babes In Baseball

Branch Rickey, Brilliant Young Leader of the St. Louis Browns, Uses Educated Methods to Teach His Diamond Aspirants

BY BILLY MURPHY.

Manager Rickey of the St. Louis American League Baseball Club is the sponsor of "Educated Baseball."

He takes his young diamond aspirants and teaches them to take their first steps.

Rickey is the inventor of the batting cages, an absolutely new departure in baseball. He will have his invention patented.

Down at the St Petersburg, Fla., camp he assembled his athletes in the third floor lecture room of the Fifth avenue hostelry and introduced them to the black board form of instruction.

Rickey drew a diagram of the playing field on the blackboard, then marking off the positions of the various participants would bring up some play.

The athletes would then be asked in turn what they would do if a similar play arose on the field.

Rickey's school is conducted much on the same order of a spelling bee for each athlete is permitted to offer a solution of the problem until one gives the right answer, then he or Manager Rickey will go over the play in detail explaining every move.

DISCUSSING PROBLEMS.

The energetic pilot of the St. Louis Americans opines that a thorough discussion of field problems will enable the athletes to know just what move to make in the event they are confronted by perplexing situations in the future.

Rickey wants intelligent players and is determined to have them, though he is forced to devote considerable time to sharpening their intellects himself.

Rickey, in his methods and manners, is very much like that great baseball strategist, Connie Mack, of the World's Champion Athletics.

Here are just a few of the traits that are identical in the two men:

They score every game their team plays and their score cards virtually record every pitched ball.

They never use profanity on or off the field and are total abstainers from liquor and tobacco.

They hold daily conferences with their players and point out the mistakes made in previous games.

They never chide a young player in angry tones, but quietly correct them when alone.

WITH RICKEY AT CAMP.

A day with Rickey at the St. Petersburg camp brought out many new methods of training baseball babes.

In one day's work, he stationed Catcher Jenkins at second and Catcher Enzeroth at the plate for a trial of their pegging skill. He ordered them to change places every fifteen minutes.

By alternating the catchers from the plate to the keystone sack, their principal target, they are enabled to judge the distance and proper height of a throw to flag a base burglar.

Clarence Walker, a speedy outfielder, has for years puzzled over his failure to steal second successfully, but Walker was shown the cause when Rickey ordered him to steal one afternoon.

Rickey placed caps and gloves over the footprints made by Walker between first and second and then showed the youngster his line of flight.

Walker's course zig-zagged to such an extent that it was not difficult to ascertain that he was negotiating about twenty more feet than the ninety-foot space between the hassocks required.

It did not require a second demonstration to cause Walker to omit the serpentine kinks from his attempts to pilfer.

STYLE IN STICKING.

Rickey is a great believer in style in sticking.

Gus Williams, the St. Louis club's hard hitting outfielder, could not hunt last year, but Rickey has corrected this fault.

There is much in style in hitting.

And he is right.

Take men like Jackson and Cobb.

Joe takes a free, clean swing, loose-jointed and nonchalant. Ty imparts a shorter, sharper punch and is much more alert around the plate.

Jackson and Lajoie are much the same types, more alike than any two batsmen in the game.

"All have varying styles, but all in turn follow the main principle of batting before they pass .300, which is the art of hitting the ball out in front of the plate with the club in front of the hands and arms, where the swing is in the proper plane, and not up or down, for a fly or grounder.

"No ball player in the game uses as perfect a co-ordination of body and arms, as Lajoie. No other batsman brings his wrists into play as does Schulte. No other ball player now in harness typefies so much combined power and ease as Heinie Zimmermen. Heinie uses poor judgment, but for all that he is the incarnation of swat while poised at the plate with the bludgeon in his mitts.

Not even Lajoie has a finer batting eye than Cravath of the Phillies. Cravath hasn't Lajoie's easy swing, but his batting eye is among the best.

There is no particular grace to Frank Baker, but no man carries any more raw, crude power to the plate. He has a good eye and a brace of wrists as thick as an elephant's ankle. These wrists, propelling a heavy bat into any form of speed, are likely to end a ball game at any minute.

But he isn't as likely to hit an effective change of pace as Cobb or Jackson.

Branch Rickey particularly fits his men to meet changes of pace.

He is clever and a hard, aggressive worker.

This young man is the coming baseball manager and the time is not far distant when he will arrive.

Groundkeeper Fails to Fool Joe Birmingham's Pitchers

Every Cleveland pitcher carries his own special brand of dirt in his hip pocket when he works at the Polo Grounds in New York. There is a good reason for it, too. The soil in and around the pitcher's box contains some property or other which makes the cover of the ball slippery the moment it becomes slightly damp. This prevents a pitcher getting a good grip on his sphere. The ball becomes hard to handle even when the hand perspires slightly. Willie Mitchell dug up a pocketful of dirt in front of the Naps' bench and rubbed it on the ball at intervals. Blanding once carried part of Central Park to the Polo Grounds with him and used it against the Yanks. The left-handed pitchers look like contortionists when they reach for the dirt in their hip pockets. The pockets are on the right-hand side, which makes it necessary to do some stretching to get at the soil.

NEMO LEIBOLD PUTS BLINK ON SOUTHPAW JINX

One of the most improved players on the Cleveland team is Harry Leibold, the diminutive centerfielder. In the early part of last season Leibold was seldom seen and never heard. This spring he's the most conspicuous player on the field and is a constant chatterbox.

Leibold's change is due partly to the fact that the strangeness of his big league surroundings has been worn off, but more to the fact that he thinks he is going to hit pretty close to the .300 mark.

"Half Pint" declares he has overcome the advantage the southpaw hurlers once had on him. "When I was going to school and played in amateur games," said Leibold today, "I was never bothered by the left-handers. That's because the southpaws in that class of ball don't have any 'hooks.' But when I jumped to the American Association right from the amateur class I found southpaws who knew how to pitch had my goat.

"I couldn't get to their curve balls and was striking out regularly. Then I tried to switch over and bat right-handed against the left-handers. But I'm naturally left-handed myself—do most everything left-handed except throw that way. And I soon decided if I was to make good I'd better bat left-handed all the time. I've played two seasons, since then, one with the association and one with Cleveland. And I'm gradually getting so I can master the curve balls shot up by the southpaws. This year I'm using Gabby Lelivelt's straddle position at bat and I don't think the southpaws are going to bother me any. That straddle ought to add twenty points to my batting average."

Manager Birmingham looks for Leibold to hit pretty close to the .300 mark this season.

IT IS THE CRABS WHO SUCCEED IN BASEBALL

BY JOHN J. M'GRAW,
Manager of the New York Giants.

The crab is the fellow who gets the best of the breaks, no matter how square the umpire tries to be. He bluffs the heart out of his opponents and gets their goat in the pinches, if they are at all inclined to be sensitive and weak-kneed. Let me tell you that there are a lot of that kind in the business.

The crab will keep his ginger on tap from barrier to tape. He keeps his nerves from jumping the governor belt in the pinches, from the very bluff that he is handing out to the other fellows and his chewing the rag. Crabby players like Evers, Bresnahan, Doolin, Snodgrass and Fred Clarke may create the impression that they possess a very undesirable disposition, but just the same, you'll notice that they are the boys who deliver the goods and get the coin.

ALL OF BIRMY'S HURLERS GO IN SIX-FOOT CLASS

If size counts for anything in baseball, Manager Joe Birmingham of the Cleveland Naps has a bunch of twirlers that should create some comment in the American League. Not one of Manager Joe's youngsters is under 6 feet and many go several inches above that. To see the Naps trotting about in uniform in the open the players look to be of normal size, but when lined up against a tape measure it develops that the entire bunch is eligible in the 72-inch class. The tallest are Dave Gregg, 6 feet 4 inches; Rip Hagerman, 6 feet 2 inches; Steen and Bowman, 6 feet 1 inch.

The Only Tyrus R. Cobb.

Ty Cobb of the Detroit team was born in Royston, Ga., July 18, 1886. He is 5 feet 11½ inches in height and weighs 175 pounds. He throws right and bats left-handed.

Longest Pigulation Games.

American League September 1, 1906; Athletics 4, Boston 1; 24 innings.

National League June 30, 1892; Chicago 7, Cincinnati 7; 20 innings. Chicago 2, Philadelphia 1; August 24, 1905; 20 innings.

Minor and College—July 2, 1905; Stockton 1, Lodi 0; 23 innings. May 11, 1877; Harvard 0, Manchester 0; 24 innings, May 31, 1909; Decatur 2, Bloomington 1; 26 innings.

Independent Teams July 6, 1907; Heintz Victors 2, Columbus Selects 2, 26 innings.

Correct Dope on Wagner.

Hans Wagner, the celebrated member of the Pittsburg team, was born in Carnegie, Pa., on February 24, 1874. He is 5 feet 11 inches in height and weighs 190 pounds. He bats and throws right-handed.

To Compute Average.

Batting—Divide total base hits by total times at bat.

Fielding—Divide number of chances accepted by total chances.

Standing of teams Divide total games won by games played.

It Is Ball Club, Not Owner, Fan Looks at, Says Pres. Comiskey

Charley Comiskey, the lovable owner of the Chicago White Sox, handed out a neat one the other day, when he tersely remarked:

"The public doesn't care a darn about me or any other owner. What they look at is a ball club."

To prove the correctness thereof, how many people would go out more than once and pay admission to see a ball team composed of Navin, Somers, Hedges, Ebbets, Mrs. Britton, Mrs. Hempstead, Dreyfuss, Shibe and Gaffney?

WADDELL NEVER WOULD ADMIT HE WAS GOING BACK

The passing away of Rube Waddell, the eccentric baseball comedian, who enjoyed life with the best clubs in the country, and who finally worried along, unable to hold down a berth on a bush league team, brings back funny incidents in the life of the big athlete.

When the Cantillon brothers purchased the release of Waddell, it was thought that he would prove a big drawing card. As a card Rube's life was short, however, poor twirling soon bringing about his finish. He twirled a comparatively few real good games for the association club, although the Cantillons kept him afloat, he was finally sent to the bush. He was first handed over to the Minneapolis Northern League Club, and later went to Spike Shannon's team. Shannon's club up to that time had won about one-fifteenth of the games played, and Spike hoped that Rube would boost his stock.

The big fellow did pitch a few good games, but the quiet life of the bush league towns did not make a hit with the tall twirler, and he soon acquired the habit of disappearing for weeks at a time. His last game was at Duluth, after which contest he jumped to Minneapolis, refusing to continue in the minors. Rube always held that he was being discriminated against, and, although the Cantillons held him up for three years, he believed he was being kept out of the majors where he belonged, and where—he figured—he could beat Johnson, Bush, Seaton or any of them.

A Great Hurling Staff.

The Chicago White Sox own the best pitching crew in the American League. Here's the dope on Comiskey's outfit minus the reliable Ed Walsh, who was unable to participate during the 1913 season:

Player	G.	IP.		SO.	PO.	Ave.
Cicotte	42	267	1-3	222	77	1.91
Russell	51	316		247	89	1.85
Scott	48	312		249	96	1.85

Only One Southpaw.

So far the Pittsburg team has only one left-handed heaver. He is Eddie Henderson, who performed for Lowell last year. Hedgepeth also is a left-hander, but he will not join the team until May 1.

Mathewson Born in 1879.

Christy Mathewson was born in Elk County, Pa., August 12, 1879. He started with the Bucknell University team in 1898, and landed with New York in 1900. He was released to Cincinnati in 1901 and returned to the New York Nationals in trade for Amos Rusie. Matty has pitched for the Giants during the seasons of 1901-1913, inclusive.

Groundkeeper Fails to Fool Joe Birmingham's Pitchers

NEMO LEIBOLD PUTS BLINK ON SOUTHPAW JINX

One of the most improved players on the Cleveland team is Harry Leibold, the diminutive centerfielder. In the early part of last season Leibold was seldom seen and never heard This spring he's the most conspicuous player on the field and is a constant chatterbox

Leibold's change is due partly to the fact that the strangeness of his big league surroundings has been worn off, but more to the fact that he thinks he is going to hit pretty close to the .300 mark.

"Half Pint" declares he has overcome the advantage the southpaw hurlers once had on him. "When I was going to school and played in amateur games," said Leibold today, "I was never bothered by the left-handers That's because the southpaws in that class of ball don't have any hooks. But when I jumped to the American Association right from the amateur class I found southpaws who knew how to pitch had my goat.

"I couldn't get to their curve balls and was striking out regularly. Then I tried to switch over and bat right-handed against the left-handers. But I'm naturally left-handed myself—do most everything left-handed except throw that way. And I soon decided if I was to make good I'd better bat left-handed all the time. I've played two seasons, since then, one with the association and one with Cleveland And I'm gradually getting so I can master the curve balls shot up by the southpaws. This year I'm using Gabby Leliveit's straddle position at bat and I don't think the southpaws are going to bother me any. That straddle ought to add twenty [illegible] to my batting average."

BY JOHN J. M'GRAW,
Manager of the New York Giants

The crab is the fellow who gets the best of the breaks, no matter how square the umpire tries to be. He bluffs the heart out of his opponents and gets their goat in the pinches, if they are at all inclined to be sensitive and weak-kneed. Let me tell you that there are a lot of that kind in the business

The crab will keep his ginger on tap from barrier to tape. He keeps his nerves from jumping the governor belt in the pinches, from the very bluff that he is handing out to the other fellows and his chewing the rag. Crabby players like Evers, Bresnahan, Dooin Snodgrass and Fred Clarke may create the impression that they possess a very undesirable disposition, but just the same, you'll notice that they are the boys who deliver the goods and get the coin.

ALL OF BIRMY'S HURLERS GO IN SIX-FOOT CLASS

If size counts for anything in baseball, Manager Joe Birmingham of the Cleveland Naps has a bunch of twirlers that should create some comment in the American League. Not one of Manager Joe's youngsters is under 6 feet and many go several inches above that. To see the Naps trotting about in uniform in the open the players look to be of normal size, but when lined up against a tape measure it develops that the entire bunch is eligible in the 72-inch class. The tallest are Dave Gregg, 6 feet 4 inches, Rip Hagerman, 6 feet 2 inches; Steen and Bowman, 6 feet 1 inch.

WADDELL NEVER WOULD ADMIT HE WAS GOING BACK

The passing away of Rube Waddell, the eccentric baseball comedian, who enjoyed life with the best clubs in the country, and who finally worried along, unable to hold down a berth on a bush league team, brings back funny incidents in the life of the big athlete.

When the Cantillon brothers purchased the release of Waddell, it was thought that he would prove a big drawing card. As a card Rube's life was short, however, poor twirling soon bringing about his finish He twirled a comparatively few real good games for the syndication club, although the Cantillons kept him afloat, he was finally sent to the bush. He was first handed over to the Minneapolis Northern League Club, and later went to Spike Shannon's team. Shannon's club up to that time had won about one fifteenth of the games played, and Spike hoped that Rube would boost his stock.

The big fellow did pitch a few good games, but the quiet life of the bush league towns did not make a hit with the tall twirler, and he soon acquired the habit of disappearing for weeks at a time. His last game was at Duluth, after which contest he jumped to Minneapolis, refusing to continue in the minors. Rube always held that he was being discriminated against, and, although the Cantillons held him up for three years, he believed he was being kept out of the majors where he belonged, and where—he figured—he could beat Johnson, Bush, Seaton or any of them.

So far the Pittsburg team has only one left-handed heaver. He is Eddie Henderson, who performed for Lowell last year. Hedgepeth also is a left-hander, but he will not join the team until May 1.

He was released to Cincinnati in 1901 and returned to the New York Nationals in trade for Amos Rusie. Matty has pitched for the Giants during the seasons of 1901-1913, inclusive.

It Is Ball Club, Not Owner; Fan Looks at, Says Pres. Comiskey

Charley Comiskey, the lovable owner of the Chicago White Sox, handed out a neat one the other day, when he tersely remarked

"The public doesn't care a darn about me or any other owner What they look at is a ball club"

To prove the correctness thereof, how many people would go out more than once and pay admission to see a ball team composed of Navin, Somers, Hedges, Ebbets, Mrs. Britton, Mrs. Hempstead, Dreyfuss, Shibe and Gaffney?

TROOPS LAUGH WHEN ASKED TO SURRENDER

Mexicans Attack American Outpost at Vera Cruz, No One Wounded

Port Cut Off From Interior Points Furnishing the Food Supply

VERA CRUZ, May 2.—A considerable force of Mexicans attacked the American outpost at the water plant, nine miles out, at 11 o'clock this morning, according to a wireless message received here which asked for aid.

Supporting troops were at once forwarded by train from Vera Cruz to El Tejer, where the water works are situated.

What had promised to be the first fight between the United States army and the Mexican troops ended in the exchange of not more than half a dozen shots.

The Mexicans threatened to "attack immediately unless the Americans surrendered their positions at the water works at El Tejer within 10 minutes," but failed to fulfill their threat.

Still Holding Positions.

The Mexicans are still holding a position beyond the water works station and the American troops have received no orders to advance. At 11 o'clock this morning, a Mexican force estimated at from 300 to 500 men appeared a mile beyond the water works station. As Major Russell, of the marines, had received orders not to assume the offensive, he and his men watched the Mexicans with much interest.

Suddenly a Mexican lieutenant and a noncommissioned officer bearing a white flag advanced and presented a demand for the Americans to surrender within 10 minutes.

"Don't Waste Time," Is Reply.

Major Russell's reply was:

"Hurry right back and do not waste any of the time your commanding officer has stipulated."

Major Russell then made preparations to resist any attack, at the same time sending a message to headquarters in Vera Cruz that his outpost was threatened.

Back at headquarters Brigadier General Funston and his staff had been conscientiously working out the details of the new government which the brigadier general had been instructed to establish.

The wireless message from the water works station at El Tejer brought about a quick change from this comparatively prosaic work to that of active army duty.

Reinforcements Sent

Within a few minutes headquarters had notified Major Russell that reinforcements were on the way to aid him and in little more than an hour, instead of 200 marines composing the command of Major Russell at the outpost of El Tejer, there were in position to support him more than 1,200 men, while the entire garrison of Vera Cruz was ready for any movement that might be ordered.

Seven companies of the Fourth infantry were sent forward under the command of Colonel Robert C. Van Vliet as well as two battalions and three companies of marines commanded by Colonel John Archer Lejeune.

All these troops had been taken from stations in the outskirts of Vera Cruz, the men of the infantry regiment entraining for the short run to El Tejer from Los Cocos the first station on the Mexican railway where they were posted. The battalions were com-

HOUSE TO RUSH ANTITRUST BILL

Omnibus Measure Includes [illegible] Designed to Cover Ground

State Historical and Natural History Society

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The antitrust legislative program in the house was made up today when the judiciary committee ordered favorably reported its omnibus bill designed to cover the administration recommendations and Chairman Clayton introduced a resolution proposing one of the most ironclad rules on record to rush the measure through.

The bill is mainly the same as when introduced less than a month ago as a revised combination of separate bills on holding companies, interlocking directorates etc.

The house rules committee will meet early next week to decide upon the rule. It contemplates 16 hours of general debate, five-minutes speeches on any item but restricted in the total to a maximum of four hours—an unusual limitation—the bill then to be voted upon without intervening motions.

Labor Clause Retained.

The so-called labor section is changed but little. It declares that "nothing in the antitrust laws shall be construed as forbidding existence and operation of fraternal, labor, consumers', agricultural or horticultural organizations, orders or associations instituted for purposes of mutual help and not having capital stock or conducted for profit, or to forbid or restrain members of such organizations from carrying out the legitimate objects thereof."

The words "operating under the lodge system" were struck out of this provision. The labor group in congress is expected to fight for further union recognition.

In the antiinterlocking directorates section, the committee added provisos exempting "mutual savings banks not having a capital represented by shares," and the following:

[illegible]

"The [illegible] officer, employe of bank, etc., may be a director, officer or employe of not more than one other bank or trust company where the entire capital stock of one is owned by [illegible]."

"Nothing in this section shall forbid a director of Class A of a federal reserve bank from being an officer or director or both in one member bank."

After two years no person may be simultaneously a director in two or more corporations either of which has capital surplus and undivided profits aggregating more than $1,000,000 engaged wholly or partly in commerce, other than common carrier if the corporations are or have been competitors, so that an elimination of competition by agreement between them would constitute a violation of any antitrust laws."

Director's Eligibility.

The eligibility of a director under this provision shall be determined by the aggregate capital surplus and undivided profits exclusive of dividends declared, but not paid to stockholders. The committee here added: "At the end of the fiscal year of the corporation next preceding the election of directors."

The bill reiterates the old provisions regulating price fixing and price discriminations but changes to "wrongfully injure" the provision that anyone discriminating in price between differ-

GRFFKS ARE RESPONSIBLF FOR LUDLOW BATTLE, SAYS MILITIA

Investigating Board Depicts Guardsmen as Heroes and Strikers as Murderers; Drew Fire Into Tent Colony

DENVER, May 2.—Absolute responsibility for the fatal battle of Ludlow, Monday, April 20, was placed upon the Greeks of the strikers' colony at Ludlow by the military board consisting of Judge Advocate Major E. J. Boughton, Captains W. C. Danks and Philip S. Van Cise, of the Colorado National guard. This commission was appointed April 25 by Adjutant General Chase, with instructions to report on all the incidents of the battle, preceding and subsequent, and to make such report "without malice or favor."

The officers examined under oath all officers and prisoners, as many as possible of the soldiers deputies mine guards and townspeople of Ludlow and nearby coal camps. They made strenuous effort to obtain testimony of strikers but without success reporting that a personal request made upon Mr Lawson and Mr McLennan strike leaders in Denver was answered in their presence by Mr Hawkins their attorney, declining to give us any information on the ground that our inquiry was not publicly conducted.

"Remote Cause" of Trouble.

The board found that the "remote cause of this as well as all other battles lies with the coal operators who established in an American industrial community a numerous class of ignorant lawless and savage South European peasants. The underlying cause was the presence near Ludlow in daily contact of three discordant elements—strikers soldiers and mine guards—all armed and fostering an increasing deadly hatred which sooner or later was bound to find some such expression. The immediate cause of the battle was an attack upon the soldiers by the Greek inhabitants of the tent colony who misinterpreted a movement of troops on a neighboring hill."

Concerning Louis Tikas, the Greek leader who was killed in the battle, the report says: "During the evening Louis Tikas James Filer and an unknown striker were taken prisoners. Lieut. K. E. Linderfelt swung his Springfield rifle, breaking the stock, over the head of Tikas." This incident followed a heated controversy between the lieutenant and the Greek.

Tried to Hang Tikas

The report continues: "An attempt to hang Tikas went so far that a rope was produced and thrown over a telegraph pole. This lynching was prevented by Lieut. K. E. Linderfelt who turned Tikas over to a noncommissioned officer, whom he directed to be responsible for his life. Shortly afterward all three prisoners were killed by gunshot wounds. The only bullet found in his body was of a kind not used by soldiers, although the two other wounds might have been made by Springfield rifle bullets of the uniformed men."

Relative to the suffocation and burning of two women and 11 children in the tent colony, the report says: "Eleven children and two women were smothered to death in a small pit under one of the tents. None of them was hit by a bullet. This pit was not large enough to support the life of such a number for many hours. The construction of the pit made it a veritable death trap, and its inmates probably died from suffocation before the tents were burned. When found, there were no signs that the women and children had crowded into the entrance of the pit, as would have been the case had they attempted to rush out when the tent above caught fire."

Colony Was Looted.

The report states that the colony was looted by participants and spectators in the battle, and that 3,000 rounds of ammunition were taken from the tent [illegible] "John [illegible]," [illegible] killed or wounded in [illegible] by a gunshot. Frank Snyder, a 12-year-old boy, was shot in the head. His father stated that evening that his boy had gone outside the tent and was shot in the forehead while facing the arroyo from which the strikers' fire came.

"The colony was not swept by machine guns. This is proven by the fact that the chicken houses, outhouses, tent frames and posts still standing in the colony exhibit no bullet holes while the buildings and fences along the railroad track are riddled with bullet holes made by the machine gun."

Recommend Court-Martial.

The board recommended that a general court-martial be appointed to try all officers and enlisted men partici-

MILITIA AND MINE GUARDS ARE BLAMED FOR LUDLOW BATTLE

TRINIDAD, May 2.—The fire which destroyed the Ludlow tent colony on the night of April 20, causing the deaths of 13 women and children was started by militiamen or mine guards, or both, according to the verdict rendered by the coroner's jury here late today.

No responsibility for the killing of Louis Tikas was fixed by the jury, which contented itself by finding that he with seven other men was shot in battle. It had been charged by strikers that Tikas received a blow on the head which fractured his skull.

The verdict of the deaths of women and children decided that:

"Cecilia Costa, Petra Valdez, Rograta Pedregone, Clovino Pedregone, Lucy Costa, Orafrio Costa, Elvira Valdez, Mary Valdez, Eulalia Valdez, Rodolfo Valdez, Frank Petrucci, Lucy Petrucci and Joe Petrucci came to their death by asphyxiation or fire or both, caused by the burning of the tents of the Ludlow tent colony, and that fire on tents was started by militiamen under Major Hamrock and Lieutenant Linderfelt or mine guards or both on the 20th day of April 1914."

A separate verdict was rendered on the deaths of Alfred Martin, a militiaman, Premo Larsie, a nonunion combatant and Louis Tikas, Frank Robino, James Tyler, John Bartolitto and Charles Costa, strikers, and Frank Snyder, a 12 year old boy. The jury found that they came to their death by bullet wounds in the battle between militiamen under Major Hamrock and Lieutenant Linderfelt and mine guards on one side and strikers on the other, said battle held in or about Ludlow on the 20th day of April 1914."

The jury was composed of Casimiro Cruz, foreman, George Stracy, M. W. Babcock, A. M. Nash, F. J. Doveton and J. W. Bartlett.

WHOLE MEXICAN PROBLEM BEING CONSIDERED NOW

ALL FACTIONS WILL BE GIVEN HEARING

Gen. Huerta Is Very Anxious That Arbitration Prove a Success

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The three South American envoys who have undertaken the task of pacifying Mexico by diplomacy today made another decisive move in their plan by requesting the United States government, General Huerta and General Carranza to appoint representatives to confer with them in Washington.

Ambassador De Gama of Brazil and Ministers Naon and Suarez of Argentina and Chile, respectively, called on Secretary Bryan asking him to designate the United States representatives to attend conferences of the mediators. At the same time, they telegraphed the head of the government in Mexico City, as well as the rebel chief to the same effect.

No Report on Progress.

No announcement of the subjects to be considered by the representatives of the three parties to the mediation or of the powers or functions of the new envoys, was made except for the following brief statement, which was issued through the state department on the authority of the three diplomats:

"The mediators have delivered to this government and are sending out to General Huerta and General Carranza requests that representatives be appointed to confer with the mediators."

The proposal is to bring together specially designated representatives who would be conversant with the viewpoint of all factions in Mexico and the position of the South American envoys. The suggestion had been made to them from various quarters that much time would be saved and the problem of exchanging views simplified by such a process.

Get Views of All Parties.

While it is realized that the representatives of all parties probably would not be given authority finally to pass on points brought up in the discussion with [illegible] it would be able to sound out their superiors so that before formal proposals actually were made the mediators would have an idea of their probable reception.

The envoys felt confident tonight that the step they had taken would meet with favor by all concerned believing there could be no objection to a move calculated chiefly to facilitate the progress of the work.

Thus far the responses from General Huerta and General Carranza have not been clear as to whether the differences between the United States and Mexico arising out of the Tampico incident alone would be considered by them or whether they would consent to a general discussion of the Mexican problem.

Bridges Difficulties.

By sending representatives here it is pointed out such difficulties would be bridged over for in an informal conference with the mediators everything pertaining to Mexico could be discussed and even informally submitted before the stage of formal proposals was reached.

Incidentally it is known that the mediators intend to concentrate their attention on the broad subject of pacifying Mexico hoping that the differences which arose between the Huerta government and the United States might become secondary in view of a solution of the entire Mexican problem. Names of persons who might be acceptable to all factions in Mexico for the position of provisional president pending a rehabilitating of the national government in case the negotiations reach that stage are being suggested to the mediators.

In the meantime although the United

ARMY IN CHARGE VERA CRUZ NOW

CIVIL GOVERNOR KERR GIVES UP OFFICE

Mexico City Again Is Quiet, Say Refugees Reaching the Coast

VERA CRUZ, May 2.—The governorship of Vera Cruz was handed over late today by Robert J. Kerr, who was recently appointed civil governor, to Brigadier General Funston. The ceremony was wholly formal.

The military government of the city which has now been established, is, it is understood to follow closely the lines of the civil government hitherto in existence, and as many Mexican officials as desire to accept or continue office are to be employed in the administration. The law courts have been requested to continue their functions in the same way as that to which they have been accustomed.

Military in Control.

Every branch of the city administration is however to be under military supervision. Such military and naval officers as hold office under the civil governor probably will be retained especially Commander H. O. Stickney inspector of the port, and David Potter, paymaster of the Minnesota who has been acting as collector of customs.

Lieut. Col. John B. Porter of the judge advocate general's department is to come from Washington to assist in the capacity of legal adviser.

Robert J. Kerr the retiring civil governor may it is thought be identified with the new form of government, but entirely in his civil and private capacity in which he will give such legal advice and information as may be required.

Mexico City Quiet.

According to a number of foreign refugees, mostly American citizens who left Mexico City yesterday and arrived here today the federal capital was quiet and free from demonstrations by the mobs.

Calientes was among the passengers came through as official messenger for the foreign diplomatic corps, and brought with him messages to the various governments to be sent by cable from this city. He also carried a large quantity of official correspondence to be sent by mail.

C. L. Baker, manager of the American Smelting and Refining company who had been held prisoner at Aguas Calientes was among the passengers. He was released and taken to Mexico City with 110 employes of the company about 40 of whom were sent to Coatzacoalcos.

Others on the train include Dr. Ulfelder and his wife.

Train Makes Good Time

It was said that the reason the train came through so quickly was because attached to it was a private car bringing Rafael Pardo, an influential Mexican who since the federal government seized the Mexican railway has been acting as manager. His visit to Vera Cruz was in connection with his business interests.

Ernest Richter, an employe of the tube works in Mexico City and an American citizen was taken from the train by Mexican soldiers at Soledad yesterday and held prisoner because a pistol and ammunition were found in his possession. Consul William W. Canada is making an investigation. Colonel Edward H. Plummer of the 28th infantry has been appointed provost marshal and executive head of the new government. He reports to Brigadier General Funston.

U. S. ORDERS BOTH SIDES TO GIVE UP ARMS

C. F. & I. Guards at Walsenburg Surrender Arms to the Regulars

Story of Colorado Struggle Told in the Data Now in Washington

TRINIDAD, May 2.—Forty-two guns, the first to be given up by either party in the Colorado labor war since the arrival of the federal troops, tonight are in the headquarters of Capt. C. C. Smith at Walsenburg. They were turned over to the regulars by the guards at the Colorado Fuel & Iron company's Walsen mine.

The surrender of the guns was the result of an agreement between Captain Smith and B. J. Matteson as the general manager of the company. Mr. Matteson agreed that the guards should give up their guns if the federal troops would take charge of the mines and assure the properties protection.

In accordance with this understanding, Lieutenant Crowley, with 10 men, went to Walsen, while Lieutenant Cunningham, with 20 men, went to the big coal camp at Rouse.

Find Guns in Office.

Lieutenant Crowley upon his arrival found the 42 guns in the mine office, where they had been collected by the officers of the company. A few guards then on duty did not turn in their guns, but these arms were to be collected later.

At Rouse, the guns were not turned over tonight, but were to be surrendered tomorrow.

Maj. W. A. Holbrook, commanding the second squadron, Fifth cavalry, said the plan adopted at Walsenburg had been determined upon as an experiment. No similar agreement had been suggested in Las Animas county. He said he had not yet received orders to enforce the proclamation of the secretary of war and disarm both factions.

Troops Patrol District.

Troops sent out from the central camp at Trinidad were in control of the situation at Walsenburg and Ludlow, and small detachments had been distributed at various mining camps in Las Animas and Huerfano counties.

Pending the arrival of reinforcements, Maj. W. A. Holbrook in command of the second squadron Fifth United States cavalry, has scattered his force of 300 men at strategic points in the two counties. No disorders had been reported since the arrival of the regulars.

John R. Lawson strike leader, and Horace N. Hawkins attorney for the United Mine Workers said tonight that no arrangements had been made for disarming the strikers. They had a conference with Major Holbrook today, but Mr. Hawkins declared the subject of giving up arms was not brought up.

No definite arrangements had been made for the proposed mass meeting of miners to vote on the subject of disarmament, Mr. Lawson said.

The last of the state troops were removed from Ludlow tonight after the place had been occupied by United

TAMPICO OIL WELLS WILL BE PROTECTED

Assurances Received From Both Carranza and General Huerta

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Assurances have come from both the Huerta government and General Carranza that the oil wells at Tampico will be protected during the fighting there. While there has been no formal agreement to neutralize the wells the character of the assurances from both factions has removed fears that the wells would be destroyed.

Secretary Bryan communicated to the British embassy today his latest advices that the rebels and the Huerta government would endeavor to protect the wells.

Some oil already has been wasted but most of the wells are unharmed. The chief difficulty to the owners is the fact that practically all the employes of the oil companies at Tampico were Americans who departed on refuge steamers, and the force now there is not considered sufficient to care for them in emergencies.

Memorial to Be Held Today Near Rockefeller Offices for Ludlow Dead

NEW YORK, May 2.—Demonstrations today against John D. Rockefeller Jr. because of his alleged policy in the Colorado strike situation were unmarked by disturbances of moment. The chief development of the day was the arrest of Marie Ganz, the Industrial Workers of the World orator, whose repeated threats against Mr. Rockefeller in speeches and otherwise had been brought to police attention.

Miss Ganz was intercepted today on her way, she said, to repeat her visit at Mr. Rockefeller's office.

The accusation against her was based on a section of the law making it a misdemeanor to create a disturbance by acts or language in a public place.

Miss Ganz was released tonight when a surety company furnished the $500 bail required. She will be arraigned tomorrow.

Picketing by crepe sleeved marchers went on today in front of the Rockefeller office building and was resumed tonight on the street in the vicinity of his residence near Fifth avenue although Mr. Rockefeller was far off in his country home at Pocantico Hills.

Rev. Dr. William Miller Gamble of St. Stephens Episcopal church of Coytesville, N. J., announced today that he would hold a memorial service tomorrow in the neighborhood of 26 Broadway for the men, women and children killed in the troubles in Colorado. He would wear vestments for the service he said and would read prayers and give an address on the responsibility for the troubles and injustice of the existing social system.

The neighborhood of Mr. Rockefeller's office was selected because he is so closely related to the troubles, Dr. Gamble stated, but his name will not be mentioned in the service.

Pres. Wilson Will Use a Tent This Summer for Executive Office

WASHINGTON, May 2.—In anticipation that President Wilson will spend much of the summer in Washington, a large tent has been erected in the flower garden just south of the White house and it is expected that the president will transact much of his business during hot days beneath its cool shade.

The tent is to be fitted with telephones, push buttons and the other essentials of a modern office. The long legislative program mapped out for congress together with the Mexican problem make it probable that the president will be unable to go away for a real vacation until late in the summer, if then.

HUERTA WILL RESIGN PREDICT THE REBELS

Villa Leaves for the Front; Revolution Now Won, Says Pesqueira

EL PASO, Tex., May 2.—Constitutionalist leaders here are convinced that Victoriano Huerta is ready to step down and out under pressure from his cientifico supporters who with an accuracy of knowledge denied the masses in Mexico, regard complete rebel success as inevitable.

For this reason they will make no concessions before the Argentine, Brazilian and Chilean mediators.

The mediators of South America are believed to have been accepted by Huerta as a means of "saving his face" while out of the negotiations the cientificos according to the rebel view hope to save for themselves what they can of their vast properties in Mexico and possibly some of their special privileges.

The good offices of the three South American governments while accepted in principle by the Constitutionalists are viewed with a suspicion which at times bids fair to overstep the traditional bounds of diplomacy and come frankly into the open.

Carranza to Be Represented.

Those in authority here are chary of frank statements concerning diplomatic maneuvers but they have a way of confidential insinuation exhibition of telegrams and letters hints and the like which permit the inquirer to gain a fairly accurate knowledge of points in question.

Roberto V. Pesqueira, chief of the confidential agents never pretends to express Carranza's views. His statements almost invariably have been qualified by the clause that he expresses only his personal opinion. It has been observed however that his personal views and those of his chief show a remarkable harmony.

Carranza will be represented at the sessions of the board of mediators at Washington [illegible] of his representa-

$10,000 MARK REACHED IN C. OF C. FINANCE CAMPAIGN

50 Workers to Attempt to Complete Fund of $16,000 Within the Next Week, if Possible

Ten thousand dollars is the mark now reached in the Chamber of Commerce campaign for the 1914 budget. This is a gratifying increase over the sum last reported and is the result of many subscriptions, some large and some small.

Vigorous work will be taken up again this week, and the progress of the last few days gives strong encouragement that the fund may be completed at an early date.

During the week several of the committee have been quietly working with splendid results but many have deferred further active campaigning with the result that they will now take hold of the campaign with vim and with a determination to bring the fund within sight of the final goal—$16,000—before another seven days has passed.

Chairman Willis R. Armstrong of the finance committee is organizing the campaign for further work and he has been assured of the continued cooperation of the 50 workers until the solicitation is all completed.

Further detailed announcement as to the subscriptions will be made within a day or two.

MEN AND WOMEN URGE CONGRESS TO PASS RESOLUTION AND GRANT EQUAL SUFFRAGE

Speakers at Mass-Meeting Plead Cause of Woman's Rights; Ask Square Deal for All

Resolved: That this meeting call upon congress to pass immediately the Bristow Mondell resolution [illegible] now before it proposing an amendment to the United States constitution enfranchising women.

Resolved: That a copy of this resolution be sent every member of the United States senate and house of representatives from this state.

After hearing short snappy addresses on the question by representatives of the Progressive, Democratic and Socialist parties and of the women's suffrage movement, the 600 or more people who attended the suffrage meeting at the Opera house last night enthusiastically and unanimously passed the foregoing resolution proposed by Mayor McKesson. The meeting was the first of its kind held in Colorado Springs for some time. [illegible] was the first.

The Colorado Springs meeting was held in connection with similar demonstrations in practically every large city in the country. Its purpose and the purpose of the others was to arouse a more intense interest in the Bristow Mondell amendment now before the senate and if possible to bring such pressure to bear on the senators that they will pass the resolution. A similar resolution was [illegible] in March by only [illegible] votes.

In presenting his resolution Mayor McKesson read the Bristow Mondell amendment which [illegible]:

"Section 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

"Section 2. The congress shall have power by appropriate legislation to enforce the provisions of this article."

Audience Shows Keen Interest

[illegible] those who have [illegible] because it has been in effect [illegible] so many years equal suffrage is now taken as a matter of course [illegible] interest in this state [illegible] cheered the remarks of every speaker and manifested in [illegible] its desire to join [illegible] of the movement in less [illegible] and throughout the nation in securing the ballot for women.

Mrs. George A. Fowler presided at the meeting. Edward P. Costigan, Progressive candidate for governor this year, represented the Progressives, speaking on "Why a Federal Amendment?" Congressman John A. Martin representing the Democrats spoke on "A Complete Democracy." Mrs. Agnes L. Riddle, a member of the state legislature spoke on "Shoulder to Shoulder." "A Trumpet Call" was the subject chosen by [illegible]

BUILDING A STAGE BIGGER THAN ROME'S MIGHTIEST ARENA

STRAUSS PORTRAIT

The ancients have been outdone again. History tells of the mighty works of the men of Rome, Greece and Egypt and guides of Europe "point with pride" to works which they call the wonders of the world. They tell of the gigantic stages the ancients built and the mighty amphitheaters and defy the moderns to show anything like them.

While the guides were talking to the winter tourists in Europe, a few hard-headed stay-at-home Americans got together last winter and planned the biggest stage ever built to accommodate the biggest theatrical troupe in history to play before an audience which will sit on the slopes of a natural amphitheater and watch 7,500 actors re-enact the deeds of the men who built their city.

The play will be given in Forest Park, St. Louis, on the former World's Fair grounds. Instead of being used for the slaughter of martyrs to the lions and for gladiatorial combats as the arena of the famous Colosseum of Rome was used, the stage for the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis will be the gathering of peaceful clans showing the history of the city from the time of the Mound Builders to the present.

The stage will be larger than any of the modern-day stages. The New York Hippodrome auditorium and stage together could be placed upon the stage now under construction in Forest Park at the foot of Art Hill, and there would be still room. The area of the stage is 126,000 square feet. The area of the arena of the famed Colosseum of ancient Rome is estimated at 42,150 square feet. The dimensions of the Colosseum seats and all are 615x612 feet. The dimensions of the Forest Park stage are 200x 580 feet.

The Pageant and Masque will be given May 28, 29, 30 and 31.

In this play there will be 10,000 players the greatest cast in the history of the theater. That is to say, the Cast Committee has enrolled about 10,000 men, women and children to take part.

It is anticipated that only about 7,500 of the 10,000 performers to be enrolled will be needed at each performance. But it will be necessary to have available understudies in case of sickness or inability of the regular players to take part in any of the performances.

CALLED MOST WONDERFUL OF NATURAL THEATERS.

Those who have seen the site upon which will be held the Pageant and Masque of Saint Louis have pronounced it the greatest and most wonderful of all natural theaters.

There will be a river 125 feet wide between the stage and the audience and the stage proper will be 580 feet wide and 200 feet deep.

"A World Site," Percy MacKaye, famous poet-dramatist, calls the location selected for the stage.

It is a world site, Mr. MacKaye said, because no other city possesses a natural amphitheater of all the extraordinary advantages to be found at Art Hill. No city has within its borders an outdoor theater so large, so beautiful and so convenient. Lorado Taft, the eminent sculptor of Chicago, Professor Burton of the University of Minnesota, Alfred Noyes, the English poet, and others versed in the art of pageantry who have recently seen the Art Hill site are enthusiastic in their praise of it and proclaim it ideal for the purpose for which it is to be used next May.

This is the first time in history that a drama has ever been presented on so large a scale.

Upon the slopes of the hill thousands upon thousands of seats will be constructed, where the gentle rise of the ground is just sufficient to make each row of seats exactly the right height above the row in front. Thanks to Mother Nature there need be no craning of necks to see every movement that is being made upon the stage.

Seated in these tiers of benches the spectators will be in a position to view the re-enactment of the city's romantic history precisely as if through the last 150 years they had occupied a point of vantage on the Illinois shore, where they could watch in comfort the unfolding of the absorbing events which have culminated in building up the big Missouri town.

The curved apron of the stage will leave between the spectators and the players a strip of water minutely corresponding to the bend in the Mississippi as it flows past St. Louis. Upon this mimic Mississippi will take place, with exceptional realism, the many important episodes which have made the river play so important a part in the upbuilding of the city of Pierre Laclede's founding.

There are enough romantic facts connected with the stage to make it fine material for a play in itself.

When completed it will be worthy to rank as the long-sought eighth wonder of the world. It will be so large that all of the stages of the first class theaters in St. Louis could be placed in one corner. It will be almost two ordinary city blocks in width at the rear, and will be semi-circular in shape in front, the diameter nearest the audience being about one ordinary city block across.

Near the rear will be an immense pit in which will be hidden the band of 100 pieces and a chorus of several hundred voices. A great sounding board 40 feet high is to be erected immediately behind this pit, so that no note of the music will be lost to the audience.

When it is considered that this great platform will be constructed over the waters of the lagoon, some of the difficulties in store for the builders will be made apparent. It must be made strong enough to hold the 7,500 performers and still light enough so that it may readily be torn away and the lagoon given back to the city unimpaired in beauty.

TROOPS OF HORSES WILL CROSS BOARDS

Troops of horses will gallop across the boards, adding to the already tremendous strain put upon the flooring by the tons of weight of the performers themselves.

No such stage was ever before constructed. No such stage was ever before conceived. The ancient Greeks, who made of the out-of-door drama one of their finest arts, undoubtedly would gape in amazement [illegible] at the impressive manner in which St. Louis is preparing to stage its Pageant and Masque.

As many persons as are ordinarily employed in a big theatrical company will be at work for more than two months building this platform. It will be in use for not more than a week.

Then it will be torn down again. Its cost and trouble is to be paid for by enhanced civic pride.

Not only must the stage itself be made ready, but on the plain just behind it must be placed inconspicuously, but still conveniently, the houses which will be used as dressing rooms and as a storing place for the properties and costumes.

Tents will be used for this purpose as far as possible, but some of the properties to be displayed on the stage are extremely valuable, both in money and in historic association. These must be safeguarded from water, fire and from vandals.

Behind the stage there is a [illegible] of trees, which will effectually screen from view the [illegible] highly necessary tent city.

There will be an encampment of 7,500 persons, which is a greater number than is found in any army post in the usual course of events. There must be quarters, in addition, for the [illegible] of all boys, electricians, stage carpenters, assistant stage managers, and general factotums.

Many interesting novelties in [illegible] light effects and other features of the production will be [illegible] in the equipment of the stage, the details of which are being worked out by Joseph Lindon Smith, who is to be the producer in association with MacKaye of the Masque.

The great size of the stage and the number of people concerned make new methods necessary in arranging details of the stage.

The stage itself is only one of the many important details necessary in the preparation of the play. But from the extraordinary character of the platform, the fact that it is unique in history and is undoubtedly the pioneer in its details of a new form of stage craft, lends an interest and a zest to its construction which would not attend the preparation [illegible] of an ordinary stage.

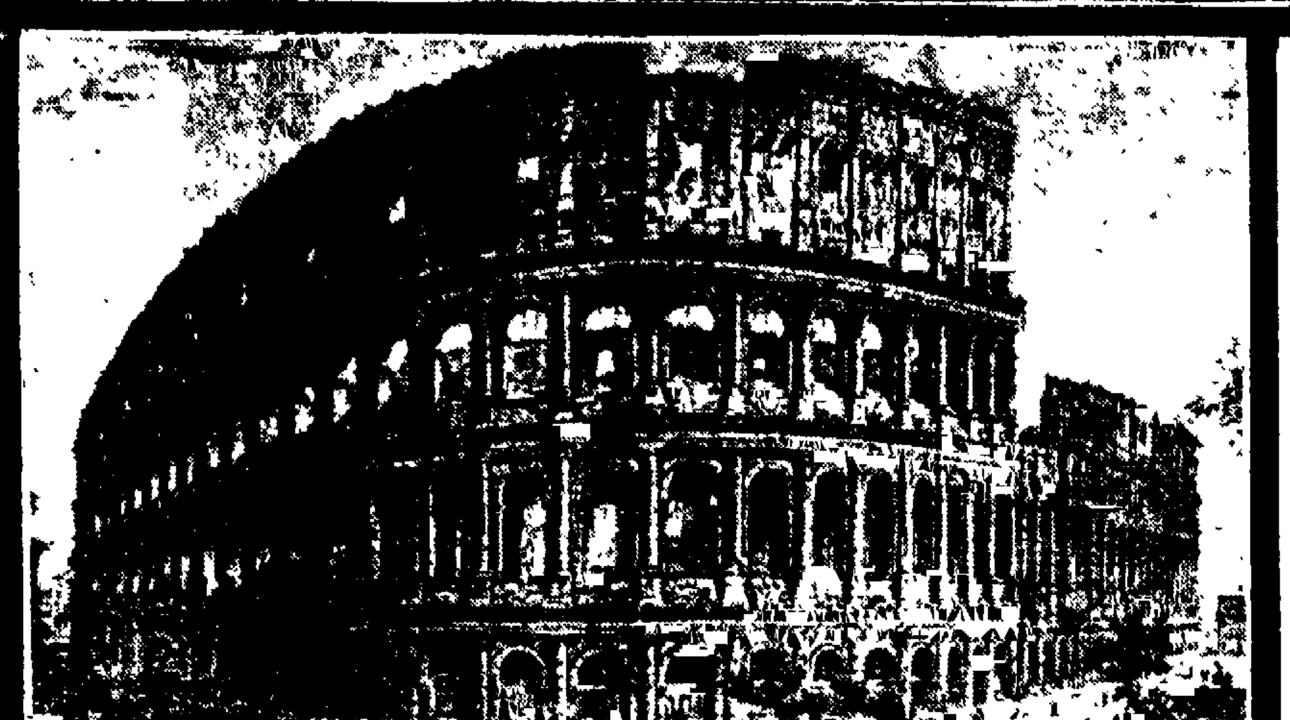

COLOSSEUM SCENE OF DEATHS OF MARTYRS

The Colosseum, which was the scene of so many Christian martyrdoms, has recently been explored and excavations have revealed its mammoth size. The external elevation of the Colosseum consisted of four stories, each adorned with engaged columns of three orders of Greek architecture. The lowest three were arcaded, having eighty columns and as many arches. Those of the basement story served as entries, seventy-six being numbered and allotted to the general body of spectators, while four at the extremities of the building were the principal entrances.

The arena, which was of the [illegible] shape, is the [illegible] amphitheater [illegible] ellipse, and was [illegible] [illegible] spectators [illegible] lines and columns [illegible] after the great [illegible] Rome and the [illegible] theaters of Greece.

In the Colosseum there were three galleries [illegible] with each other by terraces and walls. The lowest was appropriated to the [illegible] [illegible] to the [illegible] [illegible] were open to the [illegible] shelters were provided [illegible] to which the people [illegible] [illegible] lit [illegible] of rain [illegible].

The height of the Colosseum is given as being from 160 to 180 feet. The seats in the arena do not rise higher than the level of the third order of the exterior; that is, about half the entire height of the walls. It is evident that there were seats higher than the [illegible] but they were destroyed. There is no sign of them now in the ruins.

The exterior was divided into the [illegible] and what was called the [illegible].

A large awning was provided for the Colosseum and was drawn over the building when the sun shone. Sometimes when an Emperor wished to make a great display he had silken awnings above the great structure. The great height of the building was needed for purposes of obtaining ventilation. It is calculated that the known seats in the Colosseum could accommodate 87,000 spectators. Such a crowd would hardly be able to exist without extraordinary means of ventilation.

The shows in the Colosseum were cruel and bloody for the most part and with the rise of Christianity the buildings were discontinued. Before the reign of Constantine, however, they were built all over the provinces of Rome on smaller scale than the mammoth building at Rome. When the buildings fell into disuse they gradually fell into ruin.

There will be no mighty building in Forest Park for the production of the Pageant and Masque. The performance will begin in the afternoon and will be carried on into the night.

Don't Leave the Receiver Off the Hook.

What is a "permanent signal?" Every telephone subscriber ought to know, for generally it means trouble on a telephone line—trouble which users of the service themselves can usually prevent if they will make sure that the receiver is always placed firmly on the hook when the telephone line is not in use.

Yes, that's it! When you forget to replace your telephone receiver firmly on the hook after a conversation is completed it causes a "permanent signal"—a small electric light—to burn in front of the operator at the central office switchboard, and she must report the line out of order. No one can reach you during that time because the operator is unable to ring your bell.

Often the receiver is left off through carelessness, but more frequently a book or some other obstruction directly beneath the receiver prevents it from bringing down the hook firmly.

As a matter of fact the service was interrupted on 10,000 Bell subscriber lines in Philadelphia last year through their failure to replace the receiver securely upon the hook after completing a conversation.

Perhaps there is no more convincing way of gauging the effect of leaving a telephone receiver off the hook than by taking a half-hour trip through one of the big central offices in this city. There you will see the switchboards, which are studded with thousands of tiny electric lights which glow whenever a subscriber lifts his receiver to make a call.

When one fails to replace the receiver it is like failing to close an eye in sleep. There stares that little unblinking gleam of light despite the operator's efforts to reach the subscriber and shut it off.

The operators can neither signal the subscriber to tell him about it nor connect any one who calls. So a black cord is connected to the line and the wire chief is notified that it is out of order.

Ninety three per cent of the service interruptions which the [illegible] [illegible] are due to this cause. Many repairmen are kept busy performing this simple and perhaps unnecessary work, replacing subscribers' telephone receivers upon the hooks.

Strong Evidence.

This girl is only a college flirt. How do you know that she really loves you?"

"She dyes her hair to conform with my class colors dad. A fellow couldn't ask for any greater proof of devotion than that."—Judge.

TROOPS LAUGH WHEN ASKED TO SURRENDER

Mexicans Attack American Outpost at Vera Cruz, No One Wounded

Port Cut Off From Interior Points Furnishing the Food Supply

VERA CRUZ, May 2.—A considerable force of Mexicans attacked the American outpost at the water plant, nine miles out, at 11 o'clock this morning, according to a wireless message received here which asked for aid.

Supporting troops were at once forwarded by train from Vera Cruz to El Tejer, where the water works are situated.

What had promised to be the first fight between the United States army and the Mexican troops ended in the exchange of not more than half a dozen shots.

The Mexicans threatened to "attack immediately unless the Americans surrendered their positions at the water works at El Tejer within 10 minutes," but failed to fulfill their threat.

Still Holding Positions.

The Mexicans are still holding a position beyond the water works station and the American troops have received no orders to advance. At 11 o'clock this morning a Mexican force estimated at from 300 to 500 men appeared a mile beyond the water works station. As Major Russell, of the marines, had received orders not to assume the offensive, he and his men watched the Mexicans with much interest.

Suddenly a Mexican lieutenant and a noncommissioned officer [illegible] white flag [illegible] and [illegible] the Americans to surrender within [illegible] minutes.

[illegible] Russell's reply was:

"Hurry right back and do not waste any of the time your commanding officer has stipulated."

Major Russell then made preparations to resist any attack, at the same time sending a message to headquarters in Vera Cruz that his outpost was threatened.

Back at headquarters Brigadier General Funston and his staff had been continuously working out the details of the new government which the brigadier general had been instructed to establish.

The wireless message from the water works station at El Tejer brought about a quick change from this comparatively prosaic work to that of active army duty.

Reinforcements Sent.

Within a few minutes headquarters had notified Major Russell that reinforcements were on the way to aid him and in little more than an hour, instead of 200 marines composing the command of Major Russell at the outpost of El Tejer, there were in position to support him more than 1,200 men, while the entire garrison of Vera Cruz was ready for any movement that might be ordered.

Seven companies of the Fourth infantry were sent forward under the command of Colonel Robert C. Van Vliet, as well as two battalions and three companies of marines commanded by Colonel John Archer Lejeune.

All these troops had been taken from stations in the outskirts of Vera Cruz, the men of the infantry regiment entraining for the short run to El Tejer from Los Cocos, the first station on the Mexican railway, where they were posted. The battalions were com-

TAMPICO OIL WELLS WILL BE PROTECTED

Assurances Received From Both Carranza and General Huerta

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Assurances have come from both the Huerta government and General Carranza that the oil wells at Tampico will be protected during the fighting there. While there has been no formal agreement to neutralize the wells, the character of the assurances from both factions has removed fears that the wells would be destroyed.

Secretary Bryan communicated to the British embassy today his latest advices that the rebels and the Huerta government would endeavor to protect the wells.

Some oil already has been wasted but most of the wells are unharmed. The chief difficulty to the owners is the fact that practically all the employes of the oil companies at Tampico were Americans, who departed on refuge steamers, and the force now there is not considered sufficient to care for them in emergencies.

HOUSE TO RUSH ANTITRUST BILL

Omnibus Measure Includes Bills Designed to Cover Ground

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The antitrust legislative program in the house was made up today when the judiciary committee ordered favorably reported its omnibus bill designed to cover the administration recommendations, and Chairman Clayton introduced a resolution proposing one of the most ironclad rules on record to rush the measure through.

The bill is mainly the same as when introduced less than a month ago as a revised combination of separate bills on holding companies, interlocking directorates, etc.

The house rules committee will meet early next week to decide upon the rule. It contemplates 16 hours of general debate, five-minutes speeches on any item, but restricted in the total to a maximum of four hours—an unusual limitation—the bill then to be voted upon without intervening motions.

Labor Clause Retained.

The so-called labor section is changed but little. It declares that "nothing in the antitrust laws shall be construed as forbidding existence and operation of fraternal, labor, consumers', agricultural or horticultural organizations, orders or associations instituted for purposes of mutual help and not having capital stock or conducted for profit, or to forbid or restrain members of such organizations from carrying out the legitimate objects thereof."

The words "operating under the lodge system" were struck out of this provision. The labor group in congress is expected to fight for further union recognition.

In the antiinterlocking directorates section, the committee added provisos exempting "mutual savings banks not having a capital represented by shares," and the following:

[illegible] Provision.

"The director, officer, employe of bank, etc., may be a director, officer or employe of not more than one other bank or trust company where the entire capital stock of one is owned by [illegible] in the other.

"Nothing in this section shall forbid a director of Class A of a federal reserve bank from being an officer or director or both in one member bank."

After two years no person may be simultaneously a director in two or more corporations either of which has capital, surplus and undivided profits aggregating more than $1,000,000 engaged wholly or partly in commerce, other than common carrier, if the corporations are, or have been, competitors, "so that an elimination of competition by agreement between them would constitute a violation of any antitrust laws."

Director's Eligibility.

The eligibility of a director under this provision "shall be determined by the aggregate capital, surplus and undivided profits, exclusive of dividends declared, but not paid to stockholders." The committee here added "At the end of the fiscal year of the corporation next preceding the election of directors."

The bill reiterates the old provisions regulating price fixing and price discriminations, but changes to "wrongfully injure" the provision that anyone discriminating in price between differ-

Memorial to Be Held Today Near Rockefeller Offices for Ludlow Dead

NEW YORK, May 2.—Demonstrations today against John D. Rockefeller, Jr., because of his alleged policy in the Colorado strike situation were unmarked by disturbances of moment. The chief development of the day was the arrest of Marie Ganz, the Industrial Workers of the World orator, whose repeated threats against Mr. Rockefeller in speeches and otherwise had been brought to police attention.

Miss Ganz was intercepted today on her way, she said, to repeat her visit at Mr. Rockefeller's office.

The accusation against her was based on a section of the law making it a misdemeanor to create a disturbance by acts or language in a public place.

Miss Ganz was released tonight when a surety company furnished the $500 bail required. She will be arraigned tomorrow.

Picketing by crepe-sleeved marchers went on today in front of the Rockefeller office building, and was resumed tonight on the street in the vicinity of his residence near Fifth avenue although Mr. Rockefeller was far off in his country home at Pocantico Hills.

Rev. Dr. William Miller Gamble of St. Stephens Episcopal church of Coytesville, N. J., announced today that he would hold a memorial service tomorrow in the neighborhood of 26 Broadway for the men, women and children killed in the troubles in Colorado. He would wear vestments for the service he said and would read prayers and give an address on the responsibility for the troubles and injustice of the existing social system.

The neighborhood of Mr. Rockefeller's office was selected because he is so closely related to the troubles, Dr. Gamble stated, but his name will not be mentioned in the service.

GREEKS ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR LUDLOW BATTLE, SAYS MILITIA

Investigating Board Depicts Guardsmen as Heroes and Strikers as Murderers; Drew Fire Into Tent Colony

DENVER, May 2.—Absolute responsibility for the fatal battle of Ludlow, Monday, April 20, was placed upon the Greeks of the strikers' colony at Ludlow by the military board consisting of Judge Advocate Major E. J. Boughton, Captains W. C. Danks and Philip S. Van Cise, of the Colorado National guard. This commission was appointed April 25 by Adjutant General Chase, with instructions to report on all the incidents of the battle, preceding and subsequent, and to make such report "without malice or favor."

The officers examined under oath all officers and prisoners, "as many as possible of the soldiers, deputies, mine guards and townspeople of Ludlow and nearby coal camps." They made strenuous effort to obtain testimony of strikers, but without success, reporting that a personal request made upon Mr. Lawson and Mr. McLennan, strike leaders in Denver, was answered in their presence by Mr. Hawkins, their attorney, declining to give us any information on the ground that our inquiry was not publicly conducted."

"Remote Cause" of Trouble.

The board found that the "remote cause of this, as well as all other battles lies with the coal operators, who established in an American industrial community, a numerous class of ignorant, lawless and savage South European peasants. The underlying cause was the presence, near Ludlow, in daily contact, of three discordant elements—strikers, soldiers and mine guards—all armed and fostering an increasing deadly hatred which sooner or later was bound to find some such expression. The immediate cause of the battle was an attack upon the soldiers by the Greek inhabitants of the tent colony, who misinterpreted a movement of troops on a neighboring hill."

Concerning Louis Tikas, the Greek leader, who was killed in the battle, the report says: "During the evening Louis Tikas, James Filer and an unknown striker were taken prisoners. Lieut. K. E. Linderfelt swung his Springfield rifle, breaking the stock, over the head of Tikas." This incident followed a heated controversy between the lieutenant and the Greek.

Tried to Hang Tikas.

The report continues: "An attempt to hang Tikas went so far that a rope was produced and thrown over a telegraph pole. This lynching was prevented by Lieut. K. E. Linderfelt, who turned Tikas over to a noncommissioned officer, whom he directed to be responsible for his life. Shortly afterward all three prisoners were killed by gunshot wounds. The only bullet found in his body was of a kind not used by soldiers, although the two other wounds might have been made by Springfield rifle bullets of the uniformed men."

Relative to the suffocation and burning of two women and 11 children in the tent colony, the report says: "Eleven children and two women were smothered to death in a small pit under one of the tents. None of them was hit by a bullet. This pit was not large enough to support the life of such a number for many hours. The destruction of the pit made it a veritable death trap, and its inmates probably died from suffocation before the tents were burned. When found, there were no signs that the women and children had crowded into the entrance of the pit, as would have been the case had they attempted to rush out when the tent above caught fire."

Colony [illegible].

The report states that the colony was looted by participants [illegible] spectators in the battle, [illegible] rounds of ammunition were [illegible] John [illegible] killed or wounded [illegible] by a gunshot. Frank Snyder, a 12-year-old boy, was shot in the head. His father stated that evening that his boy had gone outside the tent and was shot in the forehead while facing the arroyo from which the strikers' fire came.

"The colony was not swept by machine guns. This is proven by the fact that the chicken houses, outhouses, tent frames and posts still standing in the colony exhibit no bullet holes, while the buildings and fences along the railroad track are riddled with bullet holes made by the machine gun."

Recommend Court-Martial.

The board recommended that a general court-martial be appointed to try all officers and enlisted men participated.

MILITIA AND MINE GUARDS ARE BLAMED FOR LUDLOW BATTLE

TRINIDAD, May 2.—The fire which destroyed the Ludlow tent colony on the night of April 20, causing the deaths of 13 women and children, was started by militiamen or mine guards, or both, according to the verdict rendered by the coroner's jury here late today.

No responsibility for the killing of Louis Tikas was fixed by the jury, which contented itself by finding that he, with seven other men, was shot in battle. It had been charged by strikers that Tikas received a blow on the head which fractured his skull.

The verdict of the deaths of women and children decided that:

"Cecilia Coste, Petra Valdes, Rograta Pedregone, Clovino Pedregone, Lucy Costa, Orafrio Costa, Elvira Valdez, Mary Valdez, Eulalia Valdez, Rodolfo Valdez, Frank Petrucci, Lucy Petrucci and Joe Petrucci came to their death by asphyxiation or fire, or both, caused by the burning of the tents of the Ludlow tent colony, and that fire on tents was started by militiamen under Major Hamrock and Lieutenant Linderfelt, or mine guards, or both, on the 20th day of April, 1914."

A separate verdict was rendered on the deaths of Alfred Martin, a militiaman, Premo Larsie, a nonunion combatant, and Louis Tikas, Frank Robino, James Tyler, John Bartolito and Charles Costa, strikers, and Frank Snyder, a 12-year-old boy. The jury found that they came to their death by bullet wounds in the battle between militiamen under Major Hamrock and Lieutenant Linderfelt, and mine guards, on one side, and strikers on the other, said battle held in or about Ludlow on the 20th day of April, 1914."

The jury was composed of Casimiro Cruz, foreman; George Stracy, M. W. Babcock, A. M. Nash, F. J. Doveton and J. W. Bartlett.

Pres. Wilson Will Use a Tent This Summer for Executive Office

WASHINGTON, May 2.—In anticipation that President Wilson will spend much of the summer in Washington, a large tent has been erected in the flower garden just south of the White house, and it is expected that the president will transact much of his business during hot days beneath its cool shade.

The tent is to be fitted with telephones, push buttons and the other essentials of a modern office. The long legislative program mapped out for congress, together with the Mexican problem, make it probable that the president will be unable to go away for a real vacation until late in the summer, if then.

HUERTA WILL RESIGN PREDICT THE REBELS

Villa Leaves for the Front; Revolution Now Won, Says Pesqueira

EL PASO, Tex., May 2.—Constitutionalist leaders here are convinced that Victoriano Huerta is ready to step down and out under pressure from his cientifico supporters who, with an accuracy of knowledge denied the masses in Mexico, regard complete rebel success as inevitable.

For this reason they will make no concessions before the Argentine, Brazilian and Chilean mediators.

WHOLE MEXICAN PROBLEM BEING CONSIDERED NOW

ALL FACTIONS WILL BE GIVEN HEARING

Gen. Huerta Is Very Anxious That Arbitration Prove a Success

WASHINGTON, May 2.—The three South American envoys who have undertaken the task of pacifying Mexico by diplomacy today made another decisive move in their plan by requesting the United States government, General Huerta and General Carranza to appoint representatives to confer with them in Washington.

Ambassador De Gama of Brazil and Ministers Naon and Suarez of Argentina and Chile, respectively, called on Secretary Bryan asking him to designate the United States representatives to attend conferences of the mediators. At the same time, they telegraphed the head of the government in Mexico City, as well as the rebel chief to the same effect.

No Report on Progress.

No announcement of the subjects to be considered by the representatives of the three parties to the mediation or of the powers or functions of the new envoys, was made except for the following brief statement, which was issued through the state department on the authority of the three diplomats.

"The mediators have delivered to this government and are sending out to General Huerta and General Carranza requests that representatives be appointed to confer with the mediators."

The proposal is to bring together specially designated representatives who would be conversant with the viewpoint of all factions in Mexico and the position of the South American envoys. The suggestion had been made to them from various quarters that much time would be saved and the problem of exchanging views simplified by such a process.

Get Views of All Parties.

While it is realized that the representatives of all parties probably would not be given authority finally to pass on points brought up in the discussion [illegible] to sound out their superiors so that before formal proposals actually are made, the mediators would have an idea of their probable reception.

The envoys felt confident tonight that the step they had taken would meet with favor by all concerned, believing there could be no objection to a move calculated chiefly to facilitate the progress of the work.

Thus far the responses from General Huerta and General Carranza have not been clear as to whether the differences between the United States and Mexico arising out of the Tampico incident alone would be considered by them or whether they would consent to a general discussion of the Mexican problem.

Bridges Difficulties.

By sending representatives here it is pointed out, such difficulties would be bridged over for in an informal conference with the mediators everything pertaining to Mexico could be discussed and even informally submitted before the stage of formal proposals was reached.

Incidentally it is known that the mediators intend to concentrate their attention on the broad subject of pacifying Mexico, hoping that the differences which arose between the Huerta government and the United States might become secondary, in view of a solution of the entire Mexican problem. Names of persons who might be acceptable to all factions in Mexico for the position of provisional president, pending a rehabilitating of the national government, in case the negotiations reach that stage, are being suggested to the mediators.

50 Workers to Attempt to Complete Fund of $16,000 Within the Next Week, if Possible

Ten thousand dollars is the mark now reached in the Chamber of Commerce campaign for the 1914 budget. This is a gratifying increase over the sum last reported and is the result of many subscriptions, some large and some small.

Vigorous work will be taken up again this week, and the progress of the last few days gives strong encouragement that the fund may be completed at an early date.

During the week several of the committee have been quietly working with splendid results, but many have deferred further active campaigning, with the result that they will now take hold of the campaign with vim and with a determination to bring the fund within sight of the final goal—$16,000—before another seven days has passed.

Chairman Willis R. Armstrong of the finance committee is organizing the campaign for further work, and he has been assured of the continued cooperation of the 50 workers until the solicitation is all completed.

Further detailed announcement as to the subscriptions will be made within a day or two.

ARMY IN CHARGE VERA CRUZ NOW

CIVIL GOVERNOR KERR GIVES UP OFFICE

Mexico City Again Is Quiet, Say Refugees Reaching the Coast

VERA CRUZ, May 2.—The governorship of Vera Cruz was handed over late today by Robert J. Kerr, who was recently appointed civil governor, to Brigadier General Funston. The ceremony was wholly formal.

The military government of the city, which has now been established, is, it is understood, to follow closely the lines of the civil government hitherto in existence, and as many Mexican officials as desire to accept or continue office are to be employed in the administration. The law courts have been requested to continue their functions in the same way as that to which they have been accustomed.

Military in Control.

Every branch of the city administration is, however, to be under military supervision. Such military and naval officers as held office under the civil governor probably will be retained, especially Commander H. O. Stickney, inspector of the port, and David Potter, paymaster of the Minnesota, who has been acting as collector of customs.

Lieut. Col. John B. Porter of the judge advocate general's department is to come from Washington to act in the capacity of legal adviser.

Robert J. Kerr, the retiring civil governor, may, it is thought, be identified with the new form of government, but entirely in his civil and private capacity, in which he will give such legal advice and information as may be required.

Mexico City Quiet.

According to a number of foreign refugees, mostly American citizens who left Mexico City yesterday and arrived here today, the federal capital was quiet and free from demonstrations by the mobs.

C. L. Baker, manager of the American Smelting and Refining company, who had been held prisoner at Aguas Calientes was among the passengers. He was released and taken to Mexico City with 110 employes of the company, about 40 of whom were sent to Coatzacoalcos.

Others on the train include Dr. Ulfelder and his wife.

Train Makes Good Time.

It was said that the reason the train came through so quickly was because attached to it was a private car bringing Rafael Pardo, an influential Mexican who, since the federal government seized the Mexican railway, has been acting as manager. His visit to Vera Cruz was in connection with his business interests.

Ernest Richter, an employe of the tube works in Mexico City, and an American citizen, was taken from the train by Mexican soldiers at Soledad yesterday and held prisoner because a pistol and ammunition were found in his possession. Consul William W. Canada is making an investigation.

Colonel Edward H. Plummer of the 28th infantry, has been appointed provost marshal and executive head of the new government. He reports to Brigadier General Funston.

U. S. ORDERS BOTH SIDES TO GIVE UP ARMS

C. F. & I. Guards at Walsenburg Surrender Arms to the Regulars

Story of Colorado Struggle Told in the Dark No. in Washington

TRINIDAD, May 2.—Forty-two guns, the first to be given up by either party in the Colorado labor war since the arrival of the federal troops, tonight are in the headquarters of Capt. C. C. Smith at Walsenburg. They were turned over to the regulars by the guards at the Colorado Fuel & Iron company's Walsen mine.

The surrender of the guns was the result of an agreement between Captain Smith and E. J. Matteson as the general manager of the company. Mr. Matteson agreed that the guards should give up their guns if the federal troops would take charge of the mines and assure the properties protection.

In accordance with this understanding, Lieutenant Crowley, with 10 men, went to Walsen, while Lieutenant Cunningham, with 30 men, went to the big coal camp at [illegible].

Find Guns in Office.

Lieutenant Crowley, upon his arrival found the 42 guns in the mine office, where they had been collected by the officers of the company. A few guards then on duty did not turn in their guns, but these are to be collected later.

At Rouse the guns were not turned over tonight, but are to be surrendered tomorrow.

Troops Patrol District.

Troops sent out from the central camp at Trinidad were in control of the situation at Walsenburg and Ludlow, and small detachments had been distributed at various mining camps in Las Animas and Huerfano counties.

Pending the arrival of reinforcements, Maj. W. A. Holbrook, in command of the second squadron, Fifth United States cavalry, has scattered his force of 300 men at strategic points in the two counties. No disorders had been reported since the arrival of the regulars.

John R. Lawson, strike leader, and Horace N. Hawkins, attorney for the United Mine Workers, said tonight that no arrangements had been made for disarming the strikers. They had a conference with Major Holbrook today, but Mr. Hawkins declared the subject of giving up arms was not brought up.

No definite arrangements had been made for the proposed mass meeting of miners to vote on the subject of disarmament, Mr. Lawson said.

The last of the state troops were removed from Ludlow tonight, after the place had been occupied by United

Speakers at Mass-Meeting Plead Cause of Woman's Rights; Ask Square Deal for All

"Resolved, That this meeting calls upon congress to pass immediately the Bristow-Mondell resolution which is now before it proposing an amendment to the United States constitution enfranchising women.

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent every member of the United States senate and house of representatives from this state."

After hearing short, snappy addresses on the question by representatives of the Progressive, Democratic and Socialist parties and of the women's suffrage movement, the 600 or more people who attended the suffrage meeting at the Opera house last night enthusiastically and unanimously passed the foregoing resolution proposed by Mayor McKesson. The meeting was the first of its kind held in Colorado Springs for some time—incidentally it was the best.

The Colorado Springs meeting was held in connection with similar demonstrations in practically every large city in the country. Its purpose, and the purpose of the others, was to arouse a more intense interest in the Bristow-Mondell amendment, now before the senate and if possible to bring such pressure to bear on the senators that they will pass the resolution. A similar resolution was lost in March by only 11 votes.

In proposing his resolution, Mayor McKesson read the Bristow-Mondell amendment, which is as follows:

"Section 1.—The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex.

Section 2.—That congress shall have power by appropriate legislation to enforce the provisions of this article."

Audience Shows Keen Interest.

Last night's meeting was a revelation to those who have long held that, because it has been in effect in Colorado for so many years, equal suffrage is now taken as a matter of course and there is no interest in this state. The crowd cheered the remarks of every speaker and manifested in every possible way its desire to join with leaders of the movement in less fortunate states and throughout the nation in securing the ballot for women.

Mrs. George A. Fowler presided at the meeting. Edward P. Costigan, Progressive candidate for governor this year, represented the Progressives, speaking on "Why a Federal Amendment." Congressman John A. Martin, representing the Democrats, spoke on "A Complete Democracy." Mrs. Agnes L. Riddle, a member of the state legislature, spoke on "Shoulder to Shoulder." BUILDING A STAGE BIGGER THAN ROME'S MIGHTIEST ARENA

STRAUSS PORTRAIT.

Platform for Production of Four-Night Stand Drama Will Cover 126,000 Square Feet---Three times Larger Than Famed and Ancient Colosseum's Stage

The ancients have been outdone again. History tells of the mighty works of the men of Rome, Greece and Egypt and guides of Europe "point with pride" to works which they call the wonders of the world. They tell of the gigantic stagw the ancients built and the mighty amphitheaters and defy the moderns to show anything like them.

While the [illegible] talking to the winter tourists in Europe, a few hard [illegible]-way-at-home Americans got together last winter and planned the biggest stage ever built to accommodate the largest theatrical troupe in history to play before an audience which will sit on the slopes of a natural amphitheater and have 7,000 a ton resistant [illegible] of the men who built their city.

The play will be given in Forest Park, St. Louis, on the former World's Fair grounds. Instead of being used for the slaughter of martyrs to the lions and for gladiatorial combats as the arena of the famous Colosseum of Rome was used, the stage for the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis will be the gathering of peaceful clans showing the history of the city from the time of the Mound Builders to the present.

The stage will be larger than any of the modern-day stages. The New York Hippodrome auditorium and stage together could be placed upon the stage now under construction in Forest Park at the foot of Art Hill, and there would be still room. The area of the stage is 126,000 square feet. The area of the arena of the famed Colosseum of ancient Rome is estimated at 42,150 square feet. The dimensions of the Colosseum seats and all are 515x612 feet. The dimensions of the Forest Park stage are 200x630 feet.

The Pageant and Masque will be given May 28, 29, 30 and 31.

In this play there will be 10,000 players—the greatest cast in the history of the theater. That is to say, the Cast Committee has enrolled about 10,000 men, women and children to take part.

It is anticipated that only about 7,500, of the 10,000 performers to be enrolled will be needed at each performance. But it will be necessary to have available understudies in case of sickness or inability of the regular players to take part in any of the performances.

CALLED MOST WONDERFUL OF NATURAL THEATERS.

Those who have seen the site upon which will be held the Pageant and Masque of Saint Louis have pronounced it the greatest and most wonderful of all natural theaters.

There will be a river 125 feet wide between the stage and the audience and the stage proper will be 630 feet wide and 200 feet deep.

"A World Site," Percy MacKaye, famous poet-dramatist, calls the location selected for the stage.

It is a world site, Mr. MacKaye said, because no other city possesses as a natural amphitheater of all the extraordinary advantages to be found at Art Hill. No city has within its borders an outdoor theater so large, so beautiful, and so convenient. Lorado Taft, the eminent sculptor of Chicago; Professor Burton of the University of Minnesota; Alfred Noyes, the English poet, and others versed in the art of pageantry who have recently seen the Art Hill site are enthusiastic in their praise of it and proclaim it ideal for the purpose for which it is to be used next May.

This is the first time in history that a drama has ever been presented on so large a scale.

Upon the slopes of the hill, thousands upon thousands of seats will be constructed, where the gentle rise of the ground is just sufficient to make each row of seats exactly the right height above the row in front. Thanks to Mother Nature, there need be no craning of necks to see every movement that is be[illegible] made upon the stage.

Seated in these tiers of benches, the spectators will be in a position to view the re-enactment of the city's romantic history precisely as if through the last 150 years they had occupied a point of vantage on the Illinois shore, where they could watch in comfort the unfolding of the absorbing events which have culminated in building up the big Missouri town.

The curved apron of the stage will leave between the spectators and the players a strip of water minutely corresponding to the bend in the Mississippi as it flows past St. Louis. Upon this mimic Mississippi will take place, with exceptional realism, the many important episodes which have made the river play so important a part in the upbuilding of the city of Pierre Laclede's founding.

There are enough romantic facts connected with this stage to make it fine material for a play in itself.

When completed, it will be worthy to rank as the long-sought eighth wonder of the world. It will be so large that all of the stages of the first-class theaters in St. Louis could be placed in one corner. It will be almost two ordinary city blocks in width at the rear, and will be semi-circular in shape in front, the diameter nearest the audience being about one ordinary city block across.

Near the rear will be an immense pit, in which will be hidden the band of 100 pieces and a chorus of several hundred voices. A great sounding board, 40 feet high, is to be erected immediately behind this pit, so that no note of the music will be lost to the audience.

When it is considered that this great platform will be constructed over the waters of the lagoon, some of the difficulties in store for the builders will be made apparent. It must be made strong enough to hold the 7,500 performers, and still light enough so that it may readily be torn away and the lagoon given back to the city unimpaired in beauty.

TROOPS OF HORSES WILL CROSS BOARDS.

Troops of horses will gallop across the boards, adding to the already tremendous strain put upon the flooring by the tons of weight of the performers themselves.

No such stage was ever before constructed. No such stage was ever before conceived. The ancient Greeks, who made of the out-of-door drama one of their finest arts, undoubtedly would gape in a highly unclassical way at the impressive manner in which St. Louis is preparing to stage its Pageant and Masque.

As many persons as are ordinarily employed in a big theatrical company will be at work for more than two months building this platform. It will be in use for not more than a week.

Then it will be torn down again. Its cost and trouble is to be paid for by enhanced civic pride.

Not only must the stage itself be made ready, but on the plain just behind it must be placed inconspicuously, but still conveniently, the houses which will be used as dressing rooms, and as a storing place for the properties and costumes.

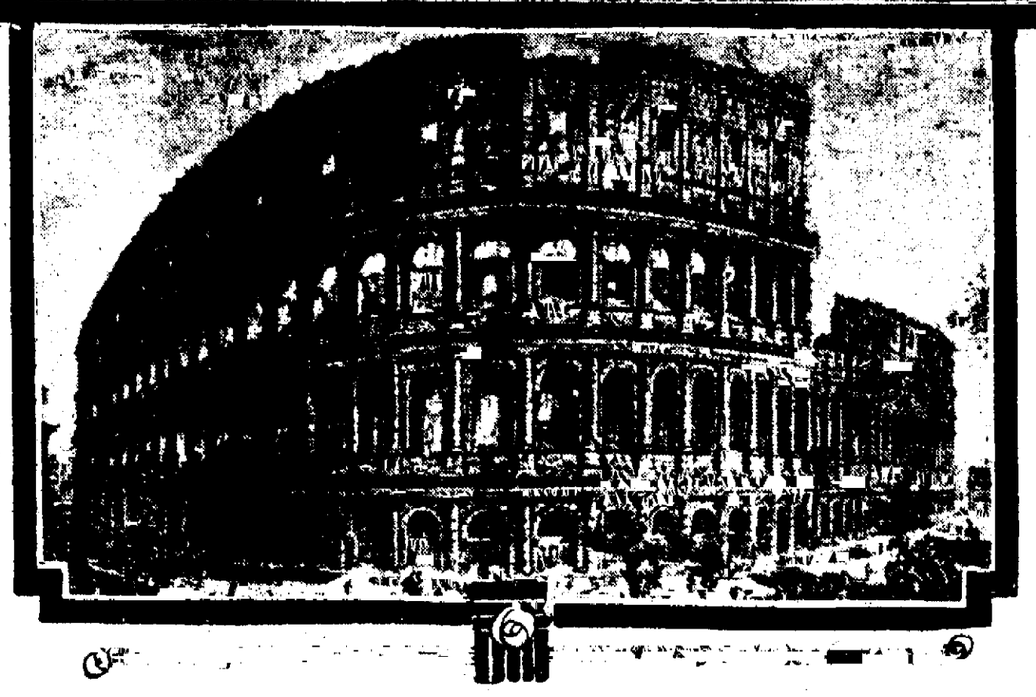

Tents will be used for this purpose as far as possible, but some of the properties to be displayed on the stage are extremely valuable, both in money and in historic association. These must be safely guarded from water, fire and from vandals.

Just behind the stage there is a double row of trees, which will offer a leafy screen from view the undecorative but highly necessary tent city.

There will be an encampment of 7,500 persons, which is a greater number than is found at any army post in the usual course of events. There must be quarters, in addition, for a battalion of call boys, electricians, stage carpenters, assistant stage managers, and general factotums.

Many interesting novelties in handling the light effects and other features of the production will be included in the equipment of the stage, the details of which are being worked out by Joseph Lindon Smith, who is to be the producer, in association with MacKaye, of the pageant-masque.

The great size of the stage, and the number of people concerned, make new methods necessary in arranging details of the stage.

The stage itself is only one of the many important details necessary in the preparation of the play. But from the extraordinary character of the platform, the fact that it is unique in history and is undoubtedly the pioneer, in its details, of a new form of stage craft, lends an interest and a zest to its construction which would not attend the prosaic building of an ordinary stage.

COLOSSEUM SCENE OF DEATHS OF MARTYRS.

The Colosseum, which was the scene of so many Christian martyrdoms, has recently been explored and excavations have revealed its mammoth size. The external elevation of the Colosseum consisted of four stages, each adorned with engaged columns of three orders of Greek architecture. The lowest three were arcaded, having eighty columns and as many arches. Those of the basement story served as entrances, seventy-six being numbered and allotted to the general body of spectators, while four, at the extremities of the building were the principal entrances.

The interior was divided into the arena and what was called the cavea.

The arena usually was of the same shape as the amphitheater. That is, it was built in the form of an ellipse and was totally surrounded by tiers of seats for the spectators. The present day stadiums and coliseums have been modeled after the great amphitheater of Rome and the outdoor theaters of Greece.

In the Colosseum there were three galleries separated from each other by terraces and walls. The lowest was appropriated to the equestrian order. They corresponded to the present day box seats. They were open to the sky but covered shelters were provided in the rear to which the occupants could retreat in case of rain. Other spectators sat in the higher galleries.

The height of the Colosseum is given as being from 160 to 180 feet. The seats in the interior do not rise higher than the level of the third order of the exterior, that is, about half the entire height of the building. It is believed there were seats higher up at one time and that they were destroyed. There is no sign of them now in the ruins.

Don't Leave the Receiver Off the Hook.

What is a "permanent signal?"

Every telephone subscriber ought to know; for generally it means trouble on a telephone line—trouble which users of the service themselves can usually prevent if they will make sure that the receiver is always placed firmly on the hook when the telephone line is not in use.

Yes, that's it! When you forget to replace your telephone receiver firmly on the hook after a conversation is completed it causes a "permanent signal"—a small electric light—to burn in front of the operator at the central office switchboard, and she must report the line out of order. No one can reach you during that time because the operator is unable to ring your bell.

Often the receiver is left off through carelessness, but more frequently a book or some other obstruction directly beneath the receiver prevents it from bringing down the hook firmly.

As a matter of fact, the service was interrupted on 20,000 Bell subscribers' lines in Philadelphia last month through their failure to replace the receiver securely upon the hook after completing a conversation.

Perhaps there is no more convincing way of gauging the effect of leaving a telephone receiver off the hook than by taking a half-hour trip through one of the big central offices in this city. There you will see the switchboards, which are studded with thousands of tiny electric lights which glow whenever a subscriber lifts his receiver to make a call.

When he fails to replace the receiver it is like failing to close an eye in sleep. There stares that little unblinking gleam of light despite the operator's efforts to reach the subscriber and shut it off.

The operators can neither signal the subscriber to tell him about it nor connect any one who calls. So a black cord is connected to the line and the wire chief is notified that it is out of order.

Ninety-three per cent of the service interruptions which he must correct are due to this cause. Many repairmen are kept busy performing this simple and perhaps unnecessary work—replacing subscribers' telephone receivers upon the hooks.

Strong Evidence.

Americans Ready to Return to Mexico

SAN FRANCISCO, May 2.—While conditions are nominally quiet on the Pacific coast of Mexico, and Americans are in no danger, any attempt to mediate the differences between the United States and Huerta will fail, eventually, in the opinion of 34 refugees from Mazatlan, who reached this port today on the navy repair ship Glacier. They came away, they said, because they were advised to do so by the American consul and Admiral Howard, and not because they felt themselves in any great peril. In fact, some of them are planning to go back on the first steamer.

Business conditions in western Mexico are very bad, they say, because the unsettled political conditions have killed credit and tied up the banks. Most of the refugees reached here in financial straits, and some practically were destitute except for the clothing they had with them.

All remained convinced that mediation must fail; that Huerta would not consent to being eliminated, and the Constitutionalists would not listen to anything less.

GIVE UP ARMS

All Must Disarm.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Secretary of War Garrison today instructed the United States soldiers, under command of Major Holbrook in the Colorado strike field, to disarm all parties to the present industrial war. His orders are sweeping and mean that both strikers and mine guards alike will have to surrender their arms.

The text of the proclamation is:

"Whereas, under existing circumstances, the possession of arms and ammunition by persons not in the military service of the United States tends to provoke disorder and to excite domestic violence and hinders the restoration of normal conditions of peace and good order, I do by the authority of the president of the United States, call on and direct all persons not in the military service of the United States, who have arms or ammunition in their possession or under their control, to deliver them forthwith to the office at the place herein designated. Receipts will be issued for all arms and ammunition so delivered. The above applies to individuals, firms, associations and corporations."

Garrison Explains Orders

In explanation of the proclamation Secretary Garrison made the following statement:

"I learn from the commander in Colorado that the use of firearms has been widespread. In the district from Walsenburg south, an area of about 400 square miles, there are at least 60 mines. They are located mainly in canons and are very difficult to reach. The strikers and those sympathizing with them have recently organized and armed themselves and the operators have had hundreds of mine guards who are also armed.

"The state troops in certain localities have served to aggravate the troubles. Certain stores in Walsenburg were broken into by some troops connected with the state organization and articles were taken.

"Conditions in the Canon City district are similar to those in the Walsenburg district.

"There was a very serious conflict at Ludlow, where women and children as well as men were killed and since that time the feeling has been excessively bitter. The commander in the field have, so far, exercised wise judgment, have allayed alarm and with the limited numbers now at their disposal are doing the best that is possible.

"It is hoped that the proclamation calling for all parties to give up arms will be done fully and promptly complied with, and a great source of danger then removed."

STRUGGLE IS TOLD IN STRIKE COMMUNICATION

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Messages telling the story of the futile efforts at Washington to bring about a settlement of the Colorado coal mine strike, including a telegram from John D. Rockefeller, Jr., saying the mining company officials in Colorado were "the only ones competent to deal with the question," were made public tonight.

Representative Foster, chairman of the house mines committee, who gave out the telegraphic correspondence, had been attempting to get Mr. Rockefeller, the operators and officials of the mines which the Rockefellers partly control, and the striking miners together, following a White house conference.

"In my conference with Mr. Rockefeller at his New York office," Dr. Foster announced, "I urged on him the importance of submitting the differences between the striking miners and the operators to a fair and neutral board of arbitration, believing the trouble could be peacefully settled.

Could Be Settled by Arbitration.

"I spent February in Colorado by direction of the house of representatives, investigating conditions. Mr. Rockefeller has not been there in 10 years. I have been over the property and have conferred with and examined men on both sides of the controversy. There is nothing in the differences which cannot be settled by arbitration.

"I understand, from the statement of William Green, secretary-treasurer of the international mine workers union, the demand that the union be recognized is not now the issue. The great question now confronting the strikers and owners is, 'Will you agree to submit the matter to adjustment by arbitration?' Mr. Rockefeller cannot evade his responsibility. He cannot set forth the excuse that he will not arbitrate the recognition of the union. The great anthracite strike in Pennsylvania, and also the recent West Virginia strike, was settled by men on both sides agreeing to abide by the decision of umpires.

Public Demands Peace.

"National sentiment and every instinct of humanity demand the prompt settlement of the Colorado strike. Nothing should prevent both strikers and Mr. Rockefeller from placing the case before a neutral board."

Dr. Foster telegraphed John D. Rockefeller, Jr., last Wednesday, saying:

"William Green, secretary-treasurer of the International Mine Workers union, makes public statement that mine workers will waive any recognition of the union or unionizing camps. Are you willing to enter into negotiations for settlement of strike on that basis and stop the killing of men, women and children? I strongly urge you to do so, and believe the strike can be ended without recognition of the union, and all other differences can be amicably settled. In my judgment, it is your duty to do so."

Mr. Rockefeller, replying the next day, said:

"Your telegram of ... We are ... night, but not acknowledged. Dr. ... telegraphed:

"Your telegram somewhat of a disappointment. We were in hopes that you would ..., the situation so grave and serious that you would give your personal efforts to prevent the further killing of men, women and children, and we renew the hope that you will reconsider and resolve to use your personal influence and authority to this humane end."

The reply of the Colorado mine operators, stating their position, was received in Denver the same day and was printed throughout the United States.

Foster's Answer to Operators.

Chairman Foster replied to this yesterday, telegraphing the coal operators:

"I am anxious for an arbitration, regardless of who is to blame."

He told them national sentiment demanded an adjustment and that the deplorable conditions the operators set forth should convince them of their duty to submit it to arbitration to stop destruction of life and property on both sides. At the same time, a supplementary telegram was received from the mine operators, calling attention to a conference on November 27, last, in the office of the governor at Denver, between their operators and representatives of their former employes then on strike, Governor Ammons submitted ... including right of the miners to ... their own check weighmen where they pleased, and, as a part of conclusion, calling attention to the state law on the subject, the ... saying:

"There is no law compelling the operators to recognize the union or to permit the employes to exact that recognition, but that the statutes provide for the right to join a union, if the miners so wish, without coercion or interference."

Would Waive Recognition.

The operators said they accepted these suggestions but the strikers refused, and that this attitude of the miners caused "all the disorder and bloodshed" since November 27.

Chairman Foster replied to this today in a telegram to Mr. Welborn, saying:

"I have always understood that the reasons the miners refused to accept the suggestion of settlement of the strike offered by the governor was because ... did not provide a means whereby ... could present their grievances.

"William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, in signed and published statement, says the question of unionizing the mines is not the issue. Why cannot all other questions now be submitted to arbitration, regardless of failure to adjust differences in ... past?"

ent purchasers of commodities in the same or different sections or communities "with the purpose or intent to thereby destroy or wrongfully injure the business of a competitor of either purchaser or seller shall be guilty of misdemeanor."

Holding Companies

The holding companies section prohibits any corporation engaged in commerce from directly or indirectly acquiring all or part of the share capital of a similar corporation, where the acquisition would eliminate or "substantially lessen" competition between the corporations or create monopoly of any trade in any section or community. The word "substantially" was a committee change.

Most of the other provisions in the bill are identical.

Representative Clayton of Alabama who today was confirmed as federal judge in Alabama, stated tonight he would remain in the house until it passed the bill. The house ways and means committee is expected immediately to name Representative Webb of North Carolina, next ranking member, as chairman of the committee. Mr. Webb, who today asked Mr. Clayton to remain to conduct the bill in the house, is in thorough sympathy with the administration's plans, and has co-operated in carrying out the president's ideas. He is a veteran member of the house and has been active on the committee.

ANTS CONQUERED A CITY

Julius Chambers in the Brooklyn Eagle.

The paragraphers throughout the country are having fun with the little red ants that Mrs. Morse brought over in a box from the other side, and the careless customs house officers allowed to escape. It is obvious that the jokesmiths knew very little about red ants. That box of ants may become a menace to the city of New York. The ruins of a splendid city, on the north coast of Jamaica remain as evidence of the devastation that red ants are capable of causing. An army of the insects invaded the city one day and drove away every living creature, animal and human, that could escape. Prisoners in the jails and bedridden patients in the hospitals were devoured. Not even a rat or chinchbug remained alive.

In Liberia and other parts of West Africa anthills as large as native huts are found. The large black ant is the builder of that sort of home. Such anthills are not unknown in this country, although they are rarely so large, but the black ant rarely invades houses. He is a scavenger, and is protected by most farmers. At the northern end of Greenwood lake I remember to have seen two such ant communities, with hills six feet high. ... I asked the manager of a nearby hotel why he didn't destroy the insects. He replied that they were of value in destroying roaches and in keeping away many pests except tarantulas, which are foes of the black ant and feed upon them.

SUFFRAGE DAY OBSERVED THROUGHOUT THE NATION

NEW YORK, May 2.—With hundreds of workers in automobiles and on foot throughout the five boroughs, Greater New York observed Suffrage day in open-air meetings in place of the annual parade. From a general meeting in Washington square, speakers and prominent members of the seven great suffrage organizations in New York scattered to different sections of the city, where they held neighborhood meetings.

All the organization held a mass meeting today in Carnegie hall under the auspices of the Women's Political union. Mayor Mitchel welcomed the delegates from all parts of the state. Senator Shafroth of Colorado and Miss Katherine B. Davis, commissioner of correction, were among the speakers.

BOSTON, May 2.—Fair weather following heavy rains, which had beaten down the dust, gave agreeable marching conditions for the woman suffrage parade here today. The 7,000 paraders included several hundred men. Among the visiting suffragists who accepted invitations to join in the march were Mrs. Bernard Shaw and Miss Lena Ashwell of England and Mrs. Moritz Barth, representing the suffrage state of Colorado.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—Local suffragists held a short parade through the central part of the city and a mass meeting in Washington square as their part in the nationwide demonstration today in the interest of votes for women. Several thousand women and scores of men took part. In Washington square stands were erected and addresses were made.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 2.—"Convicts, idiots, lunatics and women cannot vote," was the legend on one of the banners borne by St. Paul suffragists, who, several hundred strong, held a parade today which was followed by an open-air meeting and addresses by several leaders of the cause in this state.

KANSAS CITY, May 2.—Rain that began falling shortly before the start of the woman's suffrage parade prevented Kansas City's planned demonstration in favor of "votes for women" today.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 2.—The suffragist demonstration late today comprised a parade more than a mile long, followed by a mass meeting, addressed by several prominent local people. Several men's organizations also were in line.

U. S. CONSUL GARRETT,

Of Nuevo Laredo, Tex., whose headquarters were burned to the ground by the fleeing federals, after the latter had fired several scattering volleys across the Rio Grande into the town of Laredo. Garrett succeeded in saving all of his important documents, and led American residents of the town to safety.

W. M. Dunham in Springs After Making Thorough Examination of Grand Valley District; Product Is of High Grade

...the product of the DeBeque oil field, in which local men, comprising the Grand Valley Oil and Gas company are interested, compares very favorably with the best oil in the United States, including that of the Warren county field in Pennsylvania, is the ... of Walter M. Dunham, of ..., Okla., one of the foremost petroleum and natural gas experts in the country. Mr. Dunham is visiting in Colorado Springs in company with A. H. Lloyd, owner of oil land at DeBeque and a brother of E. W. Lloyd, head of the Grand River Oil and Gas company, which recently made a strike in the DeBeque field. They are at the Alamo hotel.

Dunham is thoroughly familiar with oil fields all over the United States, Canada and Mexico and is considered the best posted man on oil in the United States. He has just spent two weeks examining the DeBeque field.

"From my investigation," he said yesterday, "it appears that the DeBeque field is no different than any other in the United States. The pioneers who went to the field without the necessary equipment and handicapped by lack of finances paved the way for the present operators, who are to be congratulated on their courage and tenacity of purpose in sticking with the game. Now is the time for the ... oil game because they can profit by the experiences of others.

"DeBeque is an admirable place for an oil refinery to handle the high grade of oil there. There is plenty of water and two railroads to reach the market. The nearest refinery outlet is that at Florence and those in the Casper fields is at Aurora, Ill., or at Kansas City.

"The tests of the DeBeque oil show that it analyzes 42 per cent by the ... It runs from 18 or 25 per cent gasoline and 40 to 50 per cent in refined oil. Made into ... (a ... process) it will average 70 per cent and the price now set on the product, $2.25 a barrel, shows how good it is.

"The oil sands are porous and of medium texture and indicate long life to the field, which no doubt is a big one and will so be proved in time. In Pennsylvania there are thousands of oil wells that produce only from 10 to 20 barrels a day of oil of no better quality than that at DeBeque, that are making fortunes for their owners. This production has continued for from 20 to 45 years. The small oil well is the money maker because the gushers soon play out and break the markets for the time being.

"Petroleum is the greatest wealth-producing mineral in the world. It has made the greatest fortunes in the world and has brought here useful articles into the household at a low price than any other commodity. The industry is growing by leaps and bounds and there is a heavy demand for all that can be produced here. We had to import 16,-300,000 barrels from Mexico last year."

Lloyd is enthusiastic over the field and is planning to drill some wells in the near future.

"The Grand Valley's well is down about 1,400 feet and is being capably ... by C. ..., an expert oil man. They have already encountered oil-producing sands and with their up-to-date plant, the proposition looks mighty good."

The history of the DeBeque field is interesting. Lloyd tells the following: "The first well drilled in DeBeque was put down by a man named Blaine about 1890. This well was about a mile and a half northeast of DeBeque. United States Geologist Hayden had reported that there were strong indications of a big oil field there and Blaine, using the churn-drill, got down to about 500 feet, then he struck high quality gas and ... oil sands. He went to 1,000 feet and struck four oil sands but never completed his drilling.

"The two DeBeque wells, Nos. 1 and 2, struck oil and gas at about 800 feet but the holes were spoiled. The next well was known as the Coon Hollow well, and was located four miles northwest of DeBeque. It was never finished.

"The Buckeye wells were located south of the Grand river but No. 1 was spoiled and No. 2 was not finished and the machinery is still there.

"The Woods well, drilled a mile and a half west of town, got down to 1,100 feet where the drillers struck oil and put on a pump, getting about eight barrels a day. The gas there still ..., but those in charge thought that they had to get a large daily production and abandoned the well. That was 17 years ago.

"The Grand River Oil and Gas company's first well is a half-mile northwest of the Blaine property and struck a good oil sand at a depth of 1,133 feet. The casing collapsed and couldn't be recovered and it had to be abandoned. There is enough gas pressure, however, to supply a city of 2,000 people and now every 35 minutes the gas collects and sends up a spout of oil and water from 10 to 15 feet high. Every 79 hours the major flow becomes so strong that a burning stream of gas and oil is sent into the air to the height of 200 feet.

"The second well, which is completed, struck the 100-barrel gusher at 1,980 feet. Water troubles were encountered but the pump is now working and it is hard to estimate the output. The salt water trouble is now nearly overcome and is identical with that encountered in the big oil fields in the east."

Mr. Dunham has been in the Salt Creek oil fields in Wyoming hundreds of times in fact, was there 25 years ago and is a warm personal friend of "Daddy" Stock of Salt Creek oil field fame. He declares that the Salt Creek field is a wonder and that its vast possibilities are not realized by the general public even in spite of the remarkable showing it has made since it was developed on a large scale by Colorado Springs men.

Mr. Dunham writes a great deal for oil and technical journals.

GOLDMARK'S TONE POEM, SAMSON, HIGHLY PRAISED

... Composition of Springs ... Writer ... Critics and Audiences ...

By LESLIE ...

A ... was presented in New York ... by Rubin Goldmark, for several years director of the Colorado College Conservatory of Music, was presented by the Boston Symphony orchestra under the leadership of the well-known musician, Dr. Muck. That one of the first musical organizations in the country should have produced this new American composition, and on the same evening works by George W. Chadwick and Paderewski, is especially interesting to residents of Colorado Springs.

Mr. Goldmark lived here for years and indeed is here that most of his other works were written. On the autograph score of this new work—"Samson"—is inscribed "August 11, 1913, Cheyenne mountain ..., Colorado Springs, Colo."

The work was received enthusiastically by the audience and the New York ... the following day was filled with favorable ... by the best known musical critics. Mr. Goldmark's fellow artists ... in their praise of a work which they declare is really great and will live.

This is the kind of a contribution Colorado Springs makes to the world. Mr. Goldmark renewed his health and energy while living here and on his return to New York soon became a force in the musical life of that city. Recently, by a special request, he prepared and gave two orchestral lectures for the Philharmonic society of New York. These lectures were supported and illustrated by the full Philharmonic orchestra, under the leadership of Joseph Stransky. As evidence of the appreciation in which they were held, the society presented Mr. Goldmark with a large silver loving cup.

Among the critics who so favorably reviewed Mr. Goldmark's work were Mr. Finch in the Evening Post, Mr. Aldrich in the Times and Mr. Henderson in the Sun. The Tribune and the New York American were equally enthusiastic. Finch, in the Evening Post, said in part:

In depicting such scenes in tone, Mr. Goldmark shows himself a thorough craftsman and what is infinitely more important, an inventor of themes that have individuality. The orchestral colors are even more glowing and varied than in his 'Hiawatha.'

"The audience was enthusiastic and after Dr. Muck had been thanked in the usual way, all eyes were turned to the box in which the composer sat. He had to get up and bow repeatedly. It was an incident which recalled the proudest episode in the history of the New York Philharmonic, when Dr. Dvorak was applauded after the first performance anywhere of the New World Symphony orchestra under Anton Seidl."

Damaged

Several of the white marble markers on the old Ute trail, extending west into the mountains from Manitou, have been damaged so badly by men using them as targets as to make necessary new stones, according to Joseph Hiestand of Manitou, who recently made a trip over the trail. In several instances the markers have been almost entirely shot away. Others are chipped completely around the edges. The practice of using them as rifle targets apparently has been in vogue for some time.

The markers were placed on the trail, said to be the oldest Indian trail in the country, about three years ago by the El Paso County Pioneer society. Chief Buckskin Charley and his band of Utes assisted in marking the trail.

SWEDISH SOCIETY TO HEAR TALK BY DR. C. P. EKLUND

The Rev. Carl P. Eklund, pastor of the Swedish Methodist church, Denver, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of the Swedish Anti-Tuberculosis Society of Colorado Springs at the Swedish Baptist church next Friday evening. He is an interesting speaker and the local men in charge of the meeting are anxious that all Scandinavians in this city hear him speak.

The society has been organized since October and a report read at its last meeting showed it to have a membership of 92. About $50 has been raised by the society since its organization, one-half of which has been donated to the Swedish National sanatorium at Denver, the other half being given to needy ones who are victims of the white plague.

The purposes of the society are to care for the sick and to educate the Swedish people in preventive measures.

Season Opens on Bills for Easter Finery Milliners and Modistes Ready for the Chase

By EARL POTTER.

Invitations to one of the largest of post-Easter receptions were issued Friday and Saturday by the Colorado Springs milliners and haberdashers. The affair will be entirely stag, with the exception of a few widows and single women, and will continue during most of May. The event will be held in the shops of the respective hosts and the cashiers of the various firms will form the receiving line. All invitations must be presented at the door, and favors of small discounts will be given early guests. Those invited are expected to contribute much to the occasion.

Yes, Edgar, you have guessed it! Bills for Easter clothes came due May 1. And truly, the real celebration of Easter will be occasioned by a receipt for an Easter bill marked paid. Many a fond hubby or parent is thinking more of Easter today than he did on April 12.

But the women are not the sole occasion for the post-season celebration. The new felt hat with the bow in the back, the raglan overcoat and the babbling black and white suit also are still unpaid for by many, if the books of the storekeeper carry figures that do not lie.

There is nothing to bring up memories like a well proportioned Easter hat or clothes bill. It is a link between the debtor and the past. By the time the bill falls due in May the clothes which precipitated the charge are already on the shelf. Especially is this true when the bill is for a woman's hat. An Easter hat, like a toy circus balloon, is at its best only on the day when first shown. Each succeeding day sees the attraction fade, and ere many days have passed the thing has lost its pristine glory.

No man, however, if he is married, would be happy without a bill for an Easter hat on May 1. He knows that each one of his friends will have a bill and that if upon being asked concerning his bill, he should have to admit he had none, he would be shunned with as much alacrity as a spring onion eater. To be minus an Easter hat bill on May 1 would mark a man as being mean to his wife.

One feature about an Easter bill is the surprise element. Many a man becomes so absent minded that he forgets Easter clothes by May 1. It is this class of humanity that gets the full enjoyment of the first of the month following the spring clothes debut. Countless numbers from their ranks are so fascinated and surprised by their Easter bills that they lose enthusiasm over a trip which they were planning to make to the city, or a new pipe they were going to buy. Many of them on recovering from the first mild surprise of the statement find themselves the possessors of a handsome set of bright red figures at the bottom of a column in their bankbooks.

Easter hats as a rule are plenty loud enough to be able to speak for themselves, but they do not. They don't have to. The milliners make statements for them.

MEAT SUPPLY GREAT QUESTION IN ENGLAND

U. S. Tariff Law Affects the Islands; Competition for Foodstuffs Keen

LONDON, May 2.—England is anxiously looking over her sources of meat supply and wondering if fresh foods are soon to be denied her. Meat is mounting in price. There is today much public discussion of the meat question. Meat dealers are almost a unit in predicting that their commodity will soon cost Britishers even more.

The causes for it are world-wide in their operation. The world's population is increasing, and the number of meat eaters is increasing in a greater ratio than the population. On the other hand, the areas which furnish supplies are becoming more restricted every year. Most of them have been already occupied.

There is some talk about Rhodesia and the South African union being pressed into the service of the world's fl... eaters, but, before this can happen on any large scale, the tsetse fly and the rinderpest will have to be eradicated.

One reason for the increased prices is to be found in the new United States tariff. Two years ago no meat was sent from the Argentine to the states, but since January 1 of this year Uncle Sam has bought 199,000 quarters of beef from the estancias of the River Plate.

The Swift beef company is spending a million of money in putting up a refrigerating plant in the Ross river district in Queensland, and, as Brisbane is nearer to San Francisco and Vancouver than Buenos Aires is to New York, there is every reason to believe that North America will become an active competitor with this country for Australian meat. There is also reason to suppose that some of the Argentine meat which comes to this country is diverted to New York.

The improved condition in the meat ... will naturally be welcomed by ... the ... Islands, ... but, unfortunately, ... are faced with ... of ... and south ... which have ... trade just ... of this critical period, when the Scotch and ... Argentine ... are ...

The wholesale value ...e 1913 importation, at point of ex..., was over $15,393,000, while in all ...ability the consuming public of the ...ed States expended over $40,000,- for this delectable fruit."

...ith the increased cost of living ow...ing to the proportionately diminishing food supply, the banana comes forward as an important factor in the world's economy. While its use as a food is limited in this country almost entirely to its consumption in a raw state, in localities where it grows it is frequently fried or baked and is also used for making flour, delicious confections, etc. Placed in a closed barrel, and allowed to ferment, bananas produce an excellent vinegar, while from the ripe fruit a delightful cordial is obtained. Dried ripe bananas are said to be superior to figs, weigh only about one-tenth as much as the bunches and occupy correspondingly less space in shipment. In other words, the banana has many kinds of food values as yet but little known in the country which consumes the most.

Banana culture is really one of the oldest of industries. It seems to have been known almost since the origin of the human race. Long before the dawn of history in the old world, perhaps before the old world rose from the waters, man lived on the fruit of the musas. The banana was generally considered a native of southern Asia, and to have been carried into America by Europeans, until Humboldt threw doubt upon its purely Asiatic origin, quoting early authors who asserted that the banana was cultivated in the Americas long before the conquest. It is claimed that bananas formed one of the staple foods of the Incas of Peru who lived in the warm and temperate regions of the Montana. It seems that almost all tropical countries claim the fruit as indigenous.

On the American continents bananas are successfully grown through 50 degrees of latitude, from Tampico, Mexico, 25 degrees north, to Asuncion, Paraguay, 25 degrees south. Cultivation of the fruit is practically restricted to the eastern coast line, for the banana is one of the thirstiest of plants, and cannot be expected to produce its maximum in districts where there are less than 100 inches of annual rainfall.

The banana has a prodigal method of propagation, for before the parent stalk and fruit have matured new ones spring up. These are offshoots that grow from the root of the original plant, resembling the sprouts from the "eyes" of a potato, and each in turn becomes a parent stalk with its fruit. It follows that unless most of the constantly appearing new plants are cut out (which is the practice) the first stalk in a few years will become the center of a ... jungle. The plants grow to a height of from 15 to 25 feet, spreading in all directions, until the soil is overburdened with a mass of stalk and leaf growth and stunted fruit is produced.

The plant will grow with wonderful rapidity under favorable circumstances. Within a period of six or seven weeks the two ... will more than double in size, and a month or so later the leaves cease to unfold and a spike appears out of the center of the crown. This is the future stalk of the bunch and carries a huge red blossom at the end. It develops rapidly, bending more and more until it has completely turned upon itself, so that the bananas grow end up, or in a position the reverse of that in which they are seen when hung up for sale. From seven to 12 months after the blossom appears the fruit is ready for the gatherer.

In cultivation four suckers, or shoots, are usually allowed to grow in one hill, and their graduation is so arranged that while the oldest is bearing fruit the next is in blossom, the third is half grown, and the last is just coming up from the ground. The plantation yields a continuous harvest for years without replanting. In planting for the market about 200 hills are allowed to the acre. Sometimes the number is increased to 225, having 900 stalks, yielding about 300 marketable bunches a year. It is said that the cost of production of bunches that sell for 30 cents is about from 10 to 15 cents, the average profit per acre being about $50 annually.

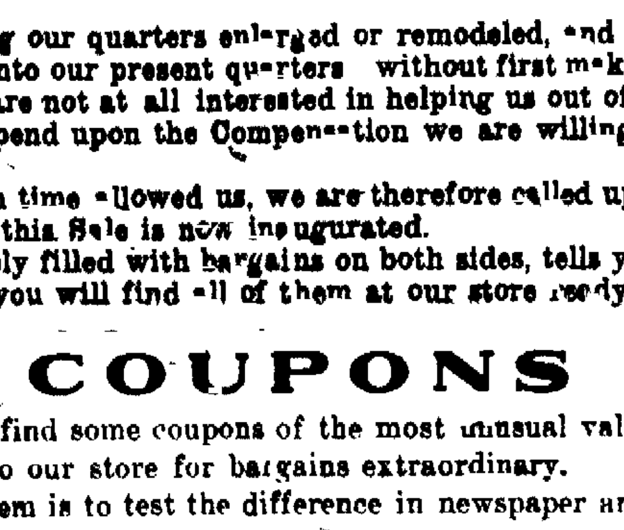

In 1899 banana trading was organized on modern commercial lines. Over 150 vessels have since been built for this trade and are plying between American ports and the tropical fruit belt. Wireless telegraph stations along the Central American coast keep in touch with the banana fleet that is moving in a steady procession up and down the Caribbean. When a steamer starts from a United States port to secure its cargo a cable is sent notifying the growers to prepare for the cutting of the crop. About 36 hours before the expected arrival of the vessel orders are sent to the plantations, notifying them to cut fruit for delivery on the specified date. The day before the steamer is due trains are made up at the fruit ports and sent out to pick up the fruit, these trains being so timed that steamers will not be delayed waiting for cargo. On the morning of the cutting the first out on the plantations are the "cutters," who go up and down the long avenues of banana plants armed with long palm poles having broad steel blades at the ends, with which the plant is half severed at about eight feet from the ground.

The weight of the fruit bends the top of the plant down slowly, when the bunch is cut from the stem by a machete. Following the cutters come the picking-up gangs, who deliver the fruit at the receiving platforms along the railroad tracks. An inspector counts and grades the bunches, rejecting those that show signs of ripening or are undersized or bruised. As soon as the train is loaded it is rushed to the port when steam conveyors reach from the open hatchways of the vessel to the doors of the cars, and a cargo of 20,000 bunches can be loaded and stowed in less than 10 hours. On the voyage to final destination the fruit is constantly closely inspected, wind sails and ventilating fans being used to maintain the proper temperature.

When the vessel arrives at an American fruit wharf the work of discharging the cargo to the ventilated cars commences. Every bunch is recounted, regraded, and reinspected. Fruit that shows signs of ripening is sent to nearby markets. Fully ripe fruit is sold to dealers and peddlers in the city. In a few hours the shipment has been discharged and cleaned up, and the vessel is ready for the return trip.

STREET CAR GALLANTRY

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The car was crowded—a habit that cars usually have at 5 o'clock. The ... stood in the aisle a fate that often attends women who board cars late in the afternoon.

The woman stood for some time and a considerable distance. Then a man arose and motioned her to his seat.

"Thank you," said the woman.

"Not at all," said the man.

She didn't like the man's tone. It lacked warmth. It sounded like the voice of a man who had a secret reason for doing a reluctant kindness.

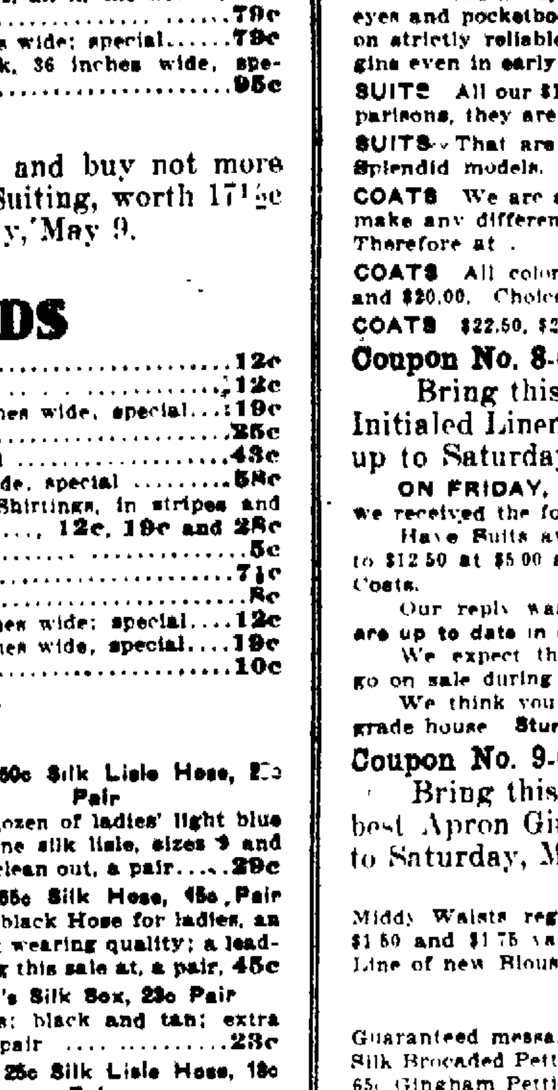

Why did he give her the seat? Did she look haggard, old, decrepit? Or was it because she had appeared coquettish and flippant and noticeably gay? She knew a street car was no place for her spring suit. Yes, it was a little demonstrative. Oh, if she only knew why the man had broken over the unwritten masculine rule and released his seat to her!

It took something less than 20 seconds for these jumbled thoughts to rush through her mind.

And then the man reached forward and pressed a button.

He had given her his seat because he was going to leave the car.

Such is that humorous medley we call life in a great city.

IT OPENED YESTERDAY WITH SPLENDID RESULT. Even though the Rainmaker prevented us from getting our mammoth circulars delivered.

OUR DENVER STORE IS RUNNING ON ITS LAST LAP

It is to be discontinued within the very near future, and Colorado Springs has been decided upon to amalgamate all interests.

With no immediate hope of getting our quarters enlarged or remodeled, and knowing it is next to impossible to crowd the cream of our Denver stock into our present quarters without first making holes in every department on the double quick. We know full well you are not at all interested in helping us out of our trouble, unless we can make it of interest to you, and that it must depend upon the Compensation we are willing to bestow, how quickly necessary room can be acquired.

In order to accomplish this feat in time allowed us, we are therefore called upon to make the most ruthless sacrifices, or defeat the purpose for which this Sale is now inaugurated.

Our double page circular, completely filled with bargains on both sides, tells you more than we can crowd in here. Should you fail to get one, you know you will find all of them at our store ready to be taken home.

COUPONS

Scattered on this page you will find some coupons of the most unusual value.
Cut them out and bring them to our store for bargains extraordinary.
Our main reason for running them is to test the difference in newspaper and circular advertising.

SOCIABILITY RUN NOW SCHEDULED TO START FROM SPRINGS WEDNESDAY

The sunshine of yesterday brought a smile to the face of all Colorado Springs people, but upon the faces of one group of men the smile was especially broad. They were the men who are going on the sociability run to Texas and few of the other states to the south.

Although the start will not be made tomorrow morning as scheduled, because of the bad weather of last week the local men who are to go on the journey are still enthusiastic and confidently expecting to get away Wednesday morning at 7 o'clock from the Garden of the Gods. A meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms tomorrow afternoon, when the weather man will be brought on the carpet and promised eternal friendship and a wiping out of all old scores if he will guarantee in return fair weather for the next three weeks.

In the meantime the men who will represent this city and [illegible] are brushing up their khaki uniforms and oiling and stripping their cars in order to be ready to take to the road at a moment's notice, should word come any time from the Pueblo and Trinidad parties who are going on the run, that the sun is shining and the time for the start has arrived.

The postponement will not affect the itinerary in any way and the running schedule will remain the same. The route will include territory in five states and cover about 2,500 miles. In all more than 100 stops will be made in towns of various size and many other smaller places will be passed through. As shown by the accompanying map of the route, the first stop will be Canon City.

The party will not be up to its full quota of cars until Trinidad is reached. After departing from that city the tourists will soon leave Colorado soil, not to see this state again until three weeks later when they will come in over the eastern line from Syracuse, Kan.

The tour, it is said, will establish a precedent in the touring world, as being the longest run of a similar nature ever made anywhere in the United States or Europe.

American Is Losing His Mind in Filthy Prison in Mexico

NOGALES, Ariz., May 2.—A story of cruelties alleged to have been inflicted upon James Byington, a native of Boise, Ida., were told by refugees who arrived from Sonora today. Byington is said to have been confined for nine months in an unspeakably filthy prison at Cumpas, Sonora, Mex., without a trial. The refugees report that the American is confined in a dark adobe cell, surrounded by filth and vermin, clad in rags and half starved. They allege prison officials refused to permit Byington to receive food sent by sympathetic Americans, and that the prisoner, in consequence of this treatment and surroundings, rapidly is losing his mind.

The charge against Byington, on which it is said he has been imprisoned without a trial since August 9, 1913, involves a shipment of ore from a mining claim. It is said he located a claim near Cumpas and on the assumption that papers legalizing the claim were on the way from Mexico City, prepared a car of ore for shipment. He was arrested on a charge that he had not established his claim. The judge at Cumpas, in denying Byington an immediate trial, is said to have said he was not very sure that [illegible] the value of the ore. This, it is said, was not yet been done, but the value of the car it is claimed is [illegible].

"An American who arrived today said he saw that the prisoner half naked, [illegible] slowly starving to death [illegible] dark cell like a dumb animal," said the refugee. "There was a Mexican, charged with murder, in the cell with him. The smell was awful. Byington could give no intelligent information about himself and looked at me with glassy eyes.

"I attempted to send some wholesome food to Byington but the jefe would not permit him to receive it. He explained five cents a day was provided for each prisoner and that this was sufficient."

Previous reports had been made to Consul Simpich at Nogales and it is said that demands have been made by the state department that Byington either be released or given a trial. It is asserted here that these demands have been shifted from one Mexican authority to another. Governor Maytorena of Sonora it is said passed the responsibility to General Obregon, Constitutionalist chief, who in turn is alleged to have referred the subject to General Carranza. The latter is said to have replied:

"The case is in the hands of the supreme civil court and justice will be done."

In the meantime there is no "supreme civil court" and Byington remains in prison.

3 BURN TO DEATH IN OAK CREEK FIRE

Saloon and Boarding House Destroyed; Said to Have Been Incendiary

DENVER, May 2.—Three men were burned to death early today in a fire that destroyed the Watts saloon and boarding house at the Oak Creek mine, in Routt county, according to reports received at the governor's office.

The dead:
ROBERT DOGGETT.
JUDGE SNOW.
One unidentified man.

The governor had been unable to confirm a report that a woman and child, supposed to have been in the back room of the boarding house, had lost their lives.

The governor's informant stated that Watts previously had received warning by telephone to close up or he would be burned out. His place was the "hang-out" for nonunion men.

It was reported to the governor that oil had been poured over the front and back doors of the place before ignited. The Oak Creek miners did not go to work today, but those at the Morrison mine, a neighboring property, continued operations. Miners are guarding the properties.

An appeal was made to the governor for troops but, owing to the situation of the Oak Creek district, it was not known how soon protection could be furnished.

Oak Creek is in northwestern Colorado.

300 ARMY HORSES TO BE SHIPPED WEST

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., May 2.—Three hundred horses, constituting the mounts of the second squadron, Fifth United States cavalry now on duty at Trinidad in the Colorado strike zone, were shipped to Trinidad by fast freight today in response to an order from the war department. Major W. A. Holbrook, commanding the federal troops at Trinidad, said it had become necessary to divide his dismounted force and [illegible].

LUDLOW BATTLE, SAYS MILITIA

[illegible] in the treatment and killing of [illegible], and the burning and looting of the tent colony; that the legislature establish a permanent state constabulary so that the 'young men of our National guard may be relieved from [illegible] in riot duty with a people [illegible] among them a ferocious foreign [illegible] savagely in fight we [illegible] in the killing of Major [illegible] while under Red Cross protection and the maiming and mutilation of Privates Martin, Hockersmith and Chavez."

The report continues: "We strongly urge the state and federal governments to proceed at once to the apprehension and punishment of all persons engaged as instigators or participants in the treasons, murders, arsons and other acts of outlawry in this state since the battle of Ludlow.

Strikers Anticipated Battle.

"We find that in apparent anticipation of a preparation for the battle of Ludlow, rifle pits were prepared by the strikers on the south side of their colony, along the country roads and close to the tents, and along the west side of the colony. These rifle pits show conclusively the careful and deliberate preparation of the strikers for the battle, and their location along the front and side of the colony, nearest to the militia camp, was such that when used they could not be defended against without firing into the colony. Such care had the strikers themselves for their women and children that those pits were located where any return of the fire from them would be drawn directly into the colony itself."

Dealing further with the question of women and children in the camp, and the burning thereof, the report says: "Major Hamrock tested his range with the machine guns and sent them directly into the first tents of the colony. At the same time, the strikers' fire drew a return fire upon the nearest tents in the southwest corner of the colony that set them on fire.

Thought Women Safe.

"It could not be supposed that any women, children or other noncombatants remained in the colony itself. The women and children had been [illegible] departing early in the morning, and it was impossible to believe that the strikers would draw the fire of the opponents from all sides into the colony if any women and children remained there. As one tent caught fire after another, some of the men, having nearly reached the tent colony, heard the screams of women and called to the men whom they saw firing from between the tents to get their women out. The only answer was the words: 'You go to [illegible]' spoken with a foreign accent and accompanied by a rain of shots.

"The men in the colony being driven back, and the presence of women thus being known, Captain Carson, Lieutenant Linderfelt and other officers and men made a dash in among the burning tents for the purpose of rescuing women. At first they took several women from the tents, none of which were burning and some not; they then discovered subterranean pits beneath many of the tents, and that some of them were stored with human occupants.

Pits Increased Difficulties.

"When the pits were discovered, the difficulty of getting out the women and children increased. Lieutenant Linderfelt took a woman from one tent who could not speak English, but she made him understand that he must return. She went back with him and indicated one of those holes in the ground, from which the lieutenant took two little children in the nick of time. Captain Carson related that when he was in an apparently open-floored tent he heard the crying or whining of something living beneath. He had to chop away the floor, which was nailed down upon these people, to get them out.

"During the whole time that this rescue work was going forward, the colony was under fire, and by taking the greatest risk of destruction by making targets of themselves in the light of the burning tents the uniformed militia did noteworthy work.

"We find that the work of rescuing some 25 or 30 women and children by Lieutenant Linderfelt, Captain Carson and the squads under their command was, under all the circumstances, truly heroic, and must stand out boldly in contradistinction to the abandonment of the helpless women and children by their own people and the subsequent efforts to kill their rescuers, regardless of the safety of the rescued."

Death Chamber Discovered.

Dealing particularly with the death of the two women and 11 children, the report sets forth: "It was supposed by the officers, after a thorough search of the colony, that all of the remaining women and children had been taken out. The events proved that one of the pits had been missed in the search. In this pit were discovered two women and 11 children, all dead. This chamber of death measured in feet eight by six by four and one-half. When found it was almost closed. If [illegible] and children were placed in this pit at any time during the morning, it is our belief that they died of suffocation hours before the tents caught fire."

The manner in which the tent colony was destroyed is explained as follows: "We find that the tents were not all destroyed by accidental fire. Men and soldiers swarmed into the colony and deliberately assisted the conflagration by spreading the fire from tent to tent. Beyond a doubt it was seen that the fire would destroy the whole colony. This was accompanied by the usual loot. So deliberate was this burning and looting that we find that cans of oil found in the tents were poured upon them and the tents lighted with matches."

Death of Martin.

Concerning the death of Private Martin and the subsequent mutilation of his body, the report sums up the incident by [illegible]: "It is shocking to think of our Colorado youth defending their state and exposed to practices of savagery unheard of, save in the half-believed tales of the Sicilian Camorra. "The discovery of Martin's body, thus mutilated, we find to [illegible] effect of [illegible] his comrades to a frenzy, which may account for [illegible] things that took place later near the tent colony itself."

The report tells of the battle, its inception, conduct and conclusion. It declares that the Greeks of the colony had planned to attack the soldiers and destroy the mine property on the preceding Sunday, the Greek Easter, but drunkenness on the part of the strikers prevent it and the attack then was set for the following Tuesday.

Military Move Misconstrued.

Monday morning, says the report, Loui [illegible] was asked for the release of a nonunion miner thought to have been hidden in the colony. It was refused, and Major Hamrock, believing force might be necessary, ordered the detachment of militia from Cedar Hill to Water Tank hill, about which most of the fighting took place. This mobilization, says the report, was construed by the strikers as a preparation to attack the colony, secure the nonunion man and search for weapons.

The Greeks, said the report, took their arms and assumed positions of attack. The militia was not allowed to fire upon the assembling Greeks, it says, until several minutes after the Greeks had begun to fire. A detailed pen picture of the battle followed in the report.

Sentiment Ran High.

In conclusion, the report states:

"We find that the dominant feeling among the refugee colonists on Monday night, and before a second thought came to them or was suggested to them, was resentment toward the Greeks for starting the battle. This resentment prevailed even over their resentment against the soldiers, but the incident was later made a candle to inflame the minds of these deluded men to the acts of slaughter and rapine that followed throughout the state.

"It was made the excuse of many bold and defiant utterances and acts of treason against the state by certain union leaders, who had the opportunity by their influence and authority to prove themselves really great and good men and worthy citizens. Instead, by all means of exaggeration, incendiarism and treasonable practices, they made of the battle of Ludlow a means of organizing a real rebellion, with its attendant awful consequences.

Ultimate Responsibility Passed.

"We do not presume even to hint where the ultimate responsibility lies in the present strike. It may be that the coal operators or the union are wholly to blame for the conditions that have made such results possible; it may be that both sides are partly at fault. But the conditions have been brought about, and being actually existent, whatever may be the cause, we feel that for their treason and rebellion against organized society, with the horrible consequences of anarchy that followed, certain union leaders must take the responsibility before man and God."

Major Boughton also filed a recommendation, not concurred in, that the strikers should not be allowed to rebuild their colony at Ludlow.

SPRINGS TO ENTERTAIN 100 GREETERS IN JUNE

Arrangements for Looking After Special Trainload of Hotel Men Made Last Night

Arrangements for the entertainment of delegates to the Greeters national convention to be held in Los Angeles in June, who will pass through this city June 4, were completed at a meeting of hotel men at the Acacia last night. The delegates will spend an afternoon and evening here and more than 100 of them will arrive on a special train. The meeting last night was attended by local members of the Greeters, hotel and scenic attraction men and representatives of Denver and Pueblo hotels.

The entertainment planned will consist of an auto ride over the Crystal park trip, which will be given by the manager of the route, W. C. Dotterer; an auto ride through the Garden of the Gods, starting from Manitou; a 6 o'clock dinner at the Antlers, and a visit to the Stratton park dance. The special train carrying the delegates will leave Colorado Springs at 5 o'clock the morning of June 5. M. I. Madden, chief clerk at the Acacia, who has been appointed as national delegate to the convention from Colorado, will leave with the party.

The Greeters is an association of hotel managers and clerks and the men who will stop here promise to be the livest bunch that has visited this city for some time. It is the intention of the local hotel men to show them such a good time that they will never stop thinking and boosting Colorado Springs.

The out-of-town hotel men at the meeting last night included the following Denver people: H. H. Brown of the Albany, C. O. Jones of the Adams, Art Gird of the Bulletin and Jack Condon of the Auditorium. Other out-of-town men were Chief Clerk E. E. Martin of the Congress hotel, Pueblo, and Lee Moffet, a San Francisco hotel man.

Aside from the local Greeters and W. C. Dotterer the following hotel managers were present: W. S. Dunning of the Antlers, George Elstun of the Alamo, J. W. Atkinson of the Acacia and H. Hoyt Stevens of the Alta Vista.

MORE MEN KILLED IN COLORADO THAN MEXICO

SCAMMON, Kan., May 2.—"Our boys in blue have gone to Mexico to compel the Mexicans to salute the Stars and Stripes, while out in Colorado they are tearing the flag out of our hands and shooting men for daring to proclaim what it stands for," John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America, declared in an address here today.

"More men have been killed in Colorado in the last two weeks than in Mexico," President White continued. "As to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., he has lost interest in the human value. His life, in spite of his riches, is empty. He has devoted his great brain and intelligence to money making."

CHICAGO, May 2.—J. C. Shaffer, editor of the Chicago Evening Post and [illegible] of the Rocky Mountain News and Denver Evening Times, both Denver papers, today telegraphed to President Wilson a request for the appointment of a commission to settle the Colorado coal miners' strike.

Mr. Shaffer told the president that resources of the Colorado mediators were apparently exhausted and suggested as members of the commission which would be similar to the one appointed by President Roosevelt to settle the Pennsylvania anthracite strike: Judge Henry Wade Rogers, Benjamin Ide Wheeler, Oscar Strauss, Marvin Hughitt, Louis Brandeis, James M. Lynch, former president of the International Typographical union, or men of that character.

ELLIS MEREDITH TELLS HOW MRS. DOOLEY VIEWS WOMAN SUFFRAGE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT

Miss Ellis Meredith, a member of the elections commission of Denver, was asked to speak on "Reminiscences" at the woman suffrage meeting at the Opera house last night. Miss Meredith is Irish and her first words after addressing the chair were: "I have often wondered what Mr. Dooley would have to say about suffrage if he were Mrs. Dooley. With apologies to Finley Peter Dunne I offer this and I'm sure Mr. Dunne would agree if he were a citizen of Colorado."

"This has been a grand day for th' suffragettes," said Mrs. Dooley, laying aside the evening paper. "They've had parades, an' marchin' an' speakin', and flags flutterin' 10 stars in th' breeze, an' yellow banners that scare some folks worse than a smallpox sign. They've had picnics, an' bankets, an' hot tamales an' soap boxes on th' street corners, an' prominent citizens in autymobiles an' afoot, wearin' sunflowers, an' singin' thim noble words av Pathrick Hennery, 'Give me Votes fer Women, or give me death!'"

"He niver said it," said Mrs. Hennessy. "I've heard Michael recite it too often; it was 'Give me Liberty,' he said."

"Well, 'tis all th' same," said Mrs. Dooley judicially. "If he was sayin' it now, he'd say, 'Fer th' love av Mike, let's give thim women votes, befure they talk us to death. In th' marrnin' herself says to me, "Pathric," she says, "will ye step into th' tin-cint store an' buy me a skein av yellow silk for the suffrage flag I'm embroiderin'," she says. At noon Norah calls me up on th' telephone. "Father," she says, "will ye sind up 20 yards av yellow buntin'; we need it for decoratin' th' court house fer our suffrage meetin'." About 3 in th' afthernoon, Pathrick Henry, Jr., comes in an' strikes me fer a tin becase th' College Men's Suffrage league is gitin' up a relief fund fer th' hunger strikers. Yellow money, he wants, thim bein' the suffrage colors, an' I trip over yellow strings an' boxes an' ribbons from marrnin' till night—me that's cracked manny a head fer darin' to show th' orange!' Words like thim is fwat Pathrick Hennery would be sayin' if he was here, an' sure th' country needs him."

"But fwat's it all about?" asked Mrs. Hennessy. "Fwat do they want?"

"Fwat they rea'ally want," Mrs. Dooley answered, "is to amind th' constitution av th' United States so as to enfranchise all th' women av th' country at wanst, instead av goin' from dure to dure an' state to state, askin' th' men, 'Have ye anny cold ballots ye could spare to a poor woman who hasn't had a ballot to bite since she left th' fair state av Colorado.' It's tiresome work, askin' fer ballots, an' its distressin' to find how manny people is lineal descendents av th' dog in th' manger. Ivery election New York state prints three times as manny ballots as there is men registhered; but do ye think they would give wan av thim to a woman? Not thim. So th' women have dhrew up one resolutions askin' congress to pass a new article."

Text of the Resolution.

"Fwat does th' resolution say?" asked Mrs. Hennessy.

"Well, I dinnaw, exactly," said Mrs. Dooley warily, "but I shuppose it says somethin' like this:

"'Whereas, American women has ever been good an' faithful subjects, payin' their taxes regular widout askin' fwat they was spint fer, an'

"'Whereas, They has furnished th' United States wid all th' soldiers, sailors an' marines that has fit her battles, an'

"'Whereas, We have a turrible object lesson av th' ways av disfranchised women over in England, an' would prefer to avid learnin' be experience that th' female av th' species is moore deadlier than th' male; therefore, be it

"'Raysolved, That women should be, an' is hereby enfranchised, them, their heirs, executors, administrators an' assigns, to have and to hold while grass grows an' wather runs—an' may th' Lord have mercy on their souls!'

"I don't say thim is th' exact, identical language, but that's fwat it manes, and it has th' makin' av a fine article in ut."

"But fwat's it to us?" objected Mrs. Hennessy. "I've been votin' fer twinty years, an' I'm still a poor woman. Fwat have we to do wid ut?"

"Ye are wan av thim people, Maggie, that thinks th' storm cinter is in their back yard, an' so long as th' wash on your clothes line is dry ye are not concerned about floods elsewhere. Now thry to take this into yer two-be-twice intellect. The women that has never had nawthin' more than a school vote want what we have, an' even if congress would give it to thim it takes three-fourths av th' state legislatures to agree to ut, an' our state is wan av th' tin that would vote 'yes.' Th' ither nine are Wyomin', Utah, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, Kansas an' Illinoi — an' th' rist ar-re to get."

Some Job, Thinks Mrs. Hennessy.

"Well, belave me gittin' thim will be some job," said Mrs. Hennessy. "Why didn't they wait till they had half th' states annyhow? Besides, wasn't it voted down?"

"Th' first wan was, but fwat does th' poet say? 'Thruth crushed to earth an' flung out av th' back winds will come in be th' front door.' An' no sooner was th' amindmint defeated [illegible] Mr. Bristow av Kansas introduced ut again an' I understhand it's [illegible] in committee, while th' suffragists look fer eliven moore votes. In th' meantime I see be yestherday's paper that Sinator Shafroth's amindment [illegible] pervidin' that whinever the women has a petition amountin' to 8 per cent av th' vote in anny state, th' question has to be submitted, has [illegible] th' sinate an' some av th' women is glad, an some av thim says they've got writer's paralysis signin' petitions and rheumatism carryin' thim around, an' they want th' amindmint widout botherin' wid th' states."

"But as long as th' states has th' say so they got to bother wid thim," said Mrs. Hennessy. "I don't see why they thry it now."

"Well, I dinnaw eithr," said Mrs. Dooley magnanimously, "but, ye see, it's this way about amindin' th' constitution. Folks ar're very curious about it. In th' beginnin' before around it: slendher form Father Time had dhrew his sacred circle, they wasn't so particular about it. Some av thim didn't think much av ut. Some av th' men that made it rayfused to sign ut, thereby debarrin' their descendants from membership in th' Colonial Damsels Discended From Signers av th' Constitution. Th' first congress that met afther its adoption submitted tin amindmints to ut—they was adopted be 1789, an' th' nixt two in 1798 an' 1803. Then they wint along fer 60 years, till they got to thinkin' th' constitution was handed down from Heaven along wid th' tin commendatemn, T along wid th' tin commandmints, an' nawthin' but war would a shook that conviction. Along about 1863 Father Abraham took a look over th' ancient docymints av th' raypublic. 'I see be th' declaration,' he said, 'that all men ar're born free an' ekil,' he says; 'don't ye think it would be well to mintion it in th' constitution?' So they passed th' thirteenth amindmint, abolishin' slavery, an' we didn't have no more av ut till we bought th' Philippine islands, an' th' Sultan av Sulu wid all his wives, slaves, rights, titles an' heriditamints belongin' and appertainin' thereto. About six months later, findin' big business sufferin' becase it couldn't make anny more off its ar'rmy conthrats, they passed th' fourteenth amindmint, pervidin' that iverything must be did be 'due process av law,' an' since thin militia an' regulars an' courts has been wrestlin' wid th' question to find out fwat is due process an fwat is law, an' only five min in th' United States know—"

"An' who ar're they?" said Mrs. Hennessy.

Fine For the Lawyers.

"Th' majority av th' shupreme court av th' United States. But 'tis fine fer th' lawyers. So, ye see, havin' got into th' habit av amindin' th' constitution, some av thim gintlemin said, 'Let's tak wan moore whack at ut. Let us give our colored brother th' ballot. We ought to give him somethin' an' that's th' only thing that won't cost us nawthin, so they wint at ut."

"Was heaskin' fer it?" demanded Mrs Hennessy.

"He was not. Fwat he was wantin' was a mule an' some seed corn an' somebody to tell him how to make a livin' out av liberty—which same some av th' rest av us 'ud like to know. He didn't ask fer it, and he couldn't read it fwin he got ut. It made th' people he had to live wid hate him, an' us, an' kape on singin' about 'down-treddin' heels bein' on thy shore, Maryland, my Maryland.' Ye should know—tho' ye probably don't—that antislavery an' woman suffrage had ginerally wint together, but durin' th' war, women was too much took up wid their sufferin's and scrapin' lint to think much av their suffrages; an' thin, gittin' th' petition av 300,000 names fer th' abolition amindmint, as them gintlemin requested, took a lot av time. So, fwin they heerd about this enfranchisin' amindmint, they ris right up, an' reminded thim av th' compliments they have give them fer gettin' that petition, an' av how manny of thim had give up their husbands an' sons to be shot an' killed. 'Havin' took away our pervideis, an' give us nawthin' but sick'nin fears an' lists av dead an' wounded an' depreciated money fer five years or so,' they said, 'would ye kindly give us th' ballot. 'Tis cheap fer you,' they said, 'an' very consolin' to us, an' we'd be much obliged to ye fer it.'"

"'Twas little enough to ask," snorted Mrs. Hennessy. "I don't care about votin', but nobody's got th' right to say I shan't. Fwat did they do?"

Squares Himself With Constituents.

"Fwat does a man always do fwin he wants to fool a woman? Paid thim moore compliminta. They said it was th' naygur's hour, an' it would be their turn next. A Matsachusetts man be th' name av Sumner said he wasted 19 sheets av foolscap tryin' to write that amindmint widout puttin' th' wurrud male into it. Ye know it has just wan sintince—it says:

"'Th' right av th' citizens av th' United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged be th' United States or anny state on account of race, color or previous condition av servitude.'

"All th' women ast was that they should put in th' wurrud 'sex' before race; if they'd do ut now, ye an' me could go annywhere an' take th' proud palladium av our liberties wid us."

"That was aisy," said Mrs. Hennessy. "Why didn't they do ut?"

"I'm tellin' ye. They said they couldn't afford to handicap th' poor black man be namin' him in th' same day with Revolutionary Ladies an' Colonial Daughters, an Ival, white, American-born college edjycated women not to mintion their mothers an' sisters an' wives. The [illegible] was mighty consarned about him. Th' women was pretty mad an' they wint home an' looked for comfort in th' usual place, an' fwin they read how David said in his heart—'All min is liars'—they threw a sigh an' said, They ain't changed none, an there wasn't much doin' in suffrage circles fer several years."

"Fwat did th' men do?" asked Mrs. Hennessy.

Resigned Rather Than Vote.

"They wint out to get their amindmint adopted, it was mighty onpopular an' if they hadn't been personally conductin' th' government in th' southern states an' doing th' countin' it would a been defeated. Even in congress four Republicans and all th' Dimmycrats voted agin' ut an' 30 Raypublicans hid out and wouldn't vote at all. In a lot av th' states the legislatures put it up to the people wan way or anither, an' in Indianny about half th' legislature rayzigned rather than vote fer it. Th' only southern states where it was rejected was Delaware, Kentucky, Maryland and Tennessee, but it was despised in all av thim an' California, New Jersey, Ohio an' Oregon turned ut down cold. Why, two years ago, Ohio rayfused to amind her constitution to conform wid it an' in spite av Eliza an' th' bloodhounds an' th' ice, Ohio stands today where she did 46 years ago. Mitchigan voted ut down three times as sthrong as Missouri. Bleedin' Kansas said, 'Not fer us,' an' Nebrasky made a new constitution in defiance av ut. Thim folks an' them in New York voted agin ut, but th' legislatures finally come through."

"Well, fwat did th' men do fer th' women then?" said Mrs. Hennessy.

"They said they was to be next."

"They was so ashamed they didn't have th' face to mintion th' word constitution, an' we had to wait fer them to die an' be forgutten before annybody else would, but about foor years ago congress took a turn at it agin findin' it too tight in some places an' wore thin in ithers. Av course th' women thought that was their chanct. In th' wurrds av th' immorthal Shakespeare 'There is a tide in th' affairs av men that taken at th' right time lands yez where ye've been thryin' to get' so they began hammerin' at th' dures av congress. They raymimbered hearin' their mithers say that th' Dimmycrats had sympathized wid them over th' fifteenth amindmint, so they wint afther thim, full av hope."

"Will they give it to thim?" asked Mrs. Hennessy.

Excuses Always Ready.

"I dinnaw; there's none so free wid promises as them that has nawthin, an' I've noticed that ivery so often th' Dimmycrats an' Raypublikins swap ideas, like they was partners. Th' Raypublikins said it was th' naygur's hour in 1867; now th' Dimmycrats say th' hour isn't up yet, while th' women sit around like St. Pathrick's snake at th' bottom av Killarney, sayin,' 'Tis a long hour, Pathrick!' Ye know, Maggie, if I hadn't read it in a book I'd niver have knew that man was th' logical, raysonin' half th' race. I'd a thought he was th' human crab, sidesteppin' iverything he didn't like th' look av. An' th' raysons they give fer votin' agin ut! Senator Vardaman hopes if he holds out long enough he might trade his vote fer wan to repeal th' fifteenth amindmint, Senator Williams would be willin' to give it to white women, but he hates to think a Chinese lady might git intil th' tint, an' Sinator Borah is dyin' to vote fer ut, but he'd rather see all av us disfranchised than endure th' hijeous thought that a brown lady in Alabamy mightn't git a chance to cast a vote if she had wan. Th' excuses a man can put up fer not doin' fwat he doesn't want to is staggerin' to th' human intilligence."

"It looks to me like ut ud take anither 40 years," said Mrs. Hennessy gloomily.

"Don't ye iver belave ut, Maggie," answered Mrs. Dooley. "Women is votin' in th' frozen wilds av Alasky, an' th' blisterin' colony av Culion in th' Philippines; they have the vote in tin states now, wid it pindin' in eight moore, an' trimblin' in th' balance in five ithers. Wid anny luck, they should conthrol a fifth av th' nixt electhoral college. Time was fwin I thought th' Fathers should have had prisidints elected be popular vote, but, as I look over th' suffrage field, I see that maybe they was wiser than they thought thimsilves—an' that's sayin' a good deal. It is not long till 1916, an' it may be possible fer a man to get elected, especially if we have prisidintial primaries, without thrippin' on a suffrage plank in his platform. But niver agin, Maggie. It's goin' to be 'Ladies first in times av danger,' wid all th' parties playin' Alphonse an' Gaston before thim."

"Election day isn't dangerous," said Mrs Hennessy scornfully.

"Isn't ut?" said Mrs. Dooley. "Let me tell ye, Maggie: election day is gittin' to be th' most dangerous day in th' year fer thim that doesn't behave in fair play, and' doin' to ithers as ye'd be did by, an' undhertakin' to play politics be anny ither rule is th' most exthry hazardous av all occupations!"

ANNOUNCEMENT

It is needless to acquaint the buying public with the inclement weather conditions prevailing during the past week, or practically during the entire time since we began the big $20,000.00 Sale. It is also easy to conclude the effect this has had on the selling. As the turning of $20,000.00 worth of stock into cash at once is imperative, we have decided to continue the Sale until further notice, or until the desired amount is realized. As price combined with wanted merchandise is the incentive to the prospective buyer, all the Cut Prices throughout the entire store will be continued, as well as further reductions on more than half of the entire stock. Extra Half Price Specials will also continue daily, on staple items and discontinued lines. Several thousand dollars' worth of new goods, consisting of Women's Coats, Suits, Skirts, Petticoats, Waists, Dress Goods, Silks, Linens, Domestic Cottons, etc., that were bought specially as an added attraction to assist in realizing the full amount desired, will also be reduced in price again. MEN AND WOMEN URGE CONGRESS TO PASS RESOLUTION AND GRANT EQUAL SUFFRAGE

Cincinnati, Socialist, and Miss Ellis Meredith of Denver gave a humorous talk based on the "Mr. Dooley" stories, and called "Reminiscences."

"Aren't you tired of this endless discussions on the rights and wrongs of woman suffrage?" asked Mrs. Fowler in opening the meeting. "I am. Wouldn't it be a relief if women were considered human just as man? There is no difference except in sex.

"You men, what is your honest opinion of this man-made civilization? Our society is not far removed from barbarism. Look at the conditions surrounding you now and judge. The fabric of society is badly in need of reconstruction and the race is unequal to the task. Both men and women would have a difficult task to make it over; men alone cannot."

Costigan was introduced by Mrs. Fowler as a man "whose work and fight to secure honest elections in Colorado is known to us all."

Federal Amendment Proper.

"More and more the problems and needs of the American people are becoming national," the Progressive gubernatorial candidate said. "More and more, therefore, is it wise that our emphasis and solution be national.

"Under such circumstances, it is certainly proper that a federal amendment should be employed to rectify at one stroke, in a measure, the wrong of a partial and discriminatory suffrage. The federal constitution may, of course, fix the voting rights of those citizens who cast their ballots for federal officials. In one line it can forbid the states to deprive women of suffrage except on identical terms with men, and its mandate will take precedence in federal matters over state laws and regulations.

"The agitation for a federal amendment is reviving history. It recalls the day when not only pioneers of suffrage, but many leading lawyers of this country were of the opinion that the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the federal constitution, in conferring freedom, citizenship, and suffrage on southern slaves had also enfranchised women. To test the legal question on behalf of women, one of their remarkable leaders, Susan B. Anthony, heroically submitted to arrest and fine but the test unhappily failed. It remains for our generation to take the next step toward an act of simple justice to millions of our fellow countrywomen.

"The federal amendment has the merit, always appealing to Americans, of doing a big thing in a big way. We are impressed by the continental and the universal and when the suffrage movement seizes on the national imagination, the war is won.

Gives Another Reason for Suffrage.

"There is another and somewhat overlooked reason why woman suffrage should be recognized alike in state and national constitutions. We live increasingly in a day of direct legislation, as distinguished from representative government. Several states already have the initiative, and a movement for the national initiative, which is a simplified method for amending the constitution and laws, is under way. In the day when the voter legislates directly, every citizen's vote becomes a far more vital factor than under a system where a representative, more or less inadequately, speaks on behalf of his constituency. Every reason, therefore, for woman suffrage under representative government is a multiplied reason for woman suffrage where direct legislation is employed."

"If the suffrage movement continues to make the same progress it has been making it will not be long before we will be holding meetings to discuss the man question," said Blumenberg, who spoke on the movement and reasons for it. "I hardly believe we will be forced to listen to these discussions much longer."

The Socialist speaker reviewed the history of woman's status in the world since the days of the cave man. He pointed out that almost every religion taught that woman was a creature created solely for man's pleasure and that the idea has been strictly adhered to, that even now men are employing scores of methods to keep her in subjugation.

Working Women Need Ballot.

"Women of the leisure class do not need the ballot so much as women of the working class," the speaker said. "The woman of wealth is protected by the man. Many, however, have tired of being mannikins and want to take part in the fight.

"Men declare women are too fragile to take part in matters politic. But these same men do not hesitate to exploit woman labor. Opponents also declare women are mentally unfit for the ballot. But are the men fit when they are forcing 2,000,000 children less than 16 years old to work in factories, when they are actually forcing women out of their homes and into the commercial world to compete with men? They refuse to pass the minimum wage bill because then they can employ men as cheaply as women, they admit women are their equals continually in indirect ways."

Blumenberg concluded by reminding his audience that unless women learned how to use the ballot before they got it it would be worse than useless. Too few men know now, he said. It is fortunate that the women are being compelled to fight for the vote because they will know how to use it when they get it, he declared, adding it would have been better had the working man also been forced to fight for his vote. Colorado is an example of the uselessness of the ballot to the laboring classes, he believes, and in his words, "a most horrible example."

Martin Praises Colorado Women.

"Bull Moose are hard to head off," Congressman Martin remarked laughingly. "The leader (nodding to Costigan) has blanketed me. My remarks will neither be remarkable eloquent nor brilliant," referring to an early remark by Costigan.

"A congregation of Republicans, Democrats, Socialists and Progressives together on one platform in Colorado for any other purpose would necessitate federal intervention," Martin continued. "And, speaking of federal intervention, the women of Colorado are responsible for Uncle Sam's boys being here now.

"Unfortunately, many people overlook the fact that the same God that made men made women. And he gave them the faculty of finding truth. When they see it, they go after it and stay on the job until they get it."

The remarks brought forth prolonged applause from the crowd and furnished the principal argument for the adoption of a national suffrage amendment.

Congressman Martin spoke to great length on the objections to women suffrage, principally those he had heard in Washington. "I have been interested in the suffrage movement ever since it was adopted in Colorado, 21 years ago," he said, "and I thought I knew a great deal about it. But those men raised objections to them after it had been proved that they were without foundation."

The objection of some senators that the adoption of a federal amendment would abate the interest in the state also was denied by Martin. On the other hand, he says, it would add impetus to the movement throughout the country. Senator Bryan's remark that voting is a privilege brought forth a vigorous protest, the Colorado congressman declaring it a right "and a most sacred one."

Regarded Women as Equals.

Mrs. Riddle, speaking on "Shoulder to Shoulder," made one of the most interesting addresses of the evening. Shoulder to shoulder she said meant to work shoulder to shoulder with men for all that is right. Her talk was largely of personal experiences.

"People have often asked me why it is that women of Colorado obtained the ballot with such ease. I believe it is because the pioneers in this state who granted us the right to vote looked upon us as equals. We fought side by side with them, worked with them, played with them. We were their equals.

But the speaker told of how the women of a certain rural section of the state worked to secure the passage of the suffrage bill, pointing out how much more effective their plan was than that of their city sisters.

"When the big campaign was on, we worked for several days getting up a big dinner. Then when the men visited our section of the state we entertained them, fed them as they had never been fed before, and while they were eating we argued our side of the question. Only 10 votes were cast against the bill in our district—and those 10 men were not at that 'feed.'"

Mrs Riddle also spoke of several trips east, the questions raised by the antis there and her answers.

Miss Ellis Meredith scored a triumph in the parlance of the theater with her Mrs Dooley discussion. Her paper is published elsewhere in this issue.

PHILIPPINE INCIDENT PRECEDENT FOR THE VERA CRUZ ACTION

WASHINGTON, May 2. To clear up any misunderstanding as to the reasons for substituting a purely military government for the civil administration set up at Vera Cruz by navy officials Secretary Garrison today made public the text of his instructions to Brigadier General Funston.

"I have just had a conference with the president about the administration of civil, municipal functions at Vera Cruz. Wherever a Mexican official refuses to continue to exercise his function, we think it unwise to place an American civilian in charge and want a military government carried on by the officers of the army and the marine corps under your command. I have read the proposed regulations for establishment of a civil government dated April 26. It would be simpler and better to take the system which was in vogue when the Mexicans ran the city and to put army officers at the head of the various departments, bureaus and other official posts, with duties similar to those that had been performed under the Mexican administration.

Just What They Want.

This will appeal to the citizens because it will be what they have always been accustomed to. It will be better for us than to have American citizens who happen to be in the city [illegible] injected into a military administration. Please acquaint yourself as soon as possible with the method of administration of the city government that is of all the civil government under your jurisdiction and act thereafter in accordance with instructions above set forth.

"Follow as nearly as you can the method pursued by us in the Philippine islands when the military took over the civil functions from Spain. You may state as your reason for taking this course that since the territory within your jurisdiction is now and while it remains under your jurisdiction, will be subject to a military government, 'I desire to have persons directly responsible to my order and subject to my jurisdiction in all places.'

Cites Philippine Precedent.

"It would be helpful to you to obtain a copy if possible of the general orders issued at the time of military government in the Philippines. Inquire among your officers to see if any of them have copies. I would suggest that you inquire among all your officers to learn which of them took any part in the military government in the Philippines or Cuba, as their experience would be very useful to you in this connection.

"In administration of military government in the Philippines it was found convenient to utilize services of naval officers in certain positions in the civil government and the office of captain of the port was always filled by a naval officer, the admiral readily furnishing officers on suggestion of the commanding officer. You would avail yourself of this opportunity."

WASHINGTON SHOULD BE A MODEL CITY

Feeling of Consolation Manifest Throughout Land, Says Henry Bruere

By JONATHAN WINFIELD.

WASHINGTON, May 2.—Because it is the only city that is the common possession of all Americans, many municipal government experts believe that Washington should be the standard of municipal efficiency for all other cities in the United States.

Although the subject is not a new one, Henry Bruere, chamberlain of the city of New York, brought out some new points in discussing the topic here recently.

Mr. Bruere has been called "the chief of Mayor Mitchel's cabinet." Before becoming chamberlain (treasurer) of New York he spent a number of years as head of the municipal research bureau of New York, a private enterprise, and is considered an authority upon the art of governing cities.

New Ideas Springing Up.

New ideas of government are springing up in the United States, he said. He outlined these ideas in a plan he presented some time ago to President Wilson for the establishment of a model municipal government in the District of Columbia. Mr. Bruere's plan included a survey for the purpose of equipping the local government with the highest possible standard of municipal efficiency.

"What is done in the District of Columbia," he said, "is done very largely in the name of the people of the United States. Inasmuch as the problems of municipal government are occupying a considerable part of the thought of the American people, Washington has a peculiar opportunity to influence the government of every city of the country.

"If the department of agriculture," said Mr. Bruere in his recent address here, "had under its jurisdiction a great farm, it would seize the opportunity to make it preeminent in the efficiency of its management.

"If the development of commerce were responsible for a great industry, that industry would be made the standard maker for every industrial establishment in the nation. So the president of the United States and congress have under their control one of the most vital organizations of civilization, a city government.

"It is a matter of congratulation that the government of the district is now in such excellent hands. Every city of the nation has the right to expect that Washington will serve to illustrate how the common business of a municipality may be most effectively and economically carried on."

This is Mr. Bruere's central idea—that government can be as efficiently conducted as any private enterprise.

Social service, he believes, is no longer regarded as philanthropic service. Today social service is primarily government service. "Government traditionally has been the conservator of a static civilization. Today government in the United States is the master builder in the development of a new social structure."

In his opinion, this is particularly true in our cities. "We have bred a discontent with the conditions of our common life that are inharmonious with our national idealism.

Power of Cooperation.

"We are impatient with the defects in our system. We are conscious of a new power to deal effectively with these conditions—the power of cooperation through government.

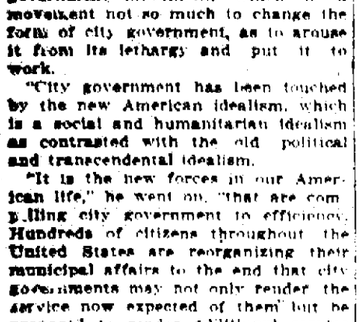

"These are the influences back of the efficient city government movement in America. These are the influences underlying the commission government movement, which is a movement not so much to change the form of city government, as to arouse it from its lethargy and put it to work.

"City government has been touched by the new American idealism, which is a social and humanitarian idealism as contrasted with the old political and transcendental idealism.

"It is the new forces in our American life," he went on, "that are compelling city government to efficiency. Hundreds of citizens throughout the United States are reorganizing their municipal affairs to the end that city governments may not only render the service now expected of them but be prepared to render additional service which a growing community may require.

"A new science has sprung up in the United States, a science of public administration. Men are coming to regard public service as a profession. Scores of men in special schools and in colleges are training for public service.

"We can transplant the business practices of private enterprises, but we need for government special methods. We need a special technique for police work, for education, for poverty prevention, for correction, for recreation and the multitude of other social activities now conducted by progressive municipalities."

BUCKLE, CHECK, AND HOUND CHECK

A Vast Array of Fabrics to Choose a Gown From; Gay Ribbon for Summer Frocks

NEW YORK, May 2. Now is the time when women all over the country are beginning to plan their summer clothes to best suit their own particular needs. Therefore, fabrics, and their proper development, are the all-important subjects.

There is a vast array of summer fabrics from which to choose. For church and other formal occasions taffeta, foulard and summer silk hold the strong place. Black taffeta holds first place and is used in a variety of ways and many combinations. A dress whose style and distinction attracted many eyes was made with a jacket which buttoned down the front and was slightly fitted in the back, strongly simulating the old-fashioned basque worn in the '80s. The skirt was copied from the crinoline styles, though on conservative lines. The alternate ruffles were of black and a shade of silk which closely resembled magenta. The soft collar of the waist worn beneath rolled over the collar of the jacket.

There is no fabric which adapts itself more readily than foulard, with its soft, satiny finish and supple qualities, to the draped, bouffant-bustle and panier dresses, so much a part of the season's styles.

Cotton crepes run the gamut, from the daintiest and most alluring of summer fabrics down to the thicker and sturdier material, which endears itself to mother's heart for Johnny's wash-suits and sister's morning dresses.

For garden parties and other afternoon functions there is no prettier material than cotton crepe, embroidered in soft floral designs and queer cubist figures. It is possible to buy crepe in a solid color to match the colors in the embroidered figures, thus giving a chance to make frocks of charming combinations. I saw a dress of this type the other day, which was bought by a young woman to complete her trousseau. The development was most charming. The kimono-cut bodice of pink crepe had long close-fitting sleeves which flared at the wrist, showing the facing of white. A white crepe collar rolled from the neck. The bodice opened down the front, over a vest of white crepe, with spots the size of a quarter embroidered in the same shade of pink as the dress. The skirt had a long tunic of the pink crepe, showing about 12 inches of the tight underskirt of embroidered white crepe. A belt of white suede was worn with this dress.

Aubergine, which is the rich and handsome shade of the eggplant, is beautiful in a variety of materials from velvet to crepe. I have used for my illustration a crepe dress of this color. The waist is made with a surplice front, having sash-ends which tie behind. The edges of these sash-like ends, as well as the neck and sleeves, are finished with a narrow frilling of creamy white taffeta, the only relief from the solid color of the frock. The skirt, made with a box-pleat in the front, had double panniers beginning either side of this pleat.

For the separate waist crepe is all-popular. Dainty Dolly Varden and Dresden designs make exquisite waists—needing only a collar or frill of sheer white crepe or organdy for trimming. A striking waist of white crepe, buttoning straight down the front with round crystal buttons, had collars and cuffs of salmon-colored golfine. A flat bow of black velvet ribbon finished the neck.

Eponge and ratine make stunning frocks of a sterner variety. They come in a variety of plaids and checks, and resemble wool fabrics so closely that they must be felt to know the difference. The second illustration is made from a model of brown eponge. The waist has collars and cuffs of figured eponge in deep shades of orange, with a flaring collar of white organdy. The skirt has double tunics, the first of the brown eponge and the second under tunic of figured eponge, over a skirt of the solid color.

It has been many a long day since gingham has played such an important part in the development of summer dresses as it will this season. This fabric comes in many qualities in plaids, stripes and checks, as well as in solid colors. As this is a season when combinations of stripes, plaids, or checks with the solid colors, reign supreme, this fabric will be seen among the morning and afternoon dresses, especially for vacation wear.

There are many possibilities of making up gingham into little coat-suits as well as dresses this season. An interesting little suit is made with a jacket of plaid gingham, in which blue predominates. The edges of this jacket are bound with plain blue and worn over a skirt of solid blue gingham. A second dress of green gingham has a collar and belt of orange and green plaid gingham.

This is a ribbon season. Plain gowns of black charmeuse are relieved by gracefully draped ribbon sashes. If the ribbon is very wide, it may be tied around the waist with a large, fluffy bow in front, and may be made especially chic if a rose nestles among the short loops and ends. A narrower ribbon of Roman stripes is wound once around the skirt in corkscrew fashion, and again a vivid ribbon is placed on a skirt, veiled by a filmy tunic or pannier. Narrow ribbons in moire, taffeta, and grosgrain are used for binding or edging ruffles and tunics. These are sometimes in black or color, or in contrasting shade.

These ribbons come in many new patterns. One type has a satin edge, sometimes in black and sometimes in color, and a rose design running through the center. These are called the Louis XVI patterns. Other patterns are termed Futurist, as the designs are rough and crude, with vivid colors and contrasts. Some startling new designs have been evolved from the ancient Mexican pottery and hetroglyphical figures. These come in odd shades of red, copper, green, and blue, rich in trimming possibilities.

'HOP ALLEY,' CHINESE QUARTER IN ST. LOUIS, STIRRED BY MURDER

ST. LOUIS, May 2.—"Hop alley," the local Chinese quarter extending over an area of five blocks, in the downtown business section, was exited today as the result of the murder of Haw Lin Shuck, a Chinese immigration officer of the United States, last night and the subsequent prediction of Lee Bing, "mayor of the alley," that the shots which killed Shuck would inaugurate a tong war in St. Louis, Chicago and New York.

More than two score denizens of the alley, including the "mayor," and Helen Davis, known as "queen of the alley," were taken by the police to be held pending investigation of the mysterious murder.

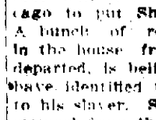

The police are seeking an undersized Chinaman, said by leaders to have been sent here by New York and Chicago to put Shuck out of the way. A bunch of roses handed to him in the house from which he had just departed, is believed by the police to have identified the immigration agent to his slayer. Shuck was killed as he stepped from the alley with the flowers under his arm. He was shot four times and stabbed.

The motive for the murder, as advanced by Bing, was the desire of New York and Chicago tong men to establish in St. Louis a branch of their society which was strongly opposed by Bing and Shuck.

UNSIGHTLY ECZEMA BURNED AWFULLY

On Baby's Face, Head, Chest and Arm. Was Disfigured. All One Crust. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Cured.

R. F. D. No. 1, Box 72, Dennison, Ohio. —"My baby was two months old when the eczema started to break out on her face and head and a little on her chest and arm. It broke out into pimples and it must have itched—and burned awfully badly because the child would do nothing but scratch. I had to keep her hands wapped up and when she scratched it would get sorer and unsightly. She was disfigured. It was all one crust. Her clothes would be sticking to the sore on her arm and chest. She was always getting worse.

"I tried [illegible] and it did not help her. I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and the first few days I washed them I could tell she was feeling better. I used three cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment. I washed her with the Cuticura Soap and then dried her and I would take my fingers and put the Cuticura Ointment on the sores. In three months she was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. Mary Paulin, June 7, 1913.

To allay itching and irritation of the scalp, prevent dry, thin and falling hair and remove crusts, scales and dandruff, Cuticura Soap and Ointment are most effective, agreeable and economical. Sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

JAPAN TO INVESTIGATE REPORT SIBERIA WRECK

TOKIO, May 2.—Great relief is felt here at the news from Manila that the Pacific Mail steamer Siberia, reported yesterday by wireless to have been in great peril off the coast of Formosa, is safe at Manila.

No satisfactory explanation is available in Tokio as to how the alarming reports of yesterday came to be disseminated. The Japanese authorities have decided to investigate. Japan has recalled the warships she dispatched yesterday to the aid of the liner supposed to be in distress.

The wireless operator on board the seminated. The Japanese authorities conditions had been bad, making difficult the sending of wireless messages.

The first erroneous reading of the wireless calls from the Persia evidently were made at the Osezaki wireless station in Japan. They were interpreted as setting forth that the steamer had met with an accident and was in distress. Other wireless reports were responsible for the belief that she was sinking.

On receiving the news the Japanese government dispatched cruisers and merchant ships from Formosa to where the Siberia was supposed to be; a British warship steamed at full speed to her assistance and the American naval authorities at Manila made hurried preparations to send help.

BADGER REPORTS TAMPICO GARRISON REINFORCED

MESSINA FIVE YEARS LATER

An English Visitor Finds the City a Twentieth Century Pompeii

Austin West in the London Chronicle.

More than four years have flown since I steamed up these classic straits on the morrow of the most appalling catastrophe in human history. In less than half a minute at that dull December dawn, what the world of today talks of as "the Messina earthquake" had shattered into dust no fewer than 24 towns along the Siculo-Calabrian seaboard.

Here, banked by mountains and lying snug between the fiery breasts of Etna and Vesuvius, slumbers the new Twentieth Century Pompeii.

I found the port much as I had left it. Yet so lucky is Messina by virtue of its natural position that, despite all drawbacks, the world's prefer dropping anchor here in increasing numbers, and its port trade is greater than before the disaster.

Wavelets ripple over the sunken wharves, the quayside and adjacent streets remain rent asunder in mighty gaps; the Parade all upheaved, smashed, and encumbered with rubbish as when the tidal wave, 150 feet in height, retired after its event of herculean castigation. One object rivets attention. The giant form of Neptune, trident in hand, surveys the scene serenely from the summit of his superb fountain. The sea has respected its god. Pious folk pointed me to the survival of this and like pagan memories, in contrast with the annihilation of their own sacred shrines, as proof positive that the quake was the handiwork of demons.

Among the most artistic fanes of old Messina was the Fourteenth Century Church of San Niccolo. Several months before the calamity a commission of civil engineers reported the building to the authorities as being in an exceedingly dangerous condition, and an order was issued for its immediate closure to public worship. San Niccolo is the one solitary church which the great earthquake spared.

The grand old Norman cathedral, which bravely withstood the upheavals of 800 years present an unforgettable appearance. Cleared of its mountain of debris, the interior—305 feet long and 145 feet across—looks as though it had fallen prey to the iconoclasm of a barbarian horde. Sculptured fragments of its glorious baptistery, pulpit and royal tombs are piled in the nave. Twenty-two gigantic pillars of granite that upheld the clerestory lie smashed and tumbled about the pavement in impressive chaos.

IN AID OF THE BLIND

Professor Th Cart, of Paris, an aged and highly honored philanthropist, and one of the earliest Esperantists of France, has bestowed much labor, with very encouraging results, upon making the international language available for the use of the blind. He has prepared a dozen or more books, printed in Braille, and has published for a number of years a monthly magazine "Esperanto Ligilo" in the same type. He has also a corps of assistants in nearly every country of Europe, some of them teachers in schools for the blind, and nearly all of them blind themselves, who have given much enthusiastic labor to the furtherance of his benevolent plans. As a result, societies and clubs of blind Esperantists have been formed everywhere. One such, which met regularly in one of the rooms of the Congressional Library was in active operation in Washington, D C, at the time of my visit there two years ago, and I had the pleasure of meeting some of the members, whose affection for the language, which they considered a great boon to them was ardent and almost pathetic

Esperanto and the Blind.

First of all, it is my intention to prove that Esperanto is very easy for the blind that is to say, very easy, when compared with any other foreign language for, after all, a considerable amount of application is necessary, in order to have such command of the language as to thoroughly enjoy reading, correspondence and conversation.

Esperanto on account of the extraordinary simplicity of its grammar, (which is as logical and regular as a practical language can be), is specially easy to acquire

The vocabulary is a very slight tax upon the memory, thanks to a very simple system of prefixes and suffixes, which always have a definite meaning

This facility is a condition indispensable to success with seeing people, but how much more so with the blind who generally have very little time at their disposal and whose resources in manuals and aids to memory, are very restricted A difficult language would be only accessible to so few people that they would be very liable to give it up in despair

I can give proofs of this facility in two ways theoretical proofs and practical proofs

The first, drawn from the analysis of the grammar and vocabulary, I have already mentioned

As to the practical proofs of the facility of Esperanto here are a few taken at hazard A few years ago I gave a course of 12 lessons, in a month, to a few young girls at the Recordon Asylum in Lausanne Switzerland

At the end of the month these young girls were already able to enter upon a correspondance with Mr Thilander a blind swede who strange to relate, had learned Esperanto entirely alone

About 20 blind esperantists from seven different nations came together at the international Esperanto congress in Cambridge England in 1907

The only language in which they were able during eight days, to communicate with each other, was Esperanto Some of these had only begun to study Esperanto six months before

After one or two days of practice, all were able without any difficulty to understand one another and exchange ideas on a great variety of subjects

Let any one write to

W G Hanbury esq Libertas Cross Road Southwick

Miss Hilda Bull Cottenham Cambridge Eng all of whom were present at this congress, and they are quite willing to contribute their testimony They will relate to you how rapidly they acquired the habit of speaking the language

Add to this remarkable facility of learning, one other quality, ...

As a result of the ... the language, I not only had secretaries, but I had pupils of whom I still retain most affectionate remembrance

Every profit is gauged by the expense incurred

In this case, the only expense is the trouble necessary to command the language. And, if that trouble is relatively small, the advantages appear all the more important Indeed, the trouble is infinitessimal and the advantages are very real

Let it suffice, that I indicate a few of them, in order that my readers, when they think them over may fully appreciate them

Braille music for example is printed everywhere the same but what a worry it often is to read through a foreign catalogue and to order what one requires! But how easy it will be when the catalogues are published in Esperanto and one will be able to place one's order in the international language.

Only think of the immense reduction in the cost price of a work in Braille, when a large number of blind people, knowing Esperanto insure the sale of a large edition of a book"

Also look at the cost of international transport, will it not also lead to the great diminution of prices, when the intercommunication becomes more frequent?

And thanks to a universal language, what a mass of useful information, the blind may be able to impart to one another, from one country to another, concerning questions of general interest, printing machines, writing machines, rulers, writing boards, stylos, paper, etc.

Add to that, the instruments and tools in daily use in the various trades exercised by the blind also the process of manufacture in broom and basket work, etc.

Also the same advantages to be derived, when one considers the new means constantly opened up and about which one has now very little information

Not to speak of the advantages, intellectual literary scientific, philosophical, or even simply recreative, in which the blind may participate, through an intercourse becoming more and more intimate through friends of different nationalities and of a different frame of mind

The extent of his horizon will be extensively enlarged!

But the point upon which it is impossible to insist too strongly, is

The great advantage which the blind man will derive from the union, namely first, international afterwards, which will assure him an independance steady, becoming more and more complete.

And when one perfectly understands that, one will no longer hesitate to introduce Esperanto into all blind schools.

To that end let us direct all our efforts!

Encourage us! help us! support us!"

NEW HOPE FOR CITY CONSUMPTIVES

Important Experiment Shows Disease Curable in City Homes. "Home Hospital" in Model Tenements

By JOHN A. KINGSBURY,
New York City Commissioner of Charities, Director New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor

(Exclusive Service The Survey Press Bureau)

Can the war against the white plague be successfully carried into its very stronghold? Can consumption be cured where it fights with deadliest effect—in the congested district of a large city?

An important experiment, the first of its kind, carried on last year, gives assurance that we can answer in the affirmative A "Home Hospital," established on New York's east side by the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, has shown most encouraging results Patients living with their families, in model tenements provided with hospital care at a cost much below that at sanatoria made notable gains, and the increased earning capacity of the families more than doubled their average income

When a disease in a single city shows an annual death roll of 9,981, as reported by the New York department of health, and seizes yearly upon more than 22,000 new victims, evidently it creates an imperative problem. When the disease is involved with poverty in the family and consequent economic and social deterioration, the problem becomes exceedingly complex, difficult and baffling For tuberculosis is not merely a human disease. It is a social disorder and the real problem is not alone the patient, but the family and the conditions under which they live For consumption is a house disease and the logical way to combat it is to attack the fundamental, predisposing cause, namely, the home working conditions

Based upon such convictions as these the home hospital experiment was established for the combined treatment of tuberculosis and poverty among the tenements of New York. More specifically, the object sought is to demonstrate by a three-year experiment that if sanitary housing with ample sunshine and fresh air, adequate relief including good and abundant nourishment, freedom from undue work and worry, reasonable segregation, skillful medical care and constant nursing supervision be provided, it is possible:

1 To prevent the spread of tuberculosis from the sick to the well members of the family, and particularly to protect the children from infection.

2. To cure those of the family who are in the early stages of the disease.

3 To secure improved health and larger earning capacity for patients whose cases are moderately advanced.

4 To complete, at least in instances the rehabilitation of the family, physically economically and socially

The home hospital occupies an entire section of the East River Homes, model tenements built by Mrs W K Vanderbilt especially for tuberculosis families. An open stair case leads to the 24 apartments, consisting of from two to four rooms each, including one or more bed chambers with open-air sleeping balconies No expense has been spared to provide a maximum amount of sunlight and ventilation for each room On the roof is a spacious solarium A part of this solarium is reserved for the patients. Here in reclining chairs they take the cure. Another part of the roof is a children's playground where there is no premium on fresh air and sunshine There they play remote from the danger of infection Still another part of the roof is occupied by a fresh air school

The diet kitchen is used also for a classroom, where cooking lessons are given to mothers and the relative values of foodstuffs explained

The attending physician visits and holds clinics at the hospital on Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday of each week One evening each month he meets all the patients in class conference. These gatherings are informal, the patients being encouraged to discuss their condition and ask questions. Great stress is laid on how to prevent infecting others These informal talks are of great educational value, and the admiration of the principles of correct living among neighborhood families is already evidenced by frequent visits to the clinic of mothers living near by.

During the first year of this experiment, 185 persons in 27 families have been received in the hospital Of them, 79 have been patients, positive or suspects.

The average residence of each patient at the home hospital has been 233 days, and the average gain in weight for each adult patient has been 9.8 pounds. One gained 19¾ pounds in 90 days.

The striking feature of practically every case is the marked gain in weight during the first two months of residence at the hospital. This in itself is convincing testimony of the inimical influence of the patients' previous tenement housing and living conditions

The 79 patients are grouped as follows:

	Positive.	Suspects.
Adults Adolescents	36	2
Children	16	18
Infants	2	5
	54	25

Of these 79 patients 11 were discharged, apparently cured, and 64 definitely improved Only one death occurred during the year

Of the 27 families, five proved to be not amenable to advice and direction and were dismissed, but six were discharged completely rehabilitated. This means not only restored to health, and new ideals for life and work but also an increased earning capacity. The average income of the families admitted was $4.42, of those discharged nearly $15.00

And thus, families have been housed, taught, encouraged, kept together, at a cost of about 50 cents a day per member as compared with a cost per individual in sanatoria throughout the state ranging from $1.33 to $2.50 This saving has been partly due to economies made possible through the establishment of a store for cooperative buying in one of the two-room apartments on the ground floor Staple food products and household supplies were carried. These were purchased at wholesale cost and sold to the families at cost prices

Deaths and Funerals

WILLIAM F. LOCKWOOD

William Francis Lockwood, son of Colonel and Mrs. D. W. Lockwood of Put-in Bay, O., died Friday evening, May 1, at Miss Prichard's house on North Nevada avenue, which had been his home during a large part of his residence in Colorado Springs.

Mr. Lockwood was born in Toledo, O., March 19, 1880. His early life was spent in several American cities where his father was called by his duties as an army engineer. He prepared for Yale, but his decided artistic talent and tastes led him to give up going to college in order to study architecture. He was trained in the office of R. M. and R. H. Hunt in New York, but was obliged to give up work in 1904 on account of ill health. After some time spent in Saranac and elsewhere, he came to Colorado; he was for a while in Denver and Canon City, then came to Colorado Springs, and had lived here ever since.

Through a long illness his personality never faltered, but grew stronger and more lovable. Against the very greatest difficulties he was resolute to keep a normal and manly view of life, and he was never defeated. He has added more than anyone can tell to the courage and happiness of his many devoted friends.

The funeral of Mrs. Ella M. Sterrett, who died yesterday morning at her home, 1330 Colorado avenue, will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from the Second Presbyterian church. The Rev. J. Y. Ewart will preach the funeral services. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

The funeral of Dr. Anna D. Chamberlin will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from the First M. E. church. The funeral service will be preached by Dean Peck of Denver. Dr. Chamberlin was a prominent dentist, and all dentists of the city will attend the funeral today in a body. Interment will be in Evergreen cemetery.

REFUGE OF AMERICANS IN MEXICO CITY AND A CRACK FEDERAL REGIMENT

This photograph shows a troop of the Chapultepec cavalry, the crack mounted force of the Mexican federal army, passing by the American embassy at Mexico City where a great number of the Americans in the Mexican capital were banded together to protect themselves against an expected attack during the bitter anti-American demonstrations.

MRS. FUNK SAYS NATIONAL SUFFRAGE IS IN SIGHT, BUT NOT WITHOUT BIG STRUGGLE

The following is a synopsis of an address read at the suffrage demonstrations in every part of the United States yesterday afternoon. It was prepared by Mrs. Antoinette Funk of the congressional committee of the National American Woman Suffrage association, and explains the Shafroth-Palmer amendment to the constitution now pending in congress, and which is being supported by the national association:

Suffrage for women has advanced out of the real of academic research and into the field of active politics, and it is the problem of practical politics that now confronts us. The old questions, doubts and queries, "Is woman inherently qualified for her own self-government; is it seemingly and proper and for the good of the race that she should emerge into the public activity heretofore monopolized by man; would such activities pollute society and bring desolation to the nation?" These and many kindred subjects of discussion have been relegated to the scrap heap along with "Has woman a soul?" and "What punishment shall be meted out to him who taught her books?"

4,000,000 Women Voters.

An army of 4,000,000 voters—women voters have appeared upon the political horizon. The story of their struggles are stirring and dramatic, their final victory marks an epoch in the history of our times, and is in its various phases a history of the American people, a psychological study of American growth and development.

Now, there is not a state in the Union without suffrage agitation along political lines. Women are not slow in politics. With the history of the world's experience to guide them; with no political sins upon their conscience and no political hobbles on their feet, they come with something hitherto unknown in the game: primal strength which brings red blood to politics, as primal youth brings red blood to the race.

There are seven campaign states this year. It is a fair estimate to say that of these four will carry. And by this accretion of strength other states will be heartened and the national situation immeasurably advanced.

There are two methods of enfranchisement: By the states, themselves, and by amendment to the federal constitution.

Congress may, upon direction from two-thirds of the states, or upon its own initiative, call a constitutional convention to amend the constitution, which, when ratified by the states, becomes operative. Twenty-six states have already signed such a petition to congress, and a joint resolution to that end has been introduced but not acted upon; or, if they pass a direct resolution to amend the federal constitution, such a resolution must pass the senate and house of representatives by a two-thirds vote of those present. The resolution must then be presented to the legislatures of the several states for ratification; and when ratified by two-thirds of the states, it becomes the law of the land.

Should Change Constitution.

Many of the closest students of the constitution believe our national progress will be hampered and delayed until a more elastic constitution is provided, one that will meet the demands of the new progress and remove constitutional barriers from our path.

It is within the power of congress by these methods, with the consent of the states, to enfranchise all women, and it is to the federal congress, the supreme legislature, that women have always turned for final justice. At the time the fifteenth amendment was adopted the women of America asked for recognition and it was denied them. The government refused to recognize the highest moral element in the country and the most intelligent, but bestowed full suffrage on her least intelligent male citizens. Women have been expected to love this government and to praise it, and stand by it, even after this affront has been offered them. And it speaks well for American womanhood that they did retain their loyalty and their patriotism.

A resolution for full suffrage has been in congress for over 50 years, and is called the Susan B Anthony amendment, and for 50 years the national organization of which you are a part, the National American Woman Suffrage association, has brought all possible pressure upon congress in its behalf. It has ever directed the unenfranchised women to turn their eyes to it as their goal, which, when won, would end the first great leap on the path of modern progress.

Have Safe Majority.

From a corporal's guard in congress who favored suffrage 20 years ago, a majority of the senate voted for it this session, and while its strength has not been tested in the house of representatives, it is conceded that a majority—more than a majority of the number—are suffragists, but in both branches of congress many good and honest suffragists are opposed to congress establishing equal rights for women, claiming that it is a question for the states. It is the old conflict raised by the states' rights doctrine, and your national organization, through its congressional committee maintained at Washington, has devised a plan indorsed by the best political minds, the most experienced friends of suffrage and calculated to advance the cause nationally and in the states, recognizing that national strength makes for strength in the states, and suffrage in the states strengthens the cause in the nation—the two are interdependent one upon the other.

The resolution introduced into the senate by Senator Shafroth of Colorado, and into the house of representatives by Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania, known as the Shafroth-Palmer amendment, in no manner supersedes or replaces the Anthony amendment. It is not a substitute for the Anthony amendment, but is in aid of it, calculated to open the door for its final passage, to build a path up to it, a path that will lead around and away from the present insurmountable barrier of states' rights. As a matter of truth, states' rights as applied to suffrage means the race problem.

Reach Barrier.

So far can we go and no further. When we find a man, a congressman, who is opposed to suffrage because of prejudice he may be won over or replaced, but when he comes from a section of the country where there is deep and bitter and abiding feeling and conviction that it would be a national sin for three-fourths of the states to force suffrage upon them without their consent we have reached a barrier that cannot be surmounted until a way is found. The Shafroth-Palmer amendment points to that way.

The state constitutions all contemplate that, in its last analysis, the people of the states shall pass upon suffrage, but the legislative barriers nullify that intention. They say this is the people's question for them to decide as they wish. The constitution of the United States itself leaves this question to the states, but did not intend that these constitutions should be so drawn by one generation that another generation would forever be denied the rights presumed to be secured to them.

The Shafroth-Palmer amendment provides that when eight per cent of the number of legal voters at the last general election sign a proper petition, the people may vote directly upon the proposition of suffrage.

Not Invasion of Rights.

It is not an invasion of states' rights. It passes the matter to the people in the states, they may decide it directly when they get ready without asking permission from the state legislature to make such decision.

The passage of a suffrage amendment by congress will give suffrage a tremendous boom from coast to coast, and federal sanction would dignify the amendment in states where suffrage has never been treated seriously.

Suffrage would no longer be a subject for political controversy and its ultimate accomplishment would be merely a matter of procedure.

Under such a law 15 more states would speedily adopt suffrage and the cause would be won. The rest of the states would come in by the quickest route, suffrage would be welcomed as a means whereby the most serious problems could be solved and no longer regarded as a burden to be avoided.

Victory in Sight.

Suffrage for the whole country is in sight. The victory will not be won without a struggle, because every advance in the direction of progress from the dawn of civilization has met with the opposition of a prejudice strengthened by ignorance. Every new invention for the benefit of mankind in its inception has been declared an impossibility. Every reformer has been called a crank and those who have done the most for the human race were considered lunatics, heretics, or enemies of society at one time or another.

Suffrage is coming because it is right. Men who have had the power to hold half of the American citizenship in disfranchisement are beginning to see the injustice of their position. Men who believe that nations cannot stand still but must progress or retrograde, see that woman suffrage is a part of the general forward movement of the time.

FATAL DISEASE

From the National Monthly.

A young painter who had just finished a picture insisted upon a friend calling to see it.

"There now," enthused the artist, "you see my new picture. What's the matter with that?"

"I don't know," replied the bored friend, "but I should say it was a case of art failure."

standpoint, and that grazing is the least profitable use for arable land.

If it ultimately be demonstrated that cows can get along healthfully without grazing, the dairies will be moved nearer to or even within the limits of the city.

If this were done it would permit of delivery to consumers twice a day. Milk then would never be more than 12 hours old, and it would permit of delivery within three or four hours of the time of milking.

MILK TRANSPORTATION — The milk of cities is produced mostly within a radius of 50 miles. The milk of the night before and that of the morning are brought to the railroad station in the forenoon.

The milk reaches the city between noon and 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and is delivered to the consumer the following morning.

Half of the milk, then, is 24 hours old and half 36 hours old before it reaches the consumer, and as there is but one delivery a day, half of the milk is 48 hours old and half is 60 hours old before it is used and before the next delivery is made.

Such delay in shipping milk so short a distance is unpardonable in this day and age, and it is death to the babies.

Shipping milk by steam railroads is altogether too clumsy a method. Electric lines could do better. They can make as much speed while running as the steam roads and they could, by running over the city's system of passenger transportation, deliver the milk at widely distributed points in the city.

In addition, while the electric lines were hauling milk they could haul eggs and garden truck and other things that are only at their best when fresh.

CITY DELIVERY OF MILK—So long as there is but one delivery of milk a day from the country, there is not much sense in hauling milk twice a day to the consumer. The milk man properly argues that there is no gain in bringing back to the consumer the same milk that he had at his door in the morning.

His argument cannot be disputed when the consumer owns an icebox, but it is another story in the homes of the poor, who cannot afford the luxury of an icebox. A 12-hour supply cannot be cared for without ice during the hot months of the summer.

If we are to have but one delivery a day, why not have the milk delivered in the evening instead of in the morning. That would put the milk into the hands of mothers 12 hours earlier and add mightily to the chances of the babies.

It would have other advantages. The delivery wagons in large cities now start upon their routes at the unearthly hour of 2 o'clock in the morning and are through in time to go to the railroad station to remove the fresh supply from the cars and haul it to the depots of the dealer. Everybody then rests while the milk goes on aging until the following morning.

It would be more sensible to deliver the milk in the afternoon and evening when the household is awake to take care of it instead of putting it on the doorstep at 2, 3, 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning to freeze and break in the winter time or sizzle and rot in the morning sun of the summer.

It would be worth something to the sick, suffering and sleepless ones to be rid of the noise of the rattling wagons in the early morning hours.

One naturally wonders why the delivery wagons should not meet the trains at the depot when they arrive from the country and start at once with the milk to the consumer.

Why should it be loaded on the wagon, hauled to a depot and allowed to rest 12 hours or more and be reloaded again for delivery?

One more item of error in the delivery of milk is that of too many dealers with interlocking territory for delivery. One may see wagons of half a dozen different dealers deliver milk in the same block.

Upon whom does all this delay and extra cost fall ultimately? It falls upon the helpless infants.

The trouble with the whole retail milk business is that it is gauged upon the culinary needs of milk and is not sufficiently considered from the standpoint of the babies' welfare.

All Other Departments are located in The Bennett Building, 15 South Tejon Just across the alley from our old store.

It was indeed gratifying to us to see our store crowded with our old customers nearly all day yesterday. Really, one of the biggest regular day crowds we have ever had. We take this means of thanking you and hope to welcome you many times again. Come in and see just how we are located. You'll be welcome whether you come to buy or not. * *

We have found that our space works out to excellent advantage and that we will be able to carry practically full stocks. Our shortage is in display space, and we cannot show the great assortments of goods on tables and counters that we would like and as we are accustomed to doing. Though the fact that the Bennett Building is new and strictly up to date, will make it possible to carry these complete lines by having for our reserve stock its large, roomy, deep, well lighted and well-ventilated basement. While we will not actually sell in it, it will facilitate the handling by giving us plenty of room to work in. * * *

And while we are in these more or less crowded quarters we intend to keep our trade, and will do it by selling goods at a closer margin of profit than ever before. To those who are willing to stay with us under these conditions we are going to give splendid values. *

All the "yellow" sale signs have been taken down, though many odd lots and broken lines left will be continued at the sale prices and some even lower until sold. * * * * *

All of our regular employes will remain with us all of the time · so we'll have a force large enough to handle efficiently any crowd that may come. * * * * * * * * * *

A BOOMING CANADIAN CITY

Winnipeg Claims a Population Gain of 100,000 in Three Years

From a Consular Report.

The city of Winnipeg is the capital of the province of Manitoba, and is 60 miles north of the boundary line between Canada and the United States.

From a Hudson Bay trading post in 1870 and incorporation in 1874, Winnipeg has grown to be a first-class city, its 1914 population, according to one estimate, being 276,177, against 260,436 in 1913. In 1900 the population was only 50,503, and in 1910, 172,865. The city has exceptionally wide asphalted streets and pavements, several public parks, good buildings, street car system etc., and is modern and up to date. Were it not for the exceptionally long and rigorous winters, when the thermometer goes at times as low as 55 degrees below zero, it would be a pleasant place of residence. These severe conditions, which last from October to May or June, causes many throat, pulmonary and rheumatic affections.

Winnipeg owns its public utilities among which are the electrical works at Point du Bois on the Winnipeg river, 77 miles northeast of the city. The waterfall, naturally 37 feet, has been increased by the power development dam to 47 feet with a pond of 6,000 acres. The total power available without storage is 60,000 horsepower, which can be increased to 100,000 horsepower. These works, including generating operations completed and equipped, cost Winnipeg $5,000,000.

There are 376 factories in Winnipeg employing over 18,000 persons. The capital invested in manufacturing is said to be not far from $45,000,000.

Twelve railway tracks enter the city. The Canadian Pacific railway, the Canadian Northern railway, and the Grand Trunk Pacific railway, whose shops are all located in Winnipeg, employ over 5,000 hands. There are also 120 miles of switch siding facilities for manufacturers.

Winnipeg is the largest primary wheat market in the world. In 1913 150,749,800 bushels of wheat were inspected.

The total cost of new buildings erected in Winnipeg in 1913 was $18,621,650. Only five cities in America showed higher figures than this, yet there would have been much more building here had money been obtainable at easier rates.

In 1913 bank clearings were $1,635,000,000, about half those of Kansas City.

PATRIOTISM ABOVE PARTY

NOW, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States, do hereby admonish all good citizens of the United States and all persons within the territory and jurisdiction of the United States against aiding, abetting, countenancing, assisting or taking part in such unlawful proceedings; and I do hereby warn all persons engaged in or connected with said domestic violence and obstruction of the laws to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes on or before the 30th day of April, instant.—From the president's proclamation ordering troops to the Colorado strike district.

The effect of this pronouncement was magical. The strikers, the operators and the long suffering public felt that relief was at hand at last. And the reason was that the utterance came from the only man who, under the circumstances, could speak with real authority.

Now the readjustment is in progress. Order is being restored and it is improbable that serious trouble will occur again so long as the troops remain in the field. The most important object of the moment has been attained, for law and order prevail.

But this is only the beginning. Tomorrow the legislature will be convened in special session to solve the strike problem, and to the people of Colorado the event marks the actual facing of the crisis. Since last September all of us have merely talked we have praised, blamed, pleaded and threatened. Meanwhile conditions have steadily grown worse, culminating at last in lawlessness. Now both the time and opportunity for action have come.

If the [illegible] in the history of the United States [illegible] is in all of us it is [illegible]. It is not a time for denunciation and recrimination; it is a time for clear thinking and sober acting. The legislator who can take his seat in the State House tomorrow with his mind fixed on thoughts of personal or party advantage is not merely unworthy of his place he is false to his obligation to the people he was elected to serve. And this is equally true of the newspapers, which so largely influence public opinion and determine the public attitude toward great questions.

At a [illegible] like this [illegible] are things in [illegible] Federal troops have restored peace, and the President has given assurance that they will maintain peace until the state of Colorado can reassert its authority. To assume that the President's intervention has relieved us of any responsibility would be to enter into a fool's paradise it only increases our responsibility. The whole nation knows now what until two weeks ago was chiefly a matter of local concern that the people of Colorado, through their state government, are admittedly incapable of enforcing so fundamental a law as that relating to the protection of life and property from organized insurrection. Not [illegible] of Colorado has taken action at [illegible] but will the stigma be [illegible]

We repeat that the problem before the Legislature should be approached by its members without a trace of partisan feeling. For any group to take advantage of the predicament of the Ammons administration to advance its own partisan ends would be merely repeating the miserable tactics which are largely responsible for the present conditions.

* * * * *

In this [illegible] the people have a right to look to the Progressive members of the legislature for strong leadership. Though in the minority, they will exert a large influence. They represent a party which stands for social and economic progress, for sane and sensible reform where reform is needed. They represent a party which was organized as a protest against existing conditions, and so they should be expected to meet a higher test than is usually applied. True patriotism must come before party gain. The Progressives in the Legislature should, and we believe will, work earnestly for the enactment of equitable measures which will not only effect a just settlement of the present labor troubles but produce such conditions in the coal camps as will prevent their recurrence.

A NEW EARTH

AND I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth are passed away; and there is no more * * * Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, * * * and he shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; and death shall be no more; neither shall there be crying, nor crying, nor pain, any more: the first things are passed away.

The eyes of men have always looked for a more perfect earth; the souls of men have always sought perfection where now so much is imperfection; the aspirations of men have always reached upward and forward toward God. Long years have passed since John saw that holy city, the new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, and we still seek in vain to find the vision realized.

God does indeed dwell with men, but too often they recognize him not. And so today, instead of the new Jerusalem of John's vision, many of us can see only the same old earth that he knew a world of wars and strikes, of hate and bitterness, of envy and covetousness, of disappointment and sorrow. Our hopes are not realized, our ambitions are thwarted, our high aspirations are dragged in the dust. And sometimes, as our ideals come crashing down about us, we wonder if after all there is hope of a new earth, if John wasn't, after all, leading us on with a vain hope.

But is it as dark as we sometimes think? Are not the clouds lifting from the peak? Is there not a glimpse of fair sky beyond? May we not catch sight, though faint and flitting, of the gleaming towers and walls of the new Jerusalem?

For if we have war, something of its old horror is gone, and we fight, not to avenge an insult and to kill as many as we can kill, but to help a nation that sadly needs help.

And if we have strikes, and blood is spilled, even here is hope. For from all over the land is rising the demand that society must take steps to end this bitter strife; that a better way out must be found than recourse to the sword.

And if there are still hate and bitterness, may we not hope that men's hearts have grown somewhat softer in the centuries that have passed since Christ died? If envy and covetousness are still rife, are we not learning more of their futility? If disappointment and sorrow still come, isn't society coming more and more to recognize that much of disappointment and of sorrow may be removed as men work together, through society, for the welfare of all? And is not the spirit that moves in that direction stronger now than in all history?

And so we need not despair. We need not give ourselves over to eating and drinking, in the cynical thought that tomorrow we die. Our faith may sometimes falter, our eyes grow dim, and yet we know that in spite of all humanity does press onward.

Even in our own harassed state we are moving on. We have had dark experiences, and as our legislature meets this week we have all of us cause to exercise the utmost tolerance and wisdom. But all that has happened, sad as it has been, may work together for our good if only we have the faith and the strength and the courage to go forward.

"And he that sitteth on the throne," writes John, "said, 'Behold, I make all things new.'" Even the hearts and the desires and the aspirations of men, the faith that has faltered, the ideals that have been shattered, the hope that has been lost!

THE PAPETOWN MINERS

To the Editor of The Gazette

I noticed in The Gazette of April 27 and 28 two misstatements which reflected upon the miners of Papetown.

The first mistake was that a Papetown miner was arrested in Colorado Springs during the mass meeting for carrying concealed weapons. I did not pay much attention to it, and would not have corrected this if it had not been for the next statement that another miner—J. N. Bellis a local leader of Papetown—was found in possession of 30 high-power rifles and a large quantity of ammunition, which were confiscated by the sheriff.

Both of these statements were incorrect. First, there is no such man as Pantilion Ortez (the man arrested April 26) living in Papetown. As to the other statement, J. N. Bellis is not a resident of Papetown and never was. He is not a leader and has no official position in the Papetown union nor is he [illegible] in any way for our local.

Mexicans as Soldiers

Some Lessons From the War of Forty-Six

The following account of various incidents of the war of '46 was written [illegible] man who, during a long residence in Mexico, became familiar with traditions and people there. His description of the Mexican fighting and his statements showing the seriousness of the last Mexican war give some idea of what it will mean if the peace negotiations now pending fail and American troops should be sent on to Mexico City:

[illegible] inscrutable [illegible], a vast number of people regard war with Mexico as unalloyed joy in the nature of a military picnic. They point to the events of 1846-8 as proof of the incapacity of the Mexicans to fight, and laugh-scout the sending of the New York police force to arrest the Mexican troops.

The facts of the matter are that unless the American troops advance to Mexico City there will be some hard fighting. If the rebels join the Mexican federal forces to any great extent it is more than probable—there will be very hard fighting.

Now that war is practically certain, though, let us insist that the task of whipping the Mexicans be approached in a serious manner. To do otherwise is to invite the needless sacrifice of many a brave man's life.

Reminiscences of Mexican War.

When actual fighting starts—whether it be war or "something short of war," only a fool underestimates his opponent. Overconfidence has brought many a disaster in its train. How the Mexican war of 1846-8 ever came to be considered as a trifling affair has always been a mystery to the student of Mexican military operations. In spite of the fact that the American arms were uniformly successful, some desperate fighting had to be done on more than one occasion. The Mexican soldier fighter is anything but a despicable opponent.

How near General Taylor came to being overwhelmed is a matter of common knowledge to students of the Mexican war. The magnificent service of the artillery and the indomitable bravery of the Mississippians under Jefferson Davis in reality saved the day. As it was, the American troops were pressed back from the positions they held at the commencement of the day, a proof of the severity of the fighting our forces lost 747 men out of 4,000 engaged.

Winfield Scott's advance from Vera Cruz to the City of Mexico was by no means a promenade. He started with 10,000 men, and entered Mexico City with barely 6,000 soldiers fit for service, incurring losses of over 40 per cent of his force in two months' fighting.

Brave in Defeat.

Two of the Mexican defeats were as honorable to the losers as they were glorious to the victors. The Molina del Rey was stubbornly held, the American troops being repulsed several times. But, in the end, the superior training of the American soldiers prevailed, and the Mexican troops were driven out of their works, but inflicted, before defeat, a loss of 799 out of 3,100 Americans engaged, or 26 per cent.

At Chapultepec the Mexican troops fought as valiantly as any men could. The military academy was held by the Mexican cadets until they were annihilated. Even when General Pillow's men had overcome all opposition except a little squad of cadets serving one gun in one of the bastions, the boys continued service of the piece until they were shot down.

Surely we can give credit to the bravery of our opponents. If the Mexicans were cowards, and wouldn't fight, there would be no credit in the American defeating them. The more valiant the enemy, the more glorious the victory.

General Grant, in his autobiography, gives the soldier's view, and gave the Mexican high praise. He depicts the inferior training of the Mexican soldier of his day and compares it with that of the American. Never was there an army more poorly led or trained than the Mexican. But, he said, "I have seen as brave stands made by one of these men as I have ever seen made by soldiers," and yet again, "the Mexican, as on many other occasions, stood up as well as any troops can do." And surely Grant saw some stubborn fighting as any general that ever lived.

But mark well these words of Grant's: "The Mexican war of 1846-8 could be an impossibility in this generation."

Miserable Weapons.

In comparing the fighting done by both sides in the Mexican war, we are too often apt to overlook the disparity in the weapons carried by the combatants. The Mexicans were miserably armed. Our own Ruxton, who was an officer in the British army, and had served in the Spanish cavalry during the earliest war, gave a graphic account of the Mexican infantryman's weapons in 1846. In his classical book on "Adventures in Mexico and the Rocky Mountains," he said: "The muskets of the infantry (if they have any) are condemned Tower muskets, turned out of the British service years before. I have seen them carrying firelocks without locks, and others, locks without hammers, the lighted end of a cigar being used as a match to ignite the powder in the pan." If any one thinks this an exaggeration, let him refer to Brantz Mayer's well-known book on Mexico, published in 1848. Mayer was on the staff of the American minister in Mexico. Or, again, to the diary of "A British Soldier in the American Army," who served in the First artillery, and was at Cerro Gordo, Contreras, Molina del Rey, and at the capture of the City of Mexico.

The suggestion is here made that it is wonderful that any troops armed as the Mexicans were could ever have stood for a moment before the superb rifles of the American soldiers. But, under such conditions, to have fought so valiantly as to win such encomiums as those given by Grant, who fought against them, is to finally settle the question of Mexican courage.

Today the Mexican soldiers are well armed. The seven-millimeter Mauser rifle they have is a fine weapon. Their field guns are modern of the French type so successfully used in the Balkan war. They have a well-equipped arsenal and cartridge factory in Mexico City. And, as I see it, it will be anything but a picnic getting our troops into that city.

Difficult Country.

Now, of course, there is no question as to the outcome of the war with Mexico. But it is nothing short of criminal not to recognize the gravity of the situation. We do not want a repetition of the Cuban campaign. In the Spanish-American war many a poor fellow fell through the crazy exuberance of mobs calling for instant action. The country between Vera Cruz and Mexico City is as difficult as any troops ever fought over. The nearest comparison to it, in the United States, is from Colorado Springs to Leadville. Any one who has made the trip over either the Mexican railway or the Interoceanic will recognize the aptness of the comparison.

Between Vera Cruz and the Anahuac plateau is one of the highest ranges of mountains in North America. Orizaba, nearly 18,000 feet high, and the Cofre de Perote, 13,599 feet, are in plain view from either of the two lines between Vera Cruz and Mexico City. And these rise abruptly from sea level. The railway between Esperanza and Orizaba falls 4,100 feet in 21 miles; something like the rise between Colorado Springs and Cripple Creek, over the Short Line.

That is the kind of country the American troops will have to maneuver in between Mexico City and Vera Cruz. And there are just about 200 miles of it between the two places. No wonder it took Winfield Scott six months to force his way through.

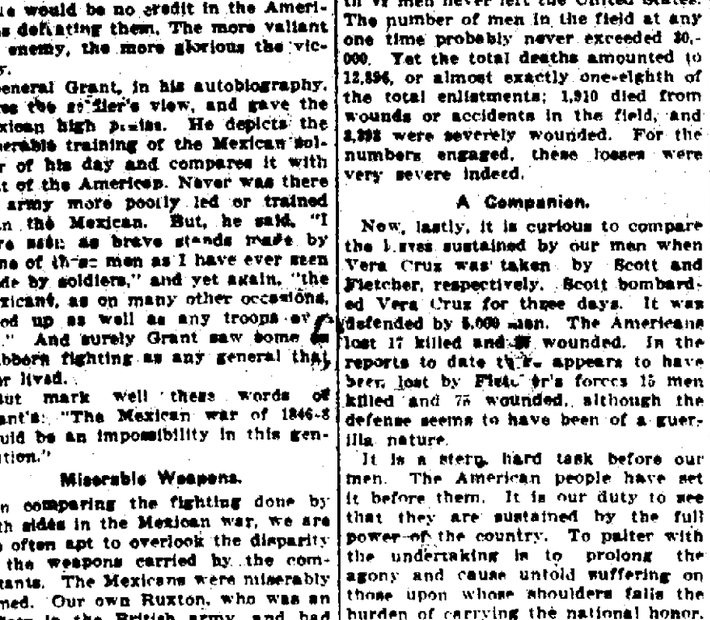

Now, finally, to prove how severe the Mexican war really was, the following figures, taken from the adjutant general's report for 1849, may be given. There were actually 101,110 enlistments during the war. Many of these men never left the United States. The number of men in the field at any one time probably never exceeded 30,000. Yet the total deaths amounted to 12,896, or almost exactly one-eighth of the total enlistments; 1,910 died from wounds or accidents in the field, and 2,393 were severely wounded. For the numbers engaged, these losses were very severe indeed.

A Companion.

Now, lastly, it is curious to compare the losses sustained by our men when Vera Cruz was taken by Scott and Fletcher, respectively. Scott bombarded Vera Cruz for three days. It was defended by 5,000 men. The Americans lost 17 killed and 63 wounded. In the reports to date there appears to have been lost by Fletcher's forces 15 men killed and 75 wounded, although the defense seems to have been of a guerilla nature.

It is a stern, hard task before our men. The American people have set it before them. It is our duty to see that they are sustained by the full power of the country. To palter with the undertaking is to prolong the agony and cause untold suffering on those upon whose shoulders falls the burden of carrying the national honor. We have gone too far to draw back. And now it is essential that the blows should come hard and fast.

But do not let us blind ourselves as to the serious nature of the undertaking. It is not "something short of war." It is war. Don't let us make it anything else but what it is. To do so is to cause unnecessary slaughter of our own men.

MAY DEPOSE KINGS OF SEA

From the New York Times.

When Marconi made his amazing discovery of a new electric wave transmission he not only brought about a revolution in the world's signaling systems, but he likewise turned topsy-turvy many tomes of codes and laws governing navigation and maritime jurisprudence.

The kernel of the impending change in maritime law lies in these words expressing a fundamental connected with the code of the high seas: "Supreme authority on the ocean because there is no connection with the shore." This has been the rule, and this has been the reason why the skipper, ancient and modern, has been invested with the powers of a king. His authority has been absolute. Between ports he has been a monarch. A few centuries ago the life or death of those on board his ship was lawfully in his hands. And right now, in the year 1914, the freedom and class of treatment accorded every person on a ship is still absolutely such as the captain shall decide upon.

May Depose the Sea Captain.

It is the authority of the commander of a vessel that the Marconi system will first shake, according to students of maritime law. And it will be because the commander of a vessel may be almost constantly controlled from shore.

The wireless system will place him gradually, as nearly as possible, in the same class with the locomotive engineer—whose responsibility, by the way, for the safety of human life, is fully as great as that of a sea captain. Engineers have to run according to telegraphed orders received on the way on many railroads. When emergencies arise, not seen by the distant train dispatcher, the engineer telegraphs of them. Why not the sea captain?

Legal Authority Predicts Changes.

George L. Robinson, of the firm of Robinson & Robinson, proctors in admiralty, and attorneys for Sir Thomas Lipton, is an authority on maritime law and declares the Marconi wireless discovery is bound to cause sweeping changes in codes governing situations that arise on the high seas.

"The use of wireless telegraphy in connection with conditions and situations peculiar to the high seas opens a very deep and interesting question," said Mr. Robinson.

"Now take the instance of the ancient authority of the sea captain. When he sailed out of port for a voyage that might mean an absence of two or three years, with no cable means of communication at any time with the owners, supreme power had to be conferred upon him. So long as he must be in charge, he must be obeyed and respected to a far greater degree than would be the case were he in a position of power on land.

"Why, to emphasize the absolute power of the ship captain there are cases on record of skippers actually putting in irons the owners of the very vessel they commanded for insisting upon having their way on the high seas.

Orders to Captains by Wireless.

"Now that an owner can keep in such close and constant communication through the medium of wireless it is very possible that sea captains will begin to receive important orders on the voyage. This may grow into a custom—there is nothing to prevent it. The climax may come in the final insistence of owners that the adaptation of the wireless system to modern navigation permits them to replace a skipper at sea by telegraphing his first officer to take charge. This conceded, a host of sections written into maritime law will have to undergo a change. All will be an outcome of the innovation that keeps ship and shore constantly connected.

CURIOUS CEREMONY OPENS ELECTRIC LINE

The opening of the first electric street car line in Constantinople recently was marked by a curious ceremony, in which two lambs were sacrificed upon the tracks, the rails being smeared with the sacrificial blood while prayers were offered by Mohammedan priests for the success of the undertaking. The officials of the new line took part in the ceremony and are shown in an illustration in the May Popular Mechanic Magazine with their hands extended, the attitude of invocation.

MAGAZINE WORK FOR WOMEN

From the New York Herald.

Miss Ida Tarbell, successful magazinist, sounds an optimistic note in regard to magazine work as a career for women.

"There is a great opportunity for women in magazine work," says Miss Tarbell. "This is one field in which a woman labors under no handicap. No one asks when a manuscript is received whether it was written by a woman or by a man. Women in the magazine world stand on their own merits.

"This is a very good thing for women. It makes it impossible for them to complain that they are abused because of their sex. I often grow so tired of hearing those complaints I am glad that there is one place where they are not possible.

"The despair of the magazinist is that they don't get a better quality of material than they do. The day when a brilliant or unusual feature is received is marked in the magazine calendar.

"The idea of writing or editing from a woman's standpoint is, I believe, all poppycock. I don't take much interest in magazines for women only, as I am incapable of differentiating myself from the human race.

The requirements of a magazine writer are a real interest in things, a great avidity for things and a desire to write on those things. There is no use in trying to write unless there is something about which you really wish to write.

The magazine writer must know how to see, must have trained powers of observation, must know how to get at facts and must have a real passion for things as they are, whether she is going after fiction or some other class of writing.

"The more the magazine writer knows the better. She must get an education, but it doesn't matter how she gets it. She may get it in college or in schools. She may get it by reading. If she has an opportunity to travel that is very good, but she can learn about things in other ways if it isn't possible for her to travel.

The magazine writer mustn't be afraid of hard work. She must study, see and understand. She mustn't be afraid of the hard patience of life.

"Now, as to getting a start, I think I must be pretty positive about advising the beginner not to begin at the top. I always advise a girl who tells me she wants to go into magazine writing to try [illegible] good newspaper [illegible] school for writing. They give a [illegible]

[illegible] training in [illegible] and telling experiences that is [illegible] their business. They [illegible] how to hunt for subjects. [illegible] to write for [illegible] you [illegible] that [illegible] you a good city [illegible] and tell you to go [illegible] and write things. The [illegible] for a newspaper [illegible] and make [illegible] that is what the [illegible] of [illegible].

"Of course the newspaper [illegible] is very hard in many ways, but [illegible] very fact makes it worth [illegible]. This thing of wanting to do [illegible] and [illegible] is [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible].

"If you are willing to [illegible] dinners and to work 18 hours a [illegible] you are pretty sure to get on. If you are not, then you probably [illegible] a success in magazine work or anything else."

CHICKENS POOR GAS DETECTORS

From Coal Age

In combating a mine fire at a colliery in the Raniganj coal field in India, a chicken was carried in by two members of the fire fighting squad. On returning to the pit bottom the chicken was all right but both men fell to the ground in a collapsed state, which seems to prove that chickens are not suitable as detectors of gaseous atmosphere in mine rescue work.

One reason for the experiments with chickens is due to the fact that many mining men believe mice and canaries are delicate indicators of danger. Such authorities contend that the margin of safety with mice and canaries is too large, for these latter, when used as detectors, keel over at a time when men are still unaffected and can continue quite a while in their rescue operations.

What is desired is some animal or bird that is only slightly more susceptible to poisonous atmospheres than man. At the same time, of course, it must be recognized that in rescue work, the [illegible] to actively [illegible] in exhausting physical effort, while the [illegible] is usually at rest.

Consisting of warehouse receipts on a large scale aroused misgivings among bulls in wheat.

More than 400,000 bushels of No. 2 hard was reported as having been ordered out of Chicago elevators for export and there were notices of large charters having been taken for 1,400 bushels of wheat from here in the last 48 hours.

May delivery led the advance in wheat, although the biggest trade was in the new crop months. One leading elevator concern alone purchased fully 1,100,000 bushels of September.

Shorts in corn showed nervousness from the outset and covered freely, especially for May.

Buying, said to be for Milwaukee packers gave provisions a lift.

FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, May 2.—The hopes of a settlement of the Mexican problem held out by the good offices tendered by the three South American republics caused a complete reversal of the form of speculation in stocks. This was supplemented in the course of the week by the growing ease of money, the splendid promise for the country's crops and increasing confidence that the interstate commerce commission would sanction an advance in freight rates. The improvement in London, owing to the likelihood of an agreement on the home rule question, also benefited this market.

The reserve still maintained by capital presents difficulties for the solutions of inferior credit with existing obligations, a number of which were acutely weak in the market. Financing of these, however, made progress.

...he editorial board has also super...vised the final edition of the "Scout Masters' Manual," described as "a book written by 10,000 men." A revised edition of the "Handbook for Boys" is also under way having been submitted to experts after expert for criticisms and assistance.

The book department, under the chief scout librarian, Mr. Franklin K. Mathiews, has worked out a radical departure in the publication of boys' books, providing at a price of 50 cents a volume, 25 of the best boys' books ever written—books which formerly could be bought only at $1.00 or $1.25. This is the boy scout way of working against the pernicious influence of mediocre and vicious books for boys.

The field department has assisted scout councils and scout masters all over the country. Chief Scout Seton, and Daniel Carter Beard, national scout commissioner, have time and again placed themselves at the disposal of local boy-workers throughout the country. Two members of the headquarters staff, S. A. Moffat and L. S. Fr...e, have given practically their entire time to field services in all parts of the United States.

The many other activities of the organization are outlined and the finance committee appends a list of contributors whose voluntary contributions range from $1 to $11,000. In spite of some of the large subscriptions an enormous amount of money is needed still to give the practical assistance asked for, and seriously needed, throughout America.

The beautifully illustrated book is, in itself, an inspiration and a call for action in behalf of character development work with boys.

HOW ANY ONE CAN HELP

In answer to the question, "How can I help in this character-development work for boys?" which is asked by hundreds every month, the national council of the Boy Scouts of America has prepared the following, which applies with equal force in any community in the United States:

1. By following the scout oath and laws and doing a "Good Turn Daily" to some one.

2. By inviting one or more boys to observe the scout oath and laws, even if they cannot become scouts.

3. By encouraging one or more boy scouts in their efforts to carry out the scout program.

4. By definitely agreeing to cooperate with the local council in your city or the scout master in your neighborhood.

5. By bringing to the attention of the national headquarters suggestions which may increase the usefulness of the boy scout movement to boys and guard against unwise leadership.

6. By volunteering your services as a scout master or encouraging some man of good character to do so.

7. By stimulating wholesome reading by your boy, your nephew or one or more other boys in whom you may be interested by sending them a copy of our handbook for boys and a year's subscription to Boys' Life, the boy scouts magazine, and one or more books from every boys library.

8. By subscribing from $10 to $5,000 a year for the support of the national council's program for supervision and extension work for 1914.

ANOTHER UNIVERSITY ADDS A COURSE IN SCOUTING

Boston university has taken up boy scout work in its theological school, announcing a program of 12 lectures by Dr. N. E. Richardson, professor of religious psychology and pedagogy, and Ormond E. Loomis, scout commissioner in Boston. Since the announcement, the cities which formerly numbered about 30, has been increased to 50, all young men who are earnestly engaged in character development work with boys by the scout method.

Courses of instruction in boy scout methods are now given in the University of Chicago, Pittsburg university, McCormick Theological seminary, University of California and other colleges.

BIG PRIZES FOR BOYS

Scout Movement Begins Educational Contest Based on Dan Boone's Life Story

In pursuance of its purpose to stimulate the patriotism of the boys of America by appealing to their imaginations and their inherent love of great heroes, the Boy Scouts of America, through Boys' Life, the official scout magazine, publishes in the May number, just issued, the extraordinary announcement that it will award the boys $300 in cash prizes for the best essays written by them on the qualities displayed by Daniel Boone, the great pioneer, which made him a scout and a valuable citizen. Material for the essays will be contained in a remarkable serial story entitled, "Scouting With Daniel Boone," which the movement has induced Dr. Everett T. Tomlinson to write. The first installment will appear in the June issue of the magazine.

The $300 will be divided into 57 parts. The first prize will be $50 cash; the second, $25. There will be 10 $10 prizes, 20 $5 prizes and 25 $1 prizes. Thus no boy will be deterred from trying to make an estimate of the splendid qualities of the great early American.

Dr. Tomlinson's story, the announcement says, will give the boy "an accurate idea of the conditions under which a vast territory in the United States was settled, of the difficulties met and overcome, and of men who did valorous deeds in the early years of the republic."

The central figure, Boone, is described as a hero "as worthy of everlasting fame as those heroes (some of them purely mythical) of an olden time in the olden world, like King Arthur, Sir Galahad, Sir Lancelot, Robin Hood and Alfred the Great." The point is made that Boone is more worthy of fame in America because he was American and worked conscientiously for his country, "was brave, yet gentle; a hunter, but was opposed to the useless slaughter of game; his habits were clean, he was reverent, unselfish, charitable, kind, considerate, a devoted friend, a true man. His life typifies many of the qualities which are exalted and instilled by the boy scout movement; his life story stimulates chivalry and patriotism."

The man whom the boy scout magazine has got to write the great story, Dr. Tomlinson, is the author of some 20 famous historical books for boys. He has a wide reputation among boys for popularity, and among teachers and librarians for fidelity to historic facts.

In publishing this story, the scout movement will be carrying out its plan to introduce to boys, through Boys' Life, high-class literature which not only thrills but inspires to better living. After the story appears in the magazine it will be published in book form by Doubleday, Page & Co., and it is with the cooperation of these publishers that the magazine is able to carry out its extraordinary educational campaign by means of the big prizes.

AUTHOR AIDS SCOUTS

Richard Harding Davis Offers His Big Estate as a Camping Place

Richard Harding Davis, the author, has offered the use of his enormous Mount Kisco estate for any troops of Boy Scouts of America who wish to camp there. This announcement will bring joy to the hearts of hundreds of boys. In a letter to scout headquarters, Mr. Davis says:

"I have some 250 acres out here which is quite wild. There are two lakes on it and boats and canoes and the woods are so old that I can lose myself in them. Mrs. Davis and I would be very glad to have the boys turn themselves loose. Maybe they would be interested in some of the cooking kits the correspondents used in wars. Mt. Kisco is 40 miles from New York and my place is six miles from the station. If you want out of doors for swimming and trees to chop I can give the boys that. There would be room for four patrols, two on either side of the lake." He adds: "Now is the time to book dates."

Judging from the experience of a troop from Portchester, N. Y., who last summer went over in a huge motor bus and had a story book time, scouts in New York and Connecticut will take advantage eagerly of this unusual opportunity. Possibly some from greater distances will "hike" there during the summer.

The Portchester scouts were royally received by Mr. Davis and his wife (nee Bessie McCoy, the actress) and turned loose on the estate and allowed to explore to their hearts' content. Mr. Davis played all sorts of games with them, told them stories, and organized scout contests, prizes being presented by Mrs. Ethel Barrymore Colt, whose estate adjoins Mr. Davis'.

A GREAT EXPLORER WRITES ON "PATHFINDING"

One of the most fascinating stories ever published by the boy scout movement to carry instruction to boys in their work for merit badges is one on "Pathfinding" written by Belmore Browne, the explorer and mountain climber who "conquered" Mount McKinley after Dr. Cook failed. It appears in the May issue of "Boys' Life," the boy scout magazine, and contains information which will be as helpful to boys in the immediate neighborhood of their homes as well as in "the wild."

SETON AND BEARD EDIT A MAGAZINE

ANNOUNCEMENT JUST MADE

NEW YORK, May 2.—Ernest Thompson Seton and Dan Beard, the two greatest "boys' men" in the United States, have accepted positions as the associate editors of "Boys' Life," the boy scouts' official monthly magazine, according to an important announcement contained in the May issue of that publication, just from the presses. It is regarded as the biggest news of a generation in the realm of boys' literature.

For years, these two men have been writing books about the great outdoors and our relation to it. They have spread wholesomely the imagination of boys— more, almost, than any fiction writers. Pretty nearly every boy in America looks up to Mr. Beard and Mr. Seton as great links with the fascinating mysteries of animals, trailing and that wonderfully fascinating subject of "how to make things."

Joining forces on this magazine, they will come into even closer contact with the boys of America. Already serving as officers in the great organization known as the Boys Scouts of America— Mr. Seton being the chief scout and Mr. Beard the national scout commissioner—they have widened the spheres of their good influence by accepting the new positions.

Not a number of this publication will go out without practical suggestions or interesting experiences told by these famous men. Questions will be answered, camp suggestions offered and puzzles and prizes of their devising given to stimulate boys to original work. Grownups will wish they were boys again to have the rare opportunity of this monthly chat with these splendid exponents of the outdoor life.

In its announcement the editorial board of the movement says that Mr. Seton's and Mr. Beard's services as assistant editors will be "a further contribution, with no compensation save knowledge of greater joys and benefits brought into the lives of boys."

This magazine is published by the scout movement in the interest of every boy in the land, the board adds. It is intended to carry accurate information to boys, to heighten their ideals, to quicken their sympathies, to make them better fitted for successful, happy manhood.

The May number contains a letter from Judge Ben Lindsey, the famous juvenile court judge, in which he says he wishes every boy in America received "Boys Life" every month; a similar letter from Governor Hanna of North Dakota, and letters of high commendation from George Horace Lorimer, editor of "The Saturday Evening Post;" Richard Harding Davis, Mayor Blankenburg of Philadelphia, United States Forester Graves, Governor Eberhardt of Minnesota, Governor Hunt of Arizona, Lawrence F. Abbott, publisher of "The Outlook;" Senator Clapp and others; also from many high officials of the boy scout movement.

MONKS SNOWBOUND IN ALPS

From the London Chronicle.

GENEVA.—A solid wall of snow, nearly 15 feet high, surrounds the hospice of the Grand St. Bernard, in which the monks and a few visitors are kept prisoners.

During March the number of avalanches and the heavy snowfall exceeded anything experienced in the pass for 50 years. Telegraph and telephone wires are lying in the snowdrifts, and all communication with the valleys on both the Swiss and Italian sides is interrupted.

A short time ago an avalanche entered the hospice itself through some of the upper windows, but nobody was seriously injured. The St. Bernard dogs are doing extra sentry duty, and are patrolling each side of the pass day and night for lost travelers.

It will be several weeks before the few visitors who are now in the hospice will be able to descend to the valleys, even if they use skis. There is sufficient food and drink to stand a "snow siege" of several months.

NAT GOODWIN COMES 10 SPRINGS LAST OF MONTH IN 'A LITTLE WATER ON THE SIDE'

'Peg o' My Heart,' Hartley Manners Dainty Play, Also Coming With Peggy O'Neil

WITH but three more attractions booked for a Colorado Springs appearance, the theatrical season is nearing an end. The remaining entertainments, however, are of a high class and will rank well with other productions of a season which has been good in quality, if not quantity, of its plays. Nat Goodwin, in William Collier's trifling comedy, "A Little Water on the Side," will be seen Saturday, May 30. Goodwin should be excellent in this brisk modern farce. Then comes "Peg o' My Heart," the delightful play of Hartley Manners, in which his wife, Laurette Taylor, has scored the greatest sensational success of the decade in New York. While Miss Taylor will not be seen here, the play will be well done by Peggy O'Neil as the little Irish girl. Following "Peg" is Richard Bennett, in "Damaged Goods," the Brieux sociological play, which has been the cause of unlimited discussion wherever it has appeared.

Mr. Manners wrote "Peg" in Chicago during the summer of 1911. He wrote it for Miss Taylor, then his fiancee. After it was finished, however, the script remained in his desk for many months. Mr. Morosco, producing Richard Walton's play, "The Bird of Paradise," sought a woman to play the Hawaiian girl. He found her in Miss Taylor. So to Mr. Morosco went the manuscript of the Manners' comedy. It found immediate favor and was produced, with Miss Taylor in the title role, at Morosco's Burbank theater in Los Angeles early in the summer of 1912.

The creator of the role of Jerry was Henry Stanford, now playing the part in one of the "Peg" road companies; Alaric fell to Donald Bowles of one of the Morosco companies; Ethel Chichester was portrayed by Roberta Arnold, now a motion picture star, and Mrs. Chichester was none other than Emilie Melville, who has never missed a performance at the Cort theater, New York. "Peg" ran 11 weeks in Los Angeles.

After a few performances outside New York, the new Morosco company of "Peg" opened Mr. Cort's theater on the evening of December 20, 1912. It has been there, without interruption either in summer or at any other time, ever since, and is now playing its last five weeks. Only two changes have been made in the assignment of parts: Miss Norman, forced to retire through ill health, is now traveling in Europe. Miss Gartland is playing Ethel in a road company of "Peg." Their roles are filled at the Cort, respectively, by Violet Kemble Cooper and Yvonne Jarrette.

Miss Taylor's comments on the growth of the play for which she was primarily responsible are wholly delightful.

"I could not see," she says, "why Mr. Manners persisted in keeping the whole action of the piece in England. I wanted but one act there and the first and concluding scenes in New York. Besides, I wanted Peg's father to appear; I wished him to be the butler in the Chichester family or some such gave old [illegible] creature!

"After we had finally settled upon the story, I could not wait to see an actual version of the dialogue. He was set against himself, so to speak, but at length I told him that I positively refused to appear in it unless he read it to me at once. He warned me again, most solemnly and protested. As he went on he became quite interested and at length he looked up and interrogated smilingly: 'Well, how do you like it?' And I answered from the depth of my being 'Hartley, it's awful!' That was the end of the author's reading, and he vowed that it should be the end of my dallying with the play."

Days of the old Silver circuit, when traveling theatrical organizations played on improvised stages in dance halls or barns and the audiences sat on planks laid on the ends of kegs, are recalled by an old program from the Colorado Springs Opera house, which has recently come into the possession of H. S. Rogers, formerly dramatic editor of The Gazette. The program is for the grand opening of the playhouse and the engagement of the great emotional artiste, Miss Maude Granger, in the "favorite play in five acts from the French of Alexander Dumas, Jr., entitled 'Camille, or the Fate of a Coquette.'"

The program is printed in gold on white satin ribbon, about eight inches long and four inches broad. The lettering now, and probably then is almost indistinguishable. The lettering is extremely fancy and the souvenir was considered the most artistic, and at the same time expensive, possible to obtain.

Mr. Rogers has presented the program to the present management of the Opera house, that it might be framed and preserved. The cast of "Camille" as played at that time might be interesting to many and is given herewith:

Camille	Miss Maude Granger
Nichette	Miss Lillian Joyce
Madame Prudence	Mrs. Necia Robinson
Olimpe	Miss Tessie Deagle
Nanine	Miss Ada Rutledge
Armand Duval	Mr. Ogden Stevens
Count de Varville
..	Mr. Wright Huntington
Mons Duval	Mr. Charles Thompson
Gaston	Mrs. J. H. Hazleton
Gustave	Mr. King Hedley

In France distinguished dramatic critics have more than once held the important office of director general of the Comedie Francaise. Claretie and Sarcey assumed their important positions as stage producers only after years of experience in the critic's chair. The first instance in America however where the working newspaper man has been regarded as a possible constructive force in dramatic producing was noted but a few weeks ago, when Selwyn and company, producers of "Within the Law," announced that they had taken into active partnership Adolph Klauber, for many years dramatic critic of the New York Times. Mr. Klauber enters the firm not as press agent, but as an associate with full authority in the selection, casting and producing of its plays.

The step is the most progressive taken by any producing manager in years, and without doubt will prove a big factor in future productions of the Selwyn company. Why it has not been taken before it is hard to understand. Perhaps it is explained by the fact that managers year after year follow one another [illegible] the same kind of plays in [illegible] way and refusing [illegible] a play of a type which "does not appeal at present" until [illegible] the busin as producing a highly successful play of the [illegible] they "break [illegible] for the [illegible] have realized that the same knowledge and analytical capacity employed in the selection and preparation of plays might save him both time and expense. The new combination seems to augur well.

Daniel Frohman surprised everyone when he went into the moving picture business when "movies" as a form of theatrical entertainment were held in contempt by managers. He was ridiculed and derided, called unethical, and even a "dead one," when he became vice president of the Famous Players Film company. He has made more $1,000,000 in this enterprise, and here are a few of the things he has to say about motion pictures:

"I am not worrying in the least about the drama; pictures are doing the theatrical business good.

"I am going to produce again for the legitimate stage when things get settled.

"Moving pictures can never be as potent as the spoken drama.

"It is an established principle that the more good plays produced the more profitable the theatrical business becomes.

"Artistic competition puts every film manufacturer on his mettle.

"There is no limit to the range of subjects for moving pictures or scope of production.

"All our leading actors are anxious to act for the camera today.

"Acting for pictures is the best advertising that an actor can have and does more to build up a personal following than anything else."

The London Times, in an article on Ibsen's widow, who died the other day, says:

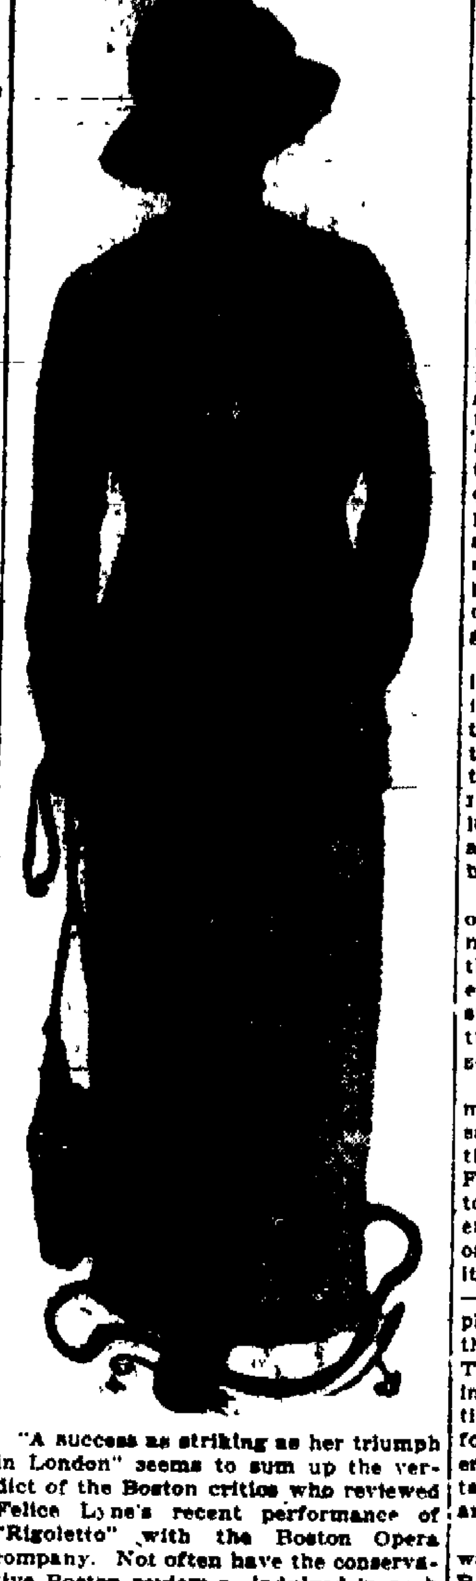

"Ibsen first met Susanna Thoresen about 1855, the year in which 'Lady Inger of Ostrat' was produced. A charming though incomplete, set of verses addressed to her in January, 1856 show that he had already fallen deeply in love with the girl of 20, and the story is told of him that on his first visit to the Thoresen household he suddenly said to Susanna, 'You are now Elina, but in time you will become Lady Inger.' Twenty years later, at Christmas, 1876 he gave his wife a copy of the German translation of 'Lady Inger' with the following inscription on the fly-leaf:

This book is by right indefeasible thine,
Who in spirit art born of the Ostrat line.

Ibsen's marriage took place on June 26, 1858 and in the following year he lifet Bergen to settle in Christiania as director of the Norwegian theater. During the long years of poverty that followed their marriage Mrs. Ibsen proved a most constant companion in every respect. Not only was she the only person at that time who approved of the book as he wrote in the preface to the second edition of his Comedy of Love, but when in the winter of 1865 Ibsen was attacked by a malarial fever his recovery was due as much to his wife's devotion as to his own magnificent constitution. He returned her affection to the full and when after 50 years of married life they at last settled down to a home of their own they are said to have gone about making their purchases with as lively an interest as any newly wedded couple.

A fundamental reason for the failure of the American playwright is that in the American theaters the play has not been the thing says a writer in Forum. The drama has been of secondary importance to the acting and the setting, the work of the playwright secondary to that of the manager, producer and actor. Fortunately the condition is passing, but without doubt it has had a retarding effect upon the growth of a vital American drama. It was not so very long ago that the name of the playwright was as often as not omitted from the program, and even now it is not unusual to see the manager's and actors' names much more conspicuously displayed than the author's. Inevitably such lack of consideration tends to degrade the position of the playwright to that of a tradesman rather than an artist.

The purpose of the theater is to entertain. It never did, it never will solve the sort of problems so called, which are being constantly thrust upon it," says E. H. Sothern. "Writers take an isolated case, put it forward as a [illegible]

"A success as striking as her triumph in London" seems to sum up the verdict of the Boston critics who reviewed Felice Lyne's recent performance of "Rigoletto" with the Boston Opera company. Not often have the conservative Boston reviewers indulged in such exuberant praise as they did in the case of this young American prima donna who is to follow her sensational successes abroad with a period of opera and concert giving in her native land.

Miss Lyne first came into worldwide prominence in London, where her Gilda made her famous over night. Her Marguerite, Juliette, Mimi, Lucia and Rosina aroused equal enthusiasm, and for an entire season she was the toast of all London. Then came a round-the-world tour as prima donna with the Quinlan Grand Opera company—a tour which suddenly terminated in Canada—and then the special performance in Boston which created such a furore that the little singer was promptly engaged for 20 performances next season. Three months will be devoted to an extended concert tour under the management of Foulton Charlton.

their purpose are born originally in the newspapers. But the isolated case proves nothing. If the writers had studied a thousand genuine, typical cases, and, having carefully obtained a result, had based their plays on that result the outcome might be significant, but not otherwise."

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson closed the first half of his phenomenally successful American farewell tour last night at the Princess theater, Montreal. Sir Johnston and Lady Forbes-Robertson (Gertrude Elliott) will sail for London next Tuesday, returning to begin the last half of their farewell tour in September.

Rather extraordinary is the success of Ruther Chatterton who is appearing under the direction of Henry Miller and Klaw & Erlanger in "Daddy Long Legs" at Powers theater in Chicago. Naturally it had been expected that the play would succeed and that Miss Chatterton would please. Perhaps three weeks had been looked for in Chicago with some engagements in other cities to follow. What actually happened is that both Miss Chatterton and the play made an immediate and sensational success. There is every indication that "Daddy Long Legs" will run far into the summer possibly longer.

When William Faversham came to the United States 25 years ago and was seeking employment as an actor, after having had previous experience in England he discovered that jobs were hard to find. Not being able to obtain an engagement he managed to eke out an existence by shoveling snow following the great blizzard of 1888. His lodgings were in the Central park tunnel with his bulldog as his only companion. Now he gets $3,000 a week in vaudeville.

A statistician who has posted himself on the long experience on the American stage of William H. Crane, now appearing with Douglas Fairbanks in "The New Henrietta," figures that the comedian has played to more than 15,000,000 people and to receipts of probably more than $17,000,000. He has paid out approximately $4,000,000 in newspaper advertising and $1,000,000 to railroads.

Arrangements have been concluded by the Vitagraph Liebler company to make an elaborate photo drama of Hall Caine's "The Eternal City" in which Miss Viola Allen made a distinguished success. Miss Pauline Frederick, the beautiful Zuleika in "Joseph and His Brethren," will in all probability play the part Miss Viola Allen created.

ACTORS RISK LIVES TO MAKE 'MOVIE' THRILLS

The tremendous popularity of moving pictures all over the civilized world depends, in no small measure, upon the daring player-folk and camera men engaged in the business of making them. During the last year particularly, says a writer in the Theater magazine for April, the trend of the movie drama has been toward the sensational. Indeed so remarkable have been some of the releases that many are convinced that the illusions in them are faked. But such is not the case. In the early stages of motion photography the stuffed "dummy" and freak camera work accomplished most of the perilous situations depicted. But today the more sophisticated movie fan demands and is getting the genuine article.

There are many people in the moving picture world who scoff at the idea of actual risk entering into the taking of a film. These are the "interior" men—directors and players stationed in the east who do drawing room comedies and the like, requiring less exertion in their enactment than a legitimate play on Broadway's boards.

It is in the far west in the midst of the prairie studios that are taken most of the movie shockers. It is there that are taken the pictures that entail risk, and numerous are the stories told of dangers courted by venturesome film makers in quest of something new.

One of the largest of the western motion picture settlements is Universal City, founded and inhabited entirely by employes of the Universal Film company. It is almost big enough to be called a city, and it is a modern one in every respect save absence of political scandal and the fact that its sole business is that of "the movie"—virile movies there, movies of the plains and bad lands movies that run the gamut of red-blooded adventure. There's a big, white stucco hospital in Universal City not for the sick (motion picture people have little time for such a luxury as illness), but for employes wounded and maimed while taking moving pictures. And the wards are always well filled!

Here is an instance of the divers ways in which it recruits its patients. Recently in a war play there was a battle scene on the Texas border between a band of Mexican guerrillas and a troop of United States cavalry. The soldiers were, of course, supers, but real Mexicans were engaged to play the guerrillas. The battle had hardly started when it was found that the Mexicans had deliberately loaded their rifles with real slug-shot in lieu of the blank cartridges supplied to them. It was a miracle that no one was killed.

A similar spirit of animosity was exhibited some time ago in Palestine where a company of Kalem players were performing the Passion Play in front of the camera. The actors were followed from place to place by an angry, jeering mob, and finally, incensed at certain of the scenes which they regarded as sacrilegious, the Arabs began hurling large stones at the players, who barely escaped with their lives. There are also many instances where irate farmers have loosed dogs on itinerant players trespassing on farms and trampling down crops in their eagerness to secure good "sets."

But danger incurred from the enmity of others includes but a very small class of the movie risks. Far greater perils are encountered in the action of the plays themselves.

The English manufacturers have recently turned out startling "thrillers" by using balloons and aeroplanes. A recent English release, entitled "Through the Clouds," tells the story of a young girl whose father is carried off in a captive balloon that has been cut free by the villain. In her frantic efforts to save him she enlists the services of a young aviator. Together they speed in his aeroplane, toward the rapidly rising balloon and when they near it she leaps from the plane onto the dangling rope of the balloon and proceeds to climb thence into the basket. The actors engaged in making this film progressed successfully to that point, thanks to much rehearsing at lower altitudes. But at the crucial moment the young woman lost her grip on the rope and to the horror of the onlookers below began slowly to slide down it. A 2,000-foot fall to certain death was averted only by the agility of her "father," who, lying in the bottom of the balloon basket sprang to his feet and hauled the young actress to safety. The picture was taken from a second balloon lashed to the first, and although the story as originally planned was upset by the accident the scenario was rewritten to fit and the picture, one of the most daring of the day, is now being shown through Great Britain and will soon be seen in this country.

NEW YORK, May 2. Sam Bernard thinks the silk hat is the success of the slapstick. Nothing takes a modern audience, he tells me, like a shiny topper. And he modestly lays most of his success as a humorist of the stage to his lighthouse headgear. All a comedian needs nowadays to make an audience laugh is to appear in a smile and a Fifth avenue go-to-church lid. Sam is making them smile right now, so clad in "The Belle of Bond Street."

It may not be generally known that "Dutchy" Sam was born in England. He came over from Birmingham when he was four years old and at the age of 17 made his debut in the old Grand Duke theater on Baxter street. The auditorium was in a basement and the price was 10 cents. Sam received $15 every Saturday night for a knockout singing and dancing act. He already had with him his rich German dialect and his short jerky steps. How he started up the ladder of fame was thus, said Sam:

HE STARTS TO CLIMB.

I was passing a general merchandise store near Worth and Baxter streets one day with one of my first $15 rolls in my pocket when I spied a glorious silk stove pipe in a corner of the show window. I entered unhesitatingly. It was Old Man Opportunity speeding past and I grabbed him by the forelock.

"'Let me see your best silk hats,' I said airily.

"'Here's our stock,' said the clerk, pulling the lone shining mark out of the window. 'It's worth $10 but the gentleman who ordered it was caught in a squeeze in Wall street and lost his fortune just before he took it. It's just your size.'

"Luckily the last part of his statement was true, whatever were the facts about the financial man. Three dollars it cost me and it was the best money's worth I ever secured.

"When I strode on the boards that night there was a roar. I had found out something about the New York audience. And it's becoming truer every day.

HAT MAKES COMEDIAN.

"The sight of a stocky man in somewhat worn clothes of a loud check and a bright, new silk hat caused almost a convulsion of nature. The manager of the theater raised my salary and gave me a month's contract to keep me away from his nearby competitors."

Since then Sam has had an unwavering faith in the silk hat. In musical shows unnumbered he has appeared surrounded by pretty girls with his glossy helmet forming the nucleus of the cluster. Sam has collected some odd philosophy on the silk hat.

"If you wear one in Chicago," declared Sam "people think you are a millionaire. On Fifth avenue on a bright Sunday morning about 50 per cent of the men's hats are high toppers—and about 10 per cent can afford them. A Frenchman is always pictured in a high hat yet no Parisian boulevard can touch our avenue for the frequency of the species.

"If you wear a silk hat to church in Manhattan you are expected to put at least a 50-cent piece in the collection plate. Noblesse oblige. And if you wear one in the subway, the bystanders remark 'Why don't he take it in a taxi?'

"If I wore a slouch or a derby people wouldn't think I'm funny. I am so sure of it I don't dare try."

"THE TRAFFIC."

A new white slave drama has arrived in New York. Like its predecessors, "The Traffic," which opened at the Royal theater in the Bronx Monday night, sets forth the tortuous way of a young girl forced to lead a life of shame partly by her own poverty and partly by the machinations of a villain. The cast is excellent.

"The Traffic" was first produced in California, I understand. It was written by Rachael Marshall and Oliver Bailey.

A girl has a consumptive sister and is making small wages. To help the sister, the heroine, with the temptation at hand, goes the way of "Hagar Revelly," who had no ill sister and poverty as excuse. First the heroine is the passive victim, later the [illegible] of the man, who, having brought her into social slavery, also seeks to incriminate her sister, now restored to health. Finally the girl who falls is seen as the acquitted murderess who is presumably to die by her own hand.

The play sets forth in the simplest terms the phases of the social evil that have lately attracted the attention of playwrights who suddenly feel on their shoulders the added responsibility of acting as reformers as well.

"KOENIG OEDIPUS."

The Irving Place German company filled the Metropolitan Opera house when they gave there the "Oedipus" of Sophocles in the tongue of Berlin. It was a great triumph for Rudolph Christians in the double role of director and player.

This German presentation of the Greek tragedy had dignity and beauty while to the part of the suffering Theban king, Mr. Christians brought with full effect his fine presence, his superb voice, and his great ability.

He elected to break the course of the tragedy into two acts, the first one ending when the realization comes to Oedipus that it was he who years before had slain Laius as he rode along the sacred ways to Delphi. And in order that the performance of the play might fall more easily within the limits of a New York evening the chorus of the old tragedy was largely omitted. Where represented at all to mark the rhythm of the story, its part was played, as in the text of Adolf Wilbrandt, by three Elders of Thebes, who spoke the lines to the sighing accompaniment of the suppliants, caught up from time to time by strains from the orchestra.

METROPOLITAN PLANS

For the first time in many years the Metropolitan Opera house has been run without a deficit. Giulio Gatti-Casazza, the general manager, made this gratifying report in announcing the plans for next season.

Among the new singers for next season will be Mme. Melanie Kurt, soprano of the Royal opera Berlin, Mme. Elizabeth Puritz-Schumann, soprano, of the Standt theater, Hamburg, Mabel Garrison, an American soprano, Alfred Piccaver, an American tenor, of the Imperial opera Vienna, and Arthur Middleton, an American bass-baritone who has been heard here in oratorio.

On the question of new works to be given next season, Mr. Gatti-Casazza said:

"It may be stated as certain that 'Madame Sans-Gene' will have its world premiere at the Metropolitan in the early part of the season. The libretto of this opera, based on Victorien Sardou's play, well known to American theatergoers, is by Renato Simoni. The music is by Umberto Giordano, composer of 'Andrea Chenier,' 'Fedora' and 'Siberia' who will be present at the rehearsals and premiere.

"Other novelties under consideration are 'Francesca da Rimini,' by Zandonai, recently produced in Turin. 'Notre Dame,' (based on Victor Hugo's novel) by Franz Schmitt, which was produced a few weeks ago with great success in Vienna, and Goetz's 'The Taming of the Shrew,' ('Der Widerspanstigen Zahmung.')"

[illegible]

"The Battle of the Sexes," is a strong title for the motion drama being enacted at Weber's theater, wrote Ada Patterson in one of the New York newspapers. The story it tells, mighty as truth itself, might have other titles: "When Men's Double Lives Meet" would fit the silent but moving drama.

The man who is beginning to cast his eyes upon a fascinating neighbor, or the man who is already sent his glances that way too long should see "The Battle of the Sexes." A bachelor gave as a reason for his [illegible]: "I haven't the courage to [illegible] any woman suffer by my unfaithfulness as I have seen friends of mine make their wives suffer."

It is upon that picture this play is [illegible]

husband-forsaken home is a picture that roots itself deep in your memory. There are little gray women in many homes.

But even more gripping is the picture of the daughter in her dawning comprehension of her father's weakness. The girl, seeing her father in a dance hall with the shallow enchantress who has made him forget his vows, tries to shield her mother from the sight. But the mother does see, and though she slips quietly away and bids her son and [illegible] neither say anything to their father of the adventure, she sinks into profound melancholy, such as [illegible] madness.

When the wife reproaches her husband he [illegible] his masculine independence. He moves to his club.

On the shoulders of the tender innocent daughter falls the task of righting the wrong that has thrown its shadow upon the home. Drama tense as ever Sardou wrote ensues. The child woman steals into the home of their evil genius, waits for her return and from behind a curtain we see a revolver leveled by the steady young hand at the Lorelei who has lured their home ship upon the rocks.

What happens next, by what means the [illegible] is made whole, and [illegible] happiness [illegible] added to a secret the picture must tell you. Therein is the [illegible] (the test of which is, "There is but one standard of morals, a single one for men and women.")

WHERE'S RITCHIE'S K. O. PUNCH? HASN'T LANDED ONE FOR MONTHS

However, Coast Battler Shows Sterling Speed and Technique and Clinches Title

By TOM THORP.

able showing made by Willie Ritchie his encounter with "Harlem Tommy" urphy does much to entrench him fely behind the fortifications that be rrounded himself with by his de- sive wins over "Mexican Joe" Rivers, each Cross, "Ad" Wolgast and a score other aspirants to the middleweight tle.

It was more or less of a foregone nclusion that Ritchie would win over urphy as the odds posted before the ght indicated. It was a battle of outh and strength arraigned against xperience and a stout heart. Ritchie eing in the prime of life and improv- ng with every fight while Murphy has ng since passed his youthful days.

The only disappointing feature of he bout was that Ritchie failed to emonstrate he is possessed of the itting qualities that have caused for- er title holders to stand out promi- ently over all adversaries. Lately, a unch with a "kick" in it. The number f times that the champion scored ith his right without inflicting any erceivable damage upon his opponent, hows that although he may be con- idered a clever hitting scrapper, he is y no means a "Joe" Gans.

No doubt Murphy's staying powers ad a great effect upon Ritchie but hen you consider that Willie waged he battle with the purpose in mind of utting his opponent away, via the leep route, and, that he failed most iserably in his efforts, his blaze of lory is not so triumphant as most peo- le would have you think. Especially ke a glance at the record books will isclose the facts that Terry McGovern nd K. O. Brown both have scored nockouts over Murphy.

Now that Willie has disposed of all contenders for the title, excepting Freddy Welsh, it is no more than right nd proper that he accede to the de- mands of the fight fans and give the English champion a chance to demon- strate whether the championship crown has been placed upon the proper head.

Ever since that eventful day in Can- da, when through some good business ense on the part of Ritchie the pro- posed engagement between these two ads was called off on time to put a top to some very nasty rumors of scandal that were running the rounds, Welsh has been touring the country proclaiming that the real cause for the canceling of the bout was that the champion refused to enter a prize ring with him as his opponent.

Welsh is no doubt an exceptional fighter and justly deserves a chance with the champions. His record, al- though not as brilliant as the title holder's is nevertheless one that re- flects much glory upon him. If a fight could be arranged between this pair, a struggle worthy of a cham- pionship would surely be staged, pro- vided, of course, that the engagement be made for an early date. Welsh is fast approaching the age of retire- ment for the championship class, while Ritchie is only really getting into his stride.

Willie Peeved at Welsh.

The only obstacle that apparently stands in the way of obtaining the signature of each fighter to a con- tract, is the great amount of resent- ment that Willie holds for both Welsh and his manager, because of the at- tacks that they have been making on his courage as a fighter.

The size of the purse that would be immediately forthcoming for an en- counter between Welsh and Ritchie would be such that even the short end would run up into thousands of dollars, but Ritchie will not allow Welsh the opportunity of accumulating this cash.

While we are on the subject it might be well to bring before the attention of the fight fans the variance in the interpretation of that section of the Marquis of Queensberry rules that re- fers to "hitting in breaks and using a free hand in the clinches.

In the East officials and experts alike are unanimous in the opinion that either the use of the free hand in the clinches or hitting in break- aways is contrary to the spirit of the rules and should therefore be consid- ered a foul.

On the coast where most of the real fighting of today is taking place the interpretation is made that a fighter may either hit in a break or use a free hand in clinches. This variance in ruling does much hurt to the sport.

Bell's Sporting Life of London, which was the pioneer publication in pro- mulgating the Queensberry rules, states that the rule is such that only one interpretation can possibly be placed upon this section and that is that hitting in breaks and use of a free hand in clinches are both a vio- lation of the rule and should be de- clared fouls.

FANS TAKE TO FEDS AND MAJOR TEAMS ARE FIGHTING WITH BACKS TO WALL THIS SEASON

American Association Clubs Hard Hit and in Big Cities Outlaws Outdraw O. B. Teams

By FRANK G. MENKE.

NEW YORK, May 2.—The prediction we made about two months ago that organized baseball would be forced to make peace overtures to the Federal league, now seems certain of becom- ing a reality. Strange as the state- ment may seem, it, nevertheless, is true that the upstart and youthful Federal organization has the old and well-established organized baseball fighting on the defensive with its back to the wall.

The fans, for the most part seem to be with the so-called outlaws"—with them to the extent that where there have been no clubs dates up to the present, the Feds have outdrawn the organized opposition. And, best of all, from Federal viewpoint, the fans who have so far patronized the Fed- eral parks have been perfectly satis- fied with the brand of baseball dished out by the "outlaws," and have open- ly declared that they'd come again.

In organized baseball circles there is the fear that the Federals will drive to the wall the none too financially successful class AA minor league teams with which the Feds compete. This is true in Baltimore and Buffalo, which have representation in the In- ternational league, and in Kansas City and Indianapolis, where the American Association has teams.

Fans Take to Feds.

In the two eastern cities the fans have gone wild over the Federals, and the early games put on display by the new league have been of such caliber as to convince fandom that it's a major league brand of baseball. Such being the case in Buffalo and Balti- more, as well as in Indianapolis and Kansas City, it readily can be seen that the baseball public at least a large portion of it—that patronized the International league games last year will shift to the Feds. This not only will cut into the receipts of the organized home clubs in those four cit- ies, but also will greatly reduce the divvy of the visiting clubs. In other words, it will mean something like a 50 per cent reduction in attendance re- ceipts for most of the clubs in the American Association and Internation- al league.

In the four cities where the Feds compete with the majors—Chicago, St. Louis, Pittsburg and Brooklyn—the fans have become enthused over the Feds to the point where it seems they will support the club in nice style. If the St. Louis Feds can furnish a win- ning article of ball, they will be sure to outdraw both the Cardinals and Browns—perhaps draw as many as both clubs together. It wouldn't be surprising if the Brooklyn Feds drew as many people during the 1914 sea- son as the established Brooklyn Dodgers, provided, of course, that the Feds make as good a showing in their league as the Dodgers do in the Na- tional.

In Pittsburg, as we understand it, Barney Dreyfuss, the Pirate owner, is none too popular, and it's only the per- sonal popularity of Wagner and Clarke and the fact that there was no real opposition in other years, that has made the Pirates a winning club, as far as gate receipts are concerned. Things are a bit different in the Smoky City this year; the fans like the Feds, and they are patronizing the park in a way that was beyond even the dreams of the backers.

Chicago thinks a lot of Joe Tinker's Feds and not very much of the wrecked Cubs. The result will be, as things are viewed now, that the Chi- cago Feds will outdraw the Cubs, if they can keep up in the race in their league.

Aside from these reasons, there are others that seem to forecast seeming certainty of peace overtures from or- ganized baseball to the Feds. The knocking out of the reserve clause has taken away the foundation of organ- ized baseball. It has given the Feds the legal right to step in and hire players whose contracts have expired. Further than that, the Feds have reached a point now where they are jumping in and signing up players whether those players are under con- tract or not. It may be busting the law, but the Feds are doing it merely in retaliation for what organized base- ball did. The Feds are willing that the matter go to court, if the organ- ized baseball people want to take it there.

Discipline Wrecked.

There's another reason which we al- ready have pointed out—the fact that the Feds are waiting to sign any or- ganized player who is not contented has sort of wrecked the discipline of organized baseball. Some of the play- ers in organized baseball already have assumed a defiant "go to blazes" at- titude toward orders from the club owners, league residents, and even the national commission.

"If you don't like the way we do things, say so and we'll go over to the Feds," is the challenge of these players. And, although these players need disciplining—and perhaps need it very much, their organized owners are afraid to impose penalties for fear the players will jump. As a result, the former wonderful discipline that prevailed within organized baseball has gone on the fritz.

All in all, it seems just now that about the only course left open for organized baseball is to make peace overtures and make 'em in a hurry.

BAN AND GARRY GREAT JOKESTERS BEGGING DESERTERS TO RETURN

NEW YORK, April 30.—Had Ban Johnson and Garry Herrman lived in the days when court jesters were in vogue, it's a certainty that a gang of kingly gentlemen would have battled for the services of this jocular pair. But as it is they live in an age when jesters have degenerated into clowns, and there's no other real place for this amusing pair to display their wares than on the tan bark of a circus arena.

This pair, it may be remembered, rose up in righteous wrath and with proper eclat and dignity some months ago, and after fixing the public with a ferocious glare, shouted this:

Let it be understood right here and now that any players now in organ- ized baseball who jump to the Federal league, never, never, never can come back within the organized fold. This applies not only to men who may in the future break their lawful contracts and jump to the Federals, but also to men who disregard the reserve clause and go over to the Federals. Of course, we cannot stop men from jumping, but we can stop them from ever coming back into our ranks. And we will do so."

And right now this pair of jokers are the ones who are in the thickest of the fight to get back into the or- ganized fold the players who jumped to the Feds. This pair has given its full sanction to the use of any neces- sary means to get back the faithless players. This brace of jesters who so loudly shrieked that all players who entered the Federal league should forthwith abandon hope are now shrieking just as loudly to the players to "please come back and don't mind what we said last winter."

Johnson Great Bluffer.

As previously stated, Ban Johnson is considerable of a bluffer—perhaps one of the very best that ever horned his way into baseball. He's tried bluff and bluster ever since the Feds got under way in an effort to scare them out. And when he and Garry mur- mured that "no player can come back," it was just another bluff. The players called it and now Ban, and his jesting colleague, in the eyes of the baseball world, look even more foolish than does the man with a four flush who tried to scare out a gentleman who was in possession of four kings and one ace.

Clark Griffith, boss of the Senators, is so sure that his team will beat out the Athletics in the 1914 race that he seems quite willing to accept all wagers that are made against his team's chances.

"Barring accidents, we will beat out the Athletics," said Clark. "They seem to be a bit overrated in some quar- ters. They do not tower so far above the rest of the teams in the league, and I don't concede them any edge on my team, with it's intact.

Senators Hurt Often.

My boys shoved the Athletics into third place in 1912, although the dope- sters in the early part of the year were certain that the champions would repeat their 1911 performance. We finished behind the Athletics last year, but if we hadn't had a bad break in the way of injuries I feel that we would have overhauled the Philadelphia boys. The Athletics went through the 1913 season almost free of injuries, that is, of the kind that would lay their best men on the shelf for any con- siderable time. But with us it was different.

"We went through almost the entire season with one or another of our men sick or injured. In only a few games was I able to send my team into action intact.

"But it's different this year. The team has started off at a nice, fast gait, and I guess we can keep it up throughout the season. All the boys who were sick and injured last year are back. Walter Johnson is in the best condition of his entire career, my young pitchers are showing some great work, an everything looks lovely for us.

"If we don't beat out the Athletics this year it'll be because injuries beat us."

Des Jardien of Chicago University Pitches No-Hit, No-Run, No-Walk Game

IOWA CITY, Ia., May 2.—The no- hit, no-run, no-base-on-balls exhibition pitched by Des Jardien of the Chicago university nine, which defeated Iowa state here yesterday, 8 to 0, was still being discussed with much animation today. The first nine men to face Des Jardien whiffed out, and during the game five more failed to touch the ball.

This is the fourth no-run, no-hit game recorded this week in high school and college circles. Yester- day's is the first of the group, however, in which no runner reached first. These exhibitions are extremely rare.

QUIMET IS STILL A FAVORITE IN BETTING DESPITE HIS FORM

Wagers Open Early in London and American Money Is Finding Takers

American Youth Popular With British Because He's Good Loser

LONDON, May 2.—Although the en- tries for the amateur golf champion- ship will not close until Tuesday, May 12, quite a lot of betting has taken place among members of the stock ex- change on it, as well as on the open championship.

American money has been freely bet on the chances of Quimet and Travers, and, although the betting opened a fortnight or more ago, at 16 to 1, it is now impossible to obtain more than 7 to 1 against either.

Many good judges on this side also are for Mr. Quimet, who continues in favor in spite of his misplay for the gold vase at Sunningdale on Thursday. Those who have any real insight would readily observe that he never felt that day like holing the ball on the greens, and the pluck with which he stuck to Hilton, for whom everything came off, made a good impression on British sportsmen.

This seems quixotic, but the grace- ful way in which the young Boston player lost brought to him more friends than many a man can make by a prize-winning performance. His per- sonal popularity wherever he goes will retain for him a strong position in the quotations, even though Hilton may become a warm favorite and Gillies press him close.

The latest prices are: Amateur golf championship—7 to 1, Quimet and Travers, 28 to 1, Hilton T. Ball and Harris, 10 to 1 Gillies, 12 to 1, E. W. Blackwell, Lord Charles Hope and L. O. Munn, 16 to 1, M. Scott and F. Castle, 20 to 1, E. A. Lassen, J. Gra- ham, Jr., and A. Hambro.

For the open golf championship Vardon, Braid and Taylor are in equal demand at 5 to 1, while Quimet is quoted at 100 to 6 and Travers at 20 to 1.

WOLGAST HURTS HAND AND CALLS OFF BOUT

LOS ANGELES, May 2.—The pro- posed 20-round Vernon battle between Ad Wolgast former lightweight cham- pion of the world, and Joe Rivers, the Californian, scheduled for May 19, has been indefinitely postponed.

Tom McCarey of the Pacific Athletic club received the following today:

"Injured my bad hand in fight with Tillman the other night. Cannot box in May. Be glad to get a later date. Rivers is too good a man to meet with a bad hand. I want to give my backers an honest run for their money, and I will show that I am still in the cham- pionship running. AD WOLGAST."

Rivers expressed his disappointment at Wolgast's accident, but added that he would rather have had the bout postponed than to box Ad when the latter was not at his best. He also stated that he had a high-class oppo- nent for a May date. Both Jimmy Duffy and Jack Britton are being con- sidered for this match.

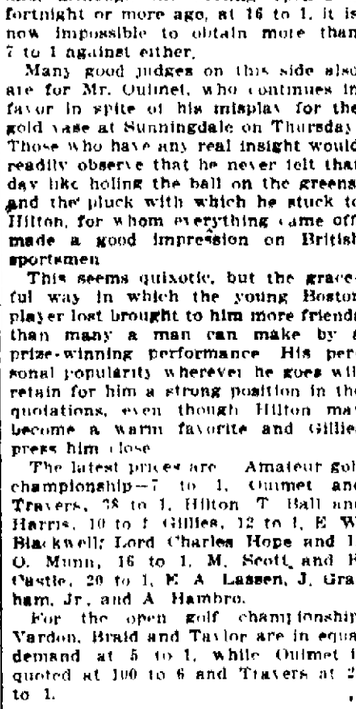

From the National Monthly.

"What's your hurry, Mr. Ruralite? Your turn is next."

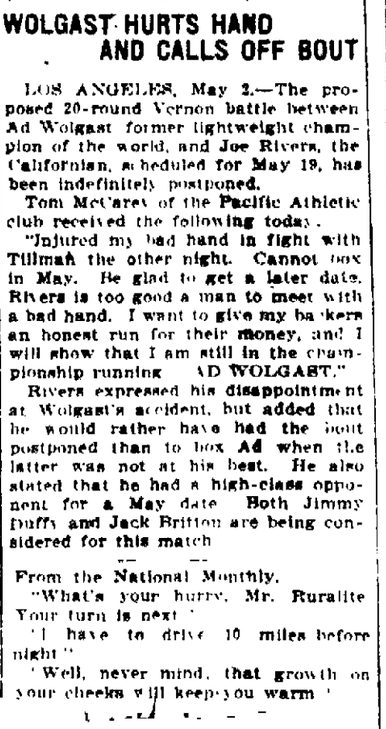

"I have to drive 10 miles before night."

"Well, never mind, that growth on your cheeks will keep you warm."

FIRST SAIL OF 'RESOLUTE,' CUP YACHT, FAILURE

BUILDERS LEARN LESSON FROM ACCIDENTS ON TRIAL TRIP

Lower Centerboard and Limps Back Into Port; Will Be Remodeled

BRISTOL, R. I., May 2.—Two slight accidents delayed for a few hours and somewhat marred the first sail trial of the cup defender yacht Resolute in Narragansett bay today.

The temporary lower of her centerboard kept the yacht in the harbor until late in the afternoon. She finally went out under three lower sails and after an hour's ride under all sorts of sail one of the port halyards gave way under the strain. The Resolute limped back into port with her wooden buttons flying out of the pockets in the leech of the mainsail.

Both accidents are regarded as affording valuable lessons. The centerboard dropped out because of the weakness of the chain, while an inspection of the damaged block indicated, according to experts, a weakness in the combination of aluminum shell and steel sheaves.

The yacht was under sail practically an hour, going out with her designer, Nat G. Herreshoff at the wheel, but doing most of her sailing under her regular helmsman, C. F. Adams.

There was a 12-knot northerly breeze blowing out of Bristol harbor when the Resolute slipped her moorings and started off on the starboard tack.

Sails Need Alterations.

On the wind the yacht showed only a little weather helm, and but a slight smother under her lee bow. She carried her three lower headsails well with a comparatively slight angle, although some of the puffs ran up to 15 or 18 knots. She tacked very quickly. She seemed to sail through the water very fast, but her trial showed a need of slight alterations.

Off a mile from shore, on the Portsmouth side of the bay, the skipper headed on his wind and the Resolute stood up toward Mount Hope bay. Then it was that one of the three-fold halyard aluminum blocks pulled out and the port halyard slackened up several feet. The other blocks held, but the leech of the sail flapped in the breeze and soon one of the battens was torn out of its pocket. A few minutes later another was snapped out and the boat was guided gently back to her moorings.

Aboard the yacht today besides C. F. Herreshoff and Mr. Adams were J. W. Emmons, second, the manager; John Parkinson, Jr., George Nichols, Sidney Herreshoff, J. B. L. Herreshoff, Frank Chase, the rigger, and A. C. W. Hathaway, the sailmaker.

HOW GOODWIN STOLE THIRD WHEN BASES WERE FULL

KANSAS CITY, May 2.—The name of a new hero has been emblazoned upon the pages of baseball history in letters that will never fade. A base runner whose deeds of daring in times of danger have won for him a niche in the hall of fame beside that of the intrepid John Anderson has been discovered. "Bud" Goodwin, shortstop extraordinary of the Kansas City Federal league team, is the man to supplant the hitherto invincible Anderson in the hearts of the fans. The king is dead! Long live the king!

In the second inning with the bases filled and two out, Goodwin let out a terrible yell from his coign of vantage on second and stole third. Perring, who already occupied the plate, was forced off by his deep thinking teammate and was run down in the stretch.

Before going further it might be well to relate that Brooklyn, making the most of opportunities in the third inning, won the game by a score of 3 to 0.

Deeds there may have been which equalled that of Goodwin, but nothing ever surpassed it. He performed his task in the thorough and painstaking manner of a master and won the instant recognition of the crowd, his manager and the entire team. Likewise the Brooklyn team. When he finally slunk to his place on the bench next inning the members of the team vied with one another for prominent places on the reception committee. It was, in fact, the first time that Goodwin was recognized by everybody on the team, and that helped. The means justified the end.

It all came about to this manner. With one out Perring got two bases on an error by Meyers, and after Krueger fouled out Goodwin singled. He was proud then, but later regretted that little hit. Perring rounded third and Goodwin took second on the throw to the plate. "Ted" Easterly walked, filling the bases. Goodwin paced up and down around second nervously.

"Did you ever steal a base in your life?" asked Jim Delehanty, innocently.

"Huh," grunted Delehanty; "bet you can't steal one now."

"I can't, eh?" fairly shouted Goodwin, "well get me now." And he lit out for third.

"I've got you, Bud!" yelled Owens, as he shot the ball to Westerzil.

"I've got you, you bonehead," cooed gentle George Stovall, tearing his hair.

Goodwin got off to a flying start. He ran in perfect form and made a perfect slide. What a pity that such a masterly effort should be doomed to disaster! Perring was forced off third and run down by Owens, Westerzil and Cagnier.

"We got him, Goodwin," said Owens, with a peculiar note in his voice.

"What are you going to do with him?" inquired Goodwin.

"What is Stovall going to do with you?" came the rejoinder, and Goodwin answered, "Search me."

State Athletes at Chicago Will Make Star Team

According to present indications Colorado's team at the western intercollegiate track meet in Chicago, June 6, will be the best that has ever represented the state. The Colorado delegation will consist of Bingham, star weight man of Denver university, holder of conference records in discus and hammer throws. Davis of Colorado college, holder of shot put and pole vault records; Cline of the state university, holder of the 440 and 100-yard dash records, Ireland of the state, holder of the 220-yard dash record, and Vincent, holder of the high and low hurdle records.

These men make up the cream of track and field material in the Rocky mountain states. While eastern records have been pared down every year and exceptional men are entered from every school it is believed that the Coloradoans will have a chance.

Federal Leaguers Who Are Climbing Into Fame

The history of the new league in the last three weeks shows that their inroads on the ranks of the American and National pitching staffs were successful and that the Federals also succeeded in bringing back some good material in their foraging parties into the minors.

In the center is "Chief" (George) Johnson, the big Winnebago Indian, who signed with Kansas City after Herzog of Cincinnati had seen fit to fine him $100 for not reporting in condition. The redman considered this a prime insult, and the basis for measures short of war. The crisis developed until Johnson declared war and jumped.

Johnson had signed with Cincinnati under the revised 1914 contract, so a merry little lawyers' battle may be the sequel. But no matter how the big wigs decide, Garry Herrmann says the chief can never throw a ball for Cincinnati again. Kansas City fans expect the big Indian to do great things.

On the left is Claude Hendrix of Chicago, who won fame as a member of the Pittsburg Pirates and later with the Phillies. Hendrix has been coming up steadily. The man in the sweater on the right is Bobby Green of St. Louis. Bobby was once a Washington Senator before he was converted and baptised into the Federal faith. Bobby showed phenomenal speed and headwork in a recent game where he faced Sir Claude.

The sharpshooter with his hands over his head is Tom Seaton of the Tipsies, whose bright life is shadowed just now by William F. Baker's fight to have the courts order him back to the Quaker city. Mr. Baker contends he has damaged 25,000 iron men by Tom's desertion.

Just Among Friends--a P. G. Drama

By DAMON RUNYON

Scene: Interior of a Pullman smoker. A poker game is in progress. The players are four ball players, and two newspaper correspondents.

First Correspondent (who has just lost a good pot, savagely)—There's too much conversation in this game to suit me. Less play some poker.

Second Baseman (who won the pot)—Thass what I say, too. Everybody's talkin', and nobody's payin' any attention to the game. Whatja have that time, Bert? Where's the deal?

Right Fielder—I just dealt.

Second Correspondent (cheerfully) Its over there, somewhere. I've got to go write a story pretty soon, so's I can file at Indianapolis. How you going to file this time, Bert? Postal'r Western Union?

Second Baseman—I've got to quit myself pretty soon. I've got a kind of headache. Where's the deal?

Right Fielder—I just dealt.

First Correspondent (sneeringly)—Sure! Going to run out when you're a little winner! I've got a fat chance to catch even in this game. That's the trouble with a limit. You can't protect your hands.

Catcher (gloomily)—This is the tenth time I've caught that four spot. It's been pursuin' me all night. You can't win with those kind of hands. I wouldn't mind if I could get stayers, but I hate to set here and ante my life away.

First Correspondent (peevishly)—This stock stands me just 16 bucks. I've got a fat chance to catch even now. There's some people around here playing 'em pretty close to their bodies. (Glares darkly at second correspondent.)

Shortstop—How come you to call me just then, Tom? If youda come back I'd a give you one more boost, at that. I thought you was out on a limb. Where the deal's now?

Second Baseman—I forgot how many cards you drew. Anyway, I wasn't very proud of that mitt.

Right Fielder—I just dealt.

Shortstop—I'm good loser in this poker game myself, now.

Second Correspondent—I don't see where all the dough I'm looking along just about even.

First Correspondent (truculently)—You keep going south all night.

Catcher (gloomily)—There's that four again. I wouldn't mind if I could only ketch stayers. I never did see cards run this. Whose deal?

Right Fielder—I just dealt.

First Correspondent (throwing cards down on table)—Three sixes, and everybody looking out the window! Why didn't some of you short-card guys come in then? (Glares at second correspondent.)

Second Correspondent—I couldn't stay that high, could I? I give you a liberal play any time I got anything.

First Correspondent—Let's play some cards now. I've got a fat chance to catch even. Sixteen bucks! Well it serves me right for getting into a limit game. Can't protect your hand that's all.

Catcher—I ain't seen you have much to protect. Lookit me settin' here all night this way. I ain't kickin'. There's that dam four spot again.

Shortstop—I'm good loser, but nobody likes me crabbin', do they? Where's it stuck now? Whose deal? Pay attention somebody.

Right Fielder—I just dealt.

Second Correspondent—Yes, I've heard you crabbing as much as anybody. I've seen you tearing up the cards, too. Everybody crabs when they lose. I ain't so much winner as you think. Somebody else must have some.

Catcher (gloomily)—If I could only get a chanst to play, that's all—just to play. There's that four. Ain't it simply wonderful the way them cards it act.

First Correspondent—(As second correspondent stays in pot)—Here he comes again. We ain't got a show. Take the chips now, Beany, you'll win anyway. How many—one card, I suppose. I don't see how you make 'em.

Catcher (gloomily)—Lookit that pot, will you? And me not even able to stay. That'd get me even on the night.

Shortstop (fridiously)—How do you stand on your whole life, Frank? I'll buy one offa the top. They say there's always a spade on top.

Second Baseman—I got no license in this pot, but I got to quit pretty soon anyway. I got a kind of headache.

Second Correspondent—I'm just staying for the percentage myself. One card.

First Correspondent (bitterly)—Always in there with that one-card draw. I never saw anything like it in my whole life. Never! Well I've got to call you. I've just got to call you. I don't believe you can always make 'em. Three eights.

Second Correspondent—All pink, Bert, all pink. You know, I had a pair of tens in my hand, and I had a notion to draw to them, but I thought—

First Correspondent—You make me sick! Someone deal!

Right Fielder—I just dealt.

Catcher (less gloomily)—Stop the game. I got openers. I got openers. What nobody in? Well can you beat that? And me settin' here behind four fours, all in a row. Well, I'll be—

Iowa Miners Ask Government to Take Over Coal Mines in Colorado

DENVER, May 3—Party leaders tonight were beginning to lay plans for the conduct of the special session of the state legislature, which has been called for tomorrow by Governor Ammons to enact laws relative to the industrial warfare which has raged in Colorado for the last seven months. None of the plans had crystallised tonight, but there was much talk of things the legislature possibly would do. Rumors of drastic action against certain state officials were rife, but none could be pinned down to a statement of what actually would be attempted

The first thing on the legislative program will be the selection of a speaker of the house, and then it is probable that a concurrent resolution will be introduced calling for adjournment sine die at the end of two [illegible] Upon this there is promised a spirited fight, and the general opinion among the legislators now in Denver [illegible] it will not carry.

It was expected that about 500 American refugees would leave the capital today or tomorrow Application for berths on board the train had been made by 315 Americans

After carefully considering the problem of the Yucatan refugees, he added, he had decided the best solution is for them to wait for this steamer.

Word has been received that 16 American refugees have arrived at Puerto Mexico for Frontera on a tug in charge of a British lieutenant The other Americans there refused to leave Admiral Badger thinks that in 10 days all of central and southern Mexico will be cleared of refugees and that those remaining in that territory after that time will be only such as have decided to stay at their own risk

[illegible] reported that the American outposts at Vera Cruz were being watched by Mexicans and there were over 10,000 Mexican troops encamped in the vicinity. Those dispatches were summed up by Secretary Garrison in the following statement

Federals Have Big Force

"I am in receipt of a dispatch from General Funston regarding the incident at the pumping plant He says that the officer in command of the Mexican troops was Major Zapota, one of the engineers corps of the Mexican army He refers to the fact that very little dependable news about the conditions in the interior is coming in because no more refugees are now coming into Vera Cruz

"It is reported to him that General Maas has about 4,000 men at Soledad and there are an unknown number not large, watching our lines He understands that the Mexicans have 5,000 troops at Jalapa and about 1,500 at Palma, where they are throwing up defenses. He says there are many wild rumors afloat which are not worthy of credence.

City Still Quiet.

"The city is quiet A Mexican officer who was in Vera Cruz in civilian clothes was directed to leave."

After tonight's conference Secretary Garrison said no new orders had been issued and that he had been discussing with General Wotherspoon Assistant Secretary Breckenridge and other department officials certain rumors that had reached General Funston It was reported that General Funston had heard that the Mexican forces around Vera Cruz were about to be reinforced

Many of the American soldiers attended mass in the old cathedral while

Commerce Will Pass Through the Canal for First Time About May 10

WASHINGTON May 3—Commerce will move through the Panama canal for the first time about May 10 when a string of canal barges will be towed through the waterway carrying the sugar cargo of the steamer Columbian of the Hawaiian-American line now at Balboa

Secretary Garrison announced tonight that he had approved Colonel Goethal's plan to permit the transfer of the cargo and perhaps also send through the merchandise cargo of a ship on the Atlantic side for which the Columbian will wait

The closing by the Mexico trouble of the Tehuantepec railroad over which the Hawaiian-American line has been transferring its cargoes from ocean to ocean caused the company to appeal to the government for relief

GEN. SICKLES DIES IN NEW YORK HOME; WIFE AT BEDSIDE

Death Ends Career of Noted Civil War Veteran; Ill for Long Time

NEW YORK May 3. General Daniel Sickles died at his home shortly after 9 o'clock tonight. His wife was at his bedside at the end.

Mrs Sickles who had been estranged from her husband for more than a quarter of a century, went to the general's house yesterday when she was informed he was dying and took charge of the arrangements for his care She remained at his side through the night and watched by him until his death

The final reconciliation was brought about largely through the efforts of their son, Stanton it is understood

General Sickles death was due to cerebral hemorrhages and paralysis He had been in a comatose condition since yesterday Beside Mrs. Sickles their son Stanton and the general's negro servant, who had attended him for years were at the bedside.

It developed tonight that the reconciliation between General Sickles and his wife was effected more than a week ago and that last Sunday night the general and Mrs Sickles and Mrs Derman his half sister had dinner together On Thursday when the aged veteran was stricken Mrs Sickles and her son Stanton were notified has tened to his home and remained there throughout his last illness

Fighter by Profession.

Gen Daniel Edgar Sickles was the last of the great commanders who fought the battle of Gettysburg For a decade he was a fighter by profession—all his life has was a fighter by nature

The gruff old warrior with one leg shot away in battle his massive head resembling Bismarck's was a picturesque figure as he hobbled along on crutches during the last half century of his turbulent life

His indomitable fighting spirit remained to the last. Born in New York city in 1825 Sickles at the age of 22 fought the Whigs as a Democrat in the New York legislature At 28 he displayed his fighting spirit as corporation attorney of New York It was he who secured for his city its great Central park At this time his military career began as major of the Twelfth regiment National guard, New York

Won Early Distinction

Before he was 3? years old Major Sickles had served as secretary of legation at London under Minister James Buchanan he had won a state senatorship through a bitter campaign and he was seated in the Thirty fifth congress at Washington

It was at this time that an event occurred which became the sensation

NEW YORK ELECTION OFFICIALS INDICTED

Allege Frauds in Murphy's Precinct; Stuffed the Ballots, Charge

NEW YORK, May 3—Four election officials were arrested today on indictments for alleged frauds in connection with the special election of April 7 at which the voters of the state, according to the official canvass, decided to hold next year a constitutional convention.

District Attorney Whitman announced he would carry his investigation of alleged frauds into every district within his jurisdiction Evidence, he said, pointed to a conspiracy to stuff [illegible] of the constitutional convention proposition.

All the men arrested served in the sixth election district of the Twelfth assembly district which contains the residence of Charles F Murphy, leader of Tammany hall The statement given out at the district attorney's office called attention to this fact, but made no accusation against any party organization In Republican political circles, it was said however, that the Democrats favored holding the convention next year because they hoped that a division of Republicans and Progressives would enable them to control it. If the proposition had failed, the convention would not have been held until 1917

The evidence upon which the officials were indicted indicated that of the 300 votes cast in the Sixth election district 270 were fraudulent There was not a vote against the proposition.

Three of the men under arrest are Republicans and one a Democrat

They are indicted for a felony, punishable by three years in prison, or a fine of $3,000 or both

MEDIATION PLANS PROCEED SLOWLY

ENVOYS MAY "TAKE A CHANGE OF VENUE"

Three Parties Now Expected to Name Delegates to Attend Hearings

WASHINGTON May 3—The mediation plans of the South American envoys who are trying to straighten out the troubled affairs of Mexico, went steadily forward today, and while there were no formal sessions, the mediators conferred on the next step in their procedure

The United States, the Huerta government and General Carranza are expected to name their delegates, as requested by the mediators last night, within the next day or two The delegates for the United States, it became known today, would not be any of the officials closely identified with the government. This has eliminated Robert L. Lansing, counselor of the state department, and in general all other government officials To the names of John Bassett Moore, John Lind and Henry White, already mentioned, are now added those of Richard Olney, former secretary of state; Dr. David Jayne Hill, former ambassador to Germany, and Hannis Taylor, former minister to Spain

De La Barra to Represent Huerta.

The Huerta delegate is expected to be Francisco de la Barra, now Mexican minister at Paris. Rafael Zubaran, personal representative of General Carranza, arrived here yesterday, and is available as the Carranza delegate, although his mission is still to be announced, and it is not yet definite that Carranza will go to the extent of naming a delegate to deal with the mediators.

When the delegates of the three parties arrive it is expected the mediators would be ready to take up the crucial issue between the United States and Huerta, at first, and, if possible, between Huerta and Carranza

It became definitely [illegible] that General Carranza would not agree to the request of the mediators that he suspend military operations [illegible] Huerta pending the mediation proceedings

It is said [illegible] [illegible] tion. Close [illegible] of Carranza who have now arrived here say that no mediation between them and Huerta is possible, and that any move on the part of the three mediators to include in their program a scheme for the general adjustment of Mexican affairs will be regarded as being outside the scope of their labors.

Rebels to March on Capital.

Meanwhile the campaign against the Huerta forces in the north is proceeding in full force the mediation work not being considered by the Constitutionalists as having any bearing on the relations between Huerta and themselves The march on Mexico City according to those near Carranza, is to be undertaken as soon as military operations will permit

Carranza's refusal of an armistice between himself and Huerta is the first adverse reply the mediators have received On the other hand, favorable comment is made in circles close to the envoys upon the amenability Huerta has shown

ARMS BARRED FROM STATE BY HOLBROOK

Embargo Is Clamped on to Prevent Importation of Munitions of War

SALOONS TO STAY CLOSED

Soldiers Will Be Used as Guards in the Southern Fields Today

TRINIDAD May 3—Major W A. Holbrook, in command of the federal troops in Colorado, today placed an embargo upon the importation of arms or ammunition into the state He announced that any arms shipped in violation of the order would be confiscated.

The proclamation follows:

"Headquarters Federal Troops, Trinidad, Colo., May 3, 1914

"To All Railroad and Express Companies, State of Colorado:

"By authority of the secretary of war, the embargo established by the state authorities on the receiving, shipping or delivering of arms and ammunition in this state will be continued.

"You are, therefore, to refrain from any of the acts above specified

"By order of Major Holbrook, commanding federal troops."

Saloons to Remain Closed.

The order applies to any arms or ammunition for delivery of any person for any purpose whatever, except for the use of the federal troops Major Holbrook sent a letter to Mayor W. F. Dunlavy, directing him to keep the saloons of Trinidad closed until further orders.

The order prohibiting [illegible] of the [illegible] is contained in a paragraph [illegible] the mayor, in which Major Holbrook [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] city, as well as of expediency, [illegible] the saloons to remain closed, I, as commander of the federal force in this district, hereby direct that all saloons remain closed until further orders."

Soldiers as Guards.

Major Holbrook announced that tomorrow, which is payday for the mining companies and the strikers, he would provide troops as guards, and would not permit either the operators or the union to have armed men on duty when the men are paid off. The soldiers will accompany the paying officers to the different camps

It was expected that about 230 horses for the use of the troops in this district would reach Trinidad tonight.

Coroner B B. Sipe today received a telegram from John Schlesinger, Austro-Hungarian consul in Denver, asking him for a list of all subjects of Austria-Hungary who have been killed in strike [illegible] The coroner announced that

ROCKEFELLER FAILS TO ATTEND CHURCH ON ACCOUNT OF THE PRESENCE OF "FREE SILENCERS"

NEW YORK May 3—Despite the absence of John D Rockefeller, Jr, at his country home in Pocantico Hills picketing by the so-called Free Silence league, in protest against what it terms his policy in the Colorado mine strike situation was continued today in front of his downtown office and the Calvary Baptist church which he attends

Red crosses enclosed in red and black circles were chalked in front of his home On the walk in front of the church a Roman cross in red and a St Andrew's cross in yellow within black circles were chalked Detectives surmised that these were signs for the league's mourners to distinguish the buildings

Miss Ganz Released on Bail.

While the picketing was going on Marie Ganz the I W W orator who was arrested yesterday after threats she had made in public against Mr Rockefeller had been called to police attention was arraigned in magistrate's court on a charge of disorderly conduct She was released for examination tomorrow after furnishing $500 cash bail

Her attorney declared his intention of insisting that Mr Rockefeller should appear in court as the actual complainant against Miss Ganz

Mr Rockefeller ill at Pocantico Hills had requested the pastor Dr Cornelius Woelfkin at the Calvary Baptist church to take charge of his Sunday school class Half a dozen of the mourners sat in the back of the auditorium and as many detectives sat near them Twenty-five uniformed policemen were held in readiness in the pastor's study Demonstrationists remained in the church throughout the morning and communion service, but order was not disturbed

In the deserted downtown district picketing continued all day Armed with a permit from the police commissioner, the Rev W L Miller Gamble of St Stephens Episcopal church of Coytesville, N J, held in the afternoon on the sidewalk across the street from the Standard Oil building the memorial service he had announced would take place there for the miners, their wives and children killed in Colorado

Wearing vestments the clergyman conducted prayer and reading of scripture in the presence of a fair-sized assemblage. Despite his permit he was stopped by the police and was obliged to hold the remainder of his service on Bowling Green near by His text was It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven

Picket Country Home

The picketing operations by Colorado mine strike sympathizers were extended to the Rockefeller country home today A band of seven mourners five men and two women each with a band of crepe about the arm appeared in front of the gate of the Pocantico Hills estate and marched up and down for several hours Neither John D Rockefeller nor his son appeared and failing to get a glimpse of either the demonstrators returned to this city

Arthur Carson leader of the band said the mourners intended to go up every day to worry Rockefeller and his son and next Sunday they would hold a demonstration before the Rockefeller gates if the Colorado strike is not settled A considerable body would make the trip he declared all wearing black clothes and black gloves If possible we will get a coffin and carry it with us," he added

Neither of the Rockefellers attended church services today and neither left the grounds of the estate John D Rockefeller Jr remained indoors nearly all day, but his father took a turn over the golf course with two or three guards not far away in the afternoon great crowds attended the bull fight.

Strict orders were issued from headquarters today for the American soldiers and marines in Vera Cruz and vicinity to remain in the same positions and not to advance and not bring on an encounter with the Mexican troops.

During the alarm over the flurry at the water works at El Tejar yesterday detachments of marines and bluejackets were prepared for an immediate landing but at the last moment, when headquarters had established the fact that there was no need for assistance from the fleet, all orders were canceled.

Official reports declare not a shot was fired, but other sources are persistent in their opinion that shots were exchanged by the outposts.

The threat to take El Tejar is regarded here as having been made by one of the junior Mexican officers and not by General Maas himself.

Outpost in Strong Position.

The outpost under Major Butler at El Tejar, which has been increased to 600 men with field pieces and machine guns, is in a naturally strong position, easy to defend, but is isolated from the city.

Lieut. William E. Selbie of the Fourth infantry, with a corporal and some of his men, proceeded to the break in the railroad where it was torn up by the Mexican troops and found a squad of the Eighteenth Mexican infantry regiment on duty.

The Mexicans were carrying hundreds of rounds of ammunition. They were very friendly and informed the Americans that a troop train had gone out along the other line and it was in that direction that the battle, if any, must be in progress. The Americans thanked them and retraced their steps to El Tejar.

A Mexican corporal during the meeting declared he did not know how far back General Maas was nor how strong his forces were, except that there was a party of 40 men a few miles beyond the break in the line.

Much smoke was seen along the railroad and it was deduced that the Mexicans were burning the ties and destroying the line.

Some vessels of the torpedo boat flotilla are leaving for the north and others are expected to follow shortly.

The only communication between Vera Cruz and Tampico is by means of the naval wireless instruments and through these Admiral Badger is keeping in touch with the situation there. All was reported quiet in that port today.

The German liner Ypiranga is preparing to sail for New Orleans, but intends to stop at intermediate points along the coast to pick up German refugees. Officials of the line disclaim any intention of an attempt to be made to land at Tampico the war munitions whose arrival here brought about the seizure of the Vera Cruz customs house.

Officials in Vera Cruz look forward to a lengthy period of inactivity while awaiting the result of the pending mediation.

The question of the food supply still occupied general attention but it has not reached a stage which may be regarded as critical, although many products have run short.

of the day. Sickles had begun his second term as congressman in 1859, when the national capital was stirred by the news that the young representative from New York had shot and killed Philip Barton Key, the United States district attorney for the District of Columbia. Sickles declared that Key had misled Mrs. Sickles, who was Therese Bagioli, daughter of an Italian music teacher. The trial lasted 20 days, ending in the acquittal of Sickles on the ground of "unwritten law." He then took his erring wife back.

Took Erring Wife Back.

"I am not aware of any statute or code of morals," said Sickles to his critics, "which makes it infamous to forgive a woman. I can now see in the almost universal denunciation with which she is followed to my threshold the misery and peril from which I have rescued the mother of my daughter. I shall strive to prove to all that an erring wife and mother may be forgiven and redeemed."

Mrs. Sickles died of a broken heart a few years later.

At the outbreak of the Civil war the young fighting politician, then 36 years old, went to Lincoln to offer his services.

"You have been a leader in New York Democratic politics," said the president. "If you kept your end up at that game surely you'll do to take command of men in the field. Raise your regiments and you shall be brigadier general in command."

Raised Excelsior Brigade.

Sickles raised the famous Excelsior brigade in New York, taking command of one of its regiments as colonel. Lincoln kept his word and in 1861 raised him to brigadier general. His fighting spirit early won him his spurs. On the Peninsula and at Antietam he distinguished himself as a soldier and leader. At Chancellorsville he led a division. At Gettysburg he led the Third corps, lost a leg and became a national hero. At 37 years of age he had risen from a colonel to major general of volunteers.

After the war his fighting spirit led him into the regular army and he became first brigadier and then major general. He continued active service until 1869, when he was appointed minister to Spain by President Grant.

"Yankee King of Spain."

At the court of Spain, Sickles' vigorous personality made him a dominating figure. Four years of brilliant diplomacy brought him the epithet of "The Yankee King of Spain." Here he contracted his second marriage, with the beautiful and distinguished Senorita Creagh. This romance was followed by estrangement which was to last more than a quarter of a century. In addition to this domestic trouble came his interference in the marriage plans of his daughter to a penniless Spanish nobleman. Father and daughter separated in bitterness, the latter to return to the United States to die without reconciliation.

Returning alone to New York General Sickles again entered politics. He served as sheriff of New York and at 67 he was re-elected to congress.

General Sickles' life drew to a close with frequent romantic situations. He faced bankruptcy proceedings in his last year though he had early in life received a large share of his father's $5,000,000 estate, but his estranged wife and son came to his aid on several occasions.

His last days were spent at 23 Fifth avenue, New York, surrounded by war relics and attended by his faithful negro servant.

CROWDS THROW STONES AT NONUNION LONGSHOREMEN

PORTLAND, Ore., May 3.—Sympathizers of striking longshoremen attacked the river steamer Stranger today after she had carried a load of nonunion men to the American-Hawaiian steamship dock where they worked cargo from the steamer Navajo. The attack was made from a bridge.

Rocks and iron bolts were thrown down upon the steamer until Captain Arch Gorger, her master, came on deck armed with a rifle when the crowd on the bridge scattered.

D. Kennedy, agent for the American-Hawaiian line, said tonight that the nonunion men had become intimidated and that it was doubtful if the remainder of the Navajo's cargo would be discharged here.

No effort was made today to discharge the steamer Bear of the San Francisco, Portland and Los Angeles Steamship company.

of District No. 15, United Mine Workers declared in supporting the resolution.

Denounce Rockefeller.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 3.—Resolutions denouncing John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for his refusal to aid in settling the Colorado coal strike, protesting against intervention in Mexico and urging the calling of a general strike in event of hostilities between the United States and Mexico were adopted at a mass meeting held today by the Industrial Workers of the World in city hall park. Several speakers indorsed a statement attributed to William D. Haywood, that he would rather be a traitor to his country than a traitor to his class. Several hundred people attended the meeting, which was orderly.

Will Disarm Guards.

PUEBLO, May 3.—Just as soon as the commander of the federal troops in the strike district is ready to disarm the men and afford protection at the mines the guards in the employ of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company will turn over their arms.

This was the statement of B. J. Matteson, who came to Pueblo from the district. He said that orders have been issued for all the men to turn over their arms as soon as the federal commander asked for them, and that the superintendent at the mines will carry out this order.

Disarmament in Abeyance.

Further negotiations regarding the disarment of the strikers tonight were believed to be in abeyance until the arrival of the Eleventh cavalry, which is expected Monday night or early Tuesday.

Several leaders of the United Mine Workers today had a conference with Major Holbrook. At its conclusion it was stated that the subject of disarmament had not been discussed.

Officials of the United Mine Workers today visited the site of the Ludlow tent colony to make plans for rebuilding the camp. It was explained that the new colony probably would be located just to one side of the ruins of the old one. The strikers have the material and are ready to begin work as soon as formal permission from the army authorities is secured.

John R. Lawson left for Indianapolis tonight to attend a meeting of the international executive board of the United Mine Workers of America.

5,000 ATTEND BAKER FUNERAL

AURORA, Ill., May 3.—More than 5,000 persons attended the funeral today of Henry R. Baker, nephew of the late John W. Gates. Mr. Baker died last Monday in Colorado Springs.

Ill health had prevented Baker, who was 28 years old, from winning the $250,000 promised him in the Gates will upon his graduation from a recognized university.

Baker had picked out his coffin, made all arrangements for his burial and asked that he be given a quiet funeral, it was said.

COLLEGE VESPERS

At the Colorado college vesper service last evening in Perkins hall the Rev. Orrin W. Auman, pastor of the Grant Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Denver, delivered the sermon, using as his text II Cor. 10:5, which contains the command to bring into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ. Only by bringing all one's thoughts into subjection to the will of God can one succeed in the highest sense in the duty in life, was the thought which Mr. Auman emphasized strongly. The speaker said in part:

Attention and concentration are necessary to successful mental effort. Everyone has learned the rules of thinking to the effect that there is no memory, no reason without close attention and concentration of mind. If not learned in psychology it has been learned in experience. All those who do efficient service have learned concentration. Napoleon once said of his mind that it was like a chest of drawers, each drawer had a separate subject; when he wished to consider a particular subject he opened the drawer which contained it and considered the problem in question until he had made his decision, then he closed the drawer and opened another. There was never any confusion of subjects in his mind. He took each subject and thought it through; that is why he became a great executive and administrative leader—he understood the art of concentration.

Must Concentrate Thoughts.

Now the question arises: In what direction should we concentrate our thoughts to have success? The answer to this question is found in the text. We must bring every thought into obedience to Christ to fulfill the nobility of our individual life, to have the career intended for us by God. In every mind there are obscure sensations lurking at the threshold of consciousness that may be localized and made vivid and expressive if we will only pay attention to them. The greatest of these sensations is the consciousness of God. This sensation may be very obscure but it will cross the threshold and become full of life if we will but attend to it. If we but take this thought into captivity until it controls our lives and destiny. To accomplish this we must set aside the things that may inhibit this result. The carnal mind as Paul said shuts out the thought of God and makes of it an obscure reality for it is a reality, though perhaps obscure to us. As one indulges in evil thoughts and acts, as one succumbs to worldly temptations, he will find that they obscure the idea. "The carnal mind is enmity against God."

Sometimes the thought of self may obscure the idea of God. One cannot concentrate his mind on the idea of God if he takes thought of his own will only. The thought of business may obscure the thought of God; many a man is so filled with the thought of worldly success in the business world that he takes no time for thinking of God and his thoughts are not brought into captivity to obedience of Christ. One must choose between the carnal mind, worldly things, the pride of selfishness, ambition, the engrossment of material things and God. If one does choose these worldly things, however, God must be an imperfect ideal for him and his life will remain an imperfect destiny. But it depends on the individual's will alone as to whether he will concentrate on the thought of God. Attention of even a very low form implies a certain amount and a certain kind of willing. It has been said: If you concentrate upon the thought of Christ every moment of the day you have to will to do this thing and every other thought will be subject to this one and God will become a part of your very soul, of your entire career.

New Faculties Developed.

When a man has concentrated on carnal things and has finally found that they do no good he sometimes decides to put his mind upon the things of God that are holy; he then discovers that he has new faculties, all the world takes on a new order. We say that this man has been converted, and we mean by this that he has decided, he has willed to bring every thought into captivity to obedience of Christ rather than to his own mind, his early worldly ambitions. What will be the result of his decision? He will find peace. A man who has willed that his life shall be built on the thought of Christ who lives that life by day and year by year will never know anxiety. Have you ever thought of the infinite mind of God being in a frenzy, being worried? Neither will the man who has brought his thoughts into harmony with the idea of God ever know anxiety.

Sometimes young people come to the conclusion that Christianity is a narrow and restrictive life. Paul has well said that where the spirit of God is there is liberty. The man who has put his thoughts into captivity for Christ finds his talents and his faculties liberated. He has a freedom and a nobility of spirit that he never has had and never could have except through this association with the divine liberty. Once there were men who held others as slaves as they were oppressors and were despised. Today we say a man is an oppressor because many men are slaves; let us despise the slaves. Every man can be free if he so wills through God.

The world needs lives filled with the spirit of God in order that injustice, distress, hatred and all these things that bring the children of man so low shall be destroyed. Christ in those 40 days of temptation refused to gratify the personal ambition to accept the things of the world that tempted him. He said: No, my mind will be concentrated only on the thought of God. I bring this position to you today. Are you willing to make a choice as to where your mind shall be concentrated, on carnal things or on the thought of God? Will you concentrate your mind on the thought of God and will your life henceforth be held seized always by this thought. Only thus can you win true success by putting aside everything worldly and bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ.

CENTRAL CHRISTIAN

The Rev. J. J. Hutchison preached on "Christian Union" at the Central Christian church, Colorado City, yesterday morning, taking his text from Eph. 4:4-6. He said in part:

The greatest issue today is Christian union. National righteousness and conversion of non-Christian world depends upon it. There underlies all discord and conflict an eternal desire for harmony which is unity. By political means the ancient nations of Assyria, Persia, Greece and Rome and the modern nations of Spain, France and Russia tried to obtain union but failed. By commercial means the ancient nations of Phenicia and Carthage and the modern nations of England and United States tried and failed. By ecclesiastical means the hoary oriental religions of superstition and the recent ethical religions have failed. By all these means union was sought through selfishness and such is not union but formalism. Love is the bond of union and it cannot be created by law. The church is an organic body from a life giving source and hence there must be a divine basis for union. The text affords it. It presents four objective sources—body, Christ, holy spirit and God—and three subjective principles for union—faith, baptism and hope.

Paul in 1 Cor. 12:27, speaking of the church, presents it as one body and in Eph. 5:23 as one bride and not 187 bodies or brides as now exist. Again in 1 Cor. 12:25: "That there should be no schism in the body." There is one lord or head of the church who is master teacher and mediator. In this church there is one spirit which gives life and sends its power as a nerve force throughout the entire body. Over this church there is only one father—a father of the only begotten son and his regenerate sons. He is above all as supreme creator, provider and ruler. He works "through all" using them as instruments—2 Tim. 2:21. He is in you all "that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God."—Eph. 3:19.

The human unites with the trinity in that one faith that confides, submits and trusts. He obeys his lord in that one baptism which represents the burial and resurrection of Christ—Rom. 6:26. He passes the one hope of "growing up into him in all things which is the head even Christ."—Eph. 4:15, and of being holy even as the father is holy, so that he can respond to the divine environment of heaven. The same is true of the church which is composed of individuals.

Divided Christianity has not followed fully the basis of union given in the text. They have not heeded the admonition of Paul in 1 Cor. 1:10-13. In the beginning of the Nineteenth century Alexander Campbell sought for union, not through a reformation but a restoration and started the church of Christ organized according to original instruction, as a movement for the union of all Christians. This movement has and is advocating five catholic principles based upon revelation for the bringing of divided Christianity into one body again. These principles are first a catholic name: "Church of Christ"—Rom. 16:16; a catholic creed, the living Christ, Matt. 16:18; a catholic book, the Bible, 2 Tim. 3:16-17; a catholic baptism, immersion which alone the Bible teaches and all religious bodies accept, and a catholic fellowship, John 13:34-35.

If the followers of Christ were united they could soon meet the spiritual needs of 60,000,000 unchurched Americans and cause righteousness and peace to kiss each other in the American home. United we could soon lift the darkness from 150,000,000 of heathens in Africa, break the shackles of 250,000,000 in India and bring spiritual, mental and material prosperity to the 400,000,000 in China.

Shall we endure this [illegible] much longer? No, [illegible] for we know that the master's prayer shall be answered—That they all may be one, as thou father art in me and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. John 17:21.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS IF BACK HURTS OR BLADDER BOTHERS

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

TEMPORARY TRUCE IN EFFECT AT TAMPICO

WASHINGTON, May 3.—News of a temporary truce between the contending Mexican armies at Tampico came to the navy department tonight in a report from Rear Admiral Mayo.

Springs Folk Turn to Back Yard Gardens

Many Find Way to Reduce Cost of Living

To the average workingman with a family, the high cost of living is simply an infinite number of difficult problems which must be solved. Needless to say, the number of struggles with the overgrown interrogation points each day would be hard to estimate.

However, one of the more important questions of the well-known h. c. of l. have been disposed of to the complete satisfaction of many wage earners of Colorado Springs. And here is the answer:

With a home a little way outside of the more congested parts of the city it is easy to raise enough vegetables on an extra vacant lot or two to keep a family well supplied, not only through the summer, but also until late in the spring of the following year

Many are doing it and the practice is becoming more and more popular as the ways of the plant kingdom are coming to be better known. Where the area of ground which can be devoted to gardening is small, intensive gardening is practiced, so that two and even three crops are grown on the same piece of ground in a season.

Early Crop Gives Way to Later One.

An early maturing crop is planted with a later crop, and is got out of the way in time to give the late crop room to grow in, or several varieties of vegetables which grow rapidly occupy the same ground before frost comes and suspends operations for the year

There are more home gardens in the south end than in any other part of the city. This is due to the fact that there are many irrigation ditches in that part of the city and water is easy to obtain Where it is more difficult or impossible to obtain ditch water, the hose is resorted to for irrigation purposes

Fight Them the Hardest.

It is surprising what a large amount of truck can be grown on a small piece of land, particularly when the garden is properly cultivated The first year is sure to be the hardest, because the ground is full of cutworms and the seeds of weeds, both enemies of the garden, causing plenty of trouble. If the garden has been kept free of weeds the first year, the next year there will be less trouble, and if spaded up in the fall the cutworms will be killed by the frost.

The garden, in addition to cutting down the grocer's bill, brings large returns in the way of health and in lessened doctors' bills. A small garden run in connection with a poultry yard brings the best results, in the opinion of those who are gardening on a small scale.

BATTLE WITH DANDELIONS SHOULD BE STARTED NOW

Wet Season Has Encouraged Growth of Weeds and Warm Days Will Start Them Spreading

Bath to Dandelions!

Every dandelion that is pulled up now will mean a big step forward in clearing Colorado Springs of the greatest of all lawn pests.

The war on dandelions has begun in some sections of the city already by those people who realize that if they begin at once they can keep their lawns free from them. But while one man works industriously to preserve his lawn, his adjoining neighbor does not, and therefore the wind carries the seeds of the weed over to the well kept lawn.

There is just one way to end the pest, and that is for every citizen to do his share of the work by weeding out his own yard. The unusually damp season has encouraged the breeding of this troublesome weed. Already thousands of lawns are spattered with the yellow pest, and the first few warm days will start them spreading like a prairie fire

Experts declare that one dandelion breeds hundreds. That is, the seeds from one will cause hundreds to grow. The way, say these experts, to stop the spread of the weed is to kill every one that is seen.

BLUMENBERG LECTURES ON 'REVOLUTION OR REFORM'

Declares That Socialists Understand Reformer Better Than He Understands Himself

Ben Blumenberg, Socialist lecturer of Cincinnati, addressed a crowded meeting of the local organization last night in Carpenters hall and outlined the recent developments in industrial and social conditions as they relate to the platform of his party. His subject was "Revolution or Reform."

"We Socialists understand the reformer far better than he understands us and better than he understands himself," said Blumenberg. "The reformer deals with any one of the effects incident to the capitalist or the wage system. He deals with the effects and not the causes."

The speaker reviewed the attempts made in recent years in the field of political reform, child labor, woman factory labor and white slavery, calling particular attention that prostitution has become commercialized vice.

"The reformer holds to the antiquated view that changes in human society are brought about by great men," he said. "The Socialists point out that the great man, so-called, is a product of a certain historical epoch."

The speaker pointed out by illustrations that the institutions, religious, political, educational or judicial, are determined by the mode of wealth production and exchange plus the traditions and customs that are handed down from previous eras. "So history, instead of being a record of sayings of great men, is a history between great social classes, between exploited and exploiter, between master and slave.

"Those in the struggle be they rulers or ruled, are not always conscious of the motives underlying their actions. However, we find that when the interest of the ruling class as a whole is threatened, a united front is presented. The stand taken by the capitalists in the present Colorado labor war is an instance to the point We find that none of the political parties, financed and controlled by the capitalist class or any faction of it have thrown their lot with the workers in this struggle. The formation of reform parties is a reflex of the changing mode of production The revolution takes place in industry first Its reflex is seen in the changing institutions, political and otherwise. Reforms usually spring from the interests and desires of the smaller capitalist or middle class The dominant capitalist is content to leave things as they are

"The Socialist party disdains to conceal its attitude namely that it is the party of the social revolution and to the extent that it is able to solidify the ranks of labor, both on the industrial and political fields to that extent will the rising tide of social revolt result in reform after reform being granted to the working class

While in Canon City the visitors will be shown the Dall DeWeese hunting trophies.

Eggs Worth Dollar a Piece at Tampico; Conditions Serious

VERA CRUZ, May 3.—Conditions in Tampico are daily growing more serious, according to Captain Blackadder of the Ward liner Camaguay, which arrived here today flying the Cuban flag. He said the water supply had been cut off and that conditions were filthy. The inhabitants were bordering on famine and prices were continually increasing, eggs selling for $1 apiece, potatoes and tomatoes 50 cents a pound and other foods in proportion.

With the exception of Consul Clarence A Miller and his assistant, there are probably not more than half a dozen Americans in Tampico, according to the captain. He said the captain of the British cruiser Hermione had chartered the British steamer Antillian to take off refugees, and among those on board were a few Americans

If the statement made at a New York Assembly of women, that healthy American women are so rare that they are almost extinct, is true it is time for the women of America to take warning and look to their health It may be headaches, backaches, dragging down pains nervousness mental depression that are tell-tale symptoms of some organic derangement for which Lydia E. LOCAL ARCHAEOLOGISTS INTERESTED IN NEW BOOK

Journal on Egy.-Var. Archaeology Tells of Finding Papyrus That Reads Like Emerson Essay

Interest of the members of the Colorado Springs Archaeological society has been aroused by a new journal on Egyptian archaeology, published by the committee of the Egypt exploration fund.

The first number of the journal, which will be issued quarterly giving all information obtainable regarding excavations that are being conducted in Egypt, contains some articles which are specialized and technical, intended mainly for experts and others which are of interest to all people who are interested in the history, language and antiquities of the civilization of this remarkable country

One of the most interesting of the articles deals with a new addition in Egyptian literature which has been made by the discovery of a papyrus in which an ancient king has written instruction for his son, King Mery-ke-re. The name of the writer of the "instructions" has been lost by a gap in the manuscript, but his words are like those of an Emerson essay

"The turbulent man is confusion to a city," he says. "He creates two factions among the young generation. A man who talks too much is a mischief maker for a city.

Speech More Clever Than Fighting.

"Speech is more clever than any fighting.

"Good it is to work for the future Respect a man of character, for self-content will make a wretched man Life upon earth passes; it is not long The good man shall be living forever.

"Speak thou truth in thy house, that the nobles who are upon earth may fear thee. Uprightness to hear becomes the sovereign. The inside of a house inspires the outside with fear

"Advance boldly in difficult places The soul comes to the place, that it knoweth; it mistaketh not its paths of yesterday. No magic can restrain it, but it hastens towards them who give it water.

"Distinguish not between the son of a noble and him of lowly birth Take to thyself a man because of his capacity

"Make firm thy monuments according as thou art rich, For a single day giveth eternity, an hour makes beautiful for futurity."

Excavations Being Made.

Other articles deal with the present excavations, all of which are being conducted in order to solve important questions in history, art or religion

While no nation ever has surpassed the civilization of Egypt, the people of the country were exclusive and home-keeping. At all periods, Egyptian culture remained without influence on the general life of the world, unless agents from without visited the country and later returned to their home, in this way disseminating that knowledge of that civilization. Students, therefore, have had to go directly to the country and learn at first hand from excavations, etc., of the life of the people.

In addition to the articles, the journal contains many interesting pictures and reviews of all recent books which deal with Egypt

FEDERALS MINE ENTRANCE TO THE TAMPICO HARBOR

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Reports to the navy department from Rear Admiral Mayo indicate that the Mexican federal forces have mined the Panuco river, the inlet to the city of Tampico from the Gulf of Mexico

The river is navigable to Tampico for only comparatively light draught vessels Two weeks ago the scout cruiser Chester, the gunboat Dolphin and one or two other American vessels were lying in front of Tampico in the river

It was deemed advisable however, to order the ships from the harbor to the gulf This scarcely had been accomplished, it is said, before the Mexicans placed mines in the river to prevent the ships from entering again.

NATIONAL HIGHWAYS

The people of this country are building a National Highway as a lasting monument to a great man.

Through fertile fields, thriving cities, across rivers and over mountains, the Lincoln Highway will extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

San Francisco will be joined with New York, and the thousand cities and towns along the way will be benefited.

Another National Highway—The Telephone Way—will be opened to the Public before the Lincoln Way is ready for travel.

From New York to San Francisco the big copper wires of the Bell System extend in an unbroken line the broadway highway of Universal service.

This Highway, too, is a lasting monument — to the energy of private enterprise.

MEXICAN DICTATOR TO RESIGN, REPORT

Senor Portillo Mentioned as Possible Successor in Presidency

VERA CRUZ, May 3.—Persistent reports continue to circulate that General Huerta intends to retire from the provisional presidency of Mexico on condition that he be assured a safe conduct to a port and placed on board a foreign warship

It is declared in some Mexican circles here that General Huerta was ready to resign a week ago but was prevented from doing so by internal dissensions in his cabinet

The disappearance from the Mexican cabinet of Jose Lopez Portillo y Rojas, the foreign minister, coupled with reports that there is a growing undercurrent of feeling in Mexico City against the Huerta government, is interpreted here as foreshadowing a change in the situation in the federal capital

Portillo Might Succeed Huerta.

Some of the closest observers of the government's situation assert that Senor Portillo's resignation may clear the way for the appointment of a foreign minister, who, under the Mexican constitution could succeed General Huerta as president In these circles it is pointed out that while Venustiano Carranza declined to treat with General Huerta he might consent to enter into negotiations with his successor and thus facilitate mediation

The effect of the continued rebel successes in the north and the outcome of the pending attack on Tampico may according to well-informed opinion bring about a rapid change in Mexico City

Populace Learn Facts.

While the federal capital was reported quiet today people who arrived here said that the populace there was beginning to learn that General Huerta had been deceiving the people by issuing false reports of federal successes over the constitutionalists

The news of the peaceful way in which the Americans are occupying Vera Cruz it is said has spread to the capital and has convinced Mexicans there that the American invasion of the port is not a conquest of aggression Refugees assert the inhabitants of the capital fear the coming there of Francisco Villa more than they fear that of the Americans

THE SUN STILL SHINES

LIVING in an atmosphere of perpetual sunshine is conducive to optimism which accounts in part for the boosting spirit of the Pikes Peak Region. But there is such a thing as getting so used to sunshine that even a small cloud produces a scare. The people of the Pacific northwest and the Mississippi valley states think nothing of two weeks of almost uninterrupted rain and cloudy weather. But last week when we had three days of rain, most of us thought the sun had been permanently eclipsed. The thing was unprecedented.

There is an analogy to this condition in the present business outlook, both locally and throughout the nation. Beginning with the election in November, 1912, a feeling of uncertainty spread through the nation. The change of administration meant revision of the tariff and currency systems; and in times past the country has associated such legislation with business depression. Both the new measures are now in effect, and nobody can say definitely that either of them has injuriously affected business. On the contrary, there is plain evidence that both have been in some degree beneficial.

Nevertheless, something is unmistakably wrong. Idleness is more prevalent than at any time in twenty years, and armies of the unemployed are marching, demonstrating, threatening. The [illegible] less in what they have done or are really liable to do than in the fear which they inspire. The most serious trouble has occurred here in Colorado, but it is in no sense the product of hard times, it is simply the logical result of an ill-managed quarrel between employer and employe, complicated by the inefficiency of the state administration.

Locally the worst thing to be said of conditions is that everybody shares the feeling of uncertainty which prevails throughout the state and nation.

* * * * *

But let us look at the other side of the picture. There is nothing radically wrong with Colorado Springs absolutely nothing. Bank deposits are as big as ever somewhere around eleven million dollars. The volume of retail business in all lines during the last twelve months has been fully up to the average. Since the beginning of last summer the amount spent for building has been probably three times as great as in any similar period with the last decade. And this building activity is continuous it shows no sign whatever of diminution. On Tejon street two business blocks are under construction which will cost nearly $200,000. The contract has been let for the second unit of the Stratton Home at a cost of $88,000. And all this money, or nearly all of it, will go to Colorado Springs dealers for materials and Colorado Springs workingmen for labor.

We had a fairly good tourist season last year at least as good as the average. There are pessimists who say that the coming season will be a bad one, but experience shows they are merely guessing. Railway officials and others who know most about travel will tell you that there is no way of accurately predicting the season's business. To assume that we will have a bad season this year is merely borrowing trouble.

* * * * *

A few days ago a former resident of Colorado Springs returned for a visit after an absence of more than four years. He retains large property holdings here, and with them an active interest in the welfare of the city. After looking the town over for two or three days he said "I had heard that Colorado Springs was in the dumps, but it actually looks better than any other place I have seen between the Mississippi river and the Pacific coast. The improvements made since I left here are amazing paving, iron lamp posts and new sidewalks in the business district, a new High school, Y. W. C. A. building, new College building, several fine business block built and building, many new residences both in town and in Broadmoor, the Stratton Home why, you people who live here don't realize how the town has gone forward. The stores have more up-to-date appearance than in other towns the size of Colorado Springs; you have better hotels, and of course the climate [illegible] eral depression is being fall[illegible] to some extent, but just the same, Colorado Springs is the best town in the West today."

The fact is, that most of our troubles never happen — we merely think they are going to happen. A year from now we will look back upon the fears of today with amusement. The coal strike will have passed into history and normal conditions will have been restored. The tourist season will have come and gone, and it is just as likely to be a big one as it is to be a little one.

The most important business for everybody now is to smile and push. Concerted effort will do much to make 1914 a busy and prosperous year; gloomy forebodings can only have the reverse effect.

THE AEROPLANE IN WAR

SINCE the invention of the aeroplane European armies have devoted a great deal of money and effort to experiments designed to perfect it for use in war. For scouting the aeroplane is obviously better than anything else that could be devised. It has been said that if the Russians, for instance, had possessed an aeroplane just before the battle of Laio-yang they would have won instead of lost that decisive struggle, for the victory of the Japanese depended upon a massed artillery movement which could have been easily seen by an aerial scout.

In the recent Balkan wars the allies used aeroplanes with good effect. The United States Army has devoted much less attention to the development of the aeroplane than other military powers. But the work already done in Mexico shows that it is prepared for whatever necessity may arise. A few days ago two lieutenants made a scout flight of an hour and forty minutes around Vera Cruz, rising to a height of 3,000 feet and covering the territory within fifteen miles of the city.

The information obtained will be of great value if the American Army makes a forward movement. They found one burned bridge on the railway and several breaks. The San Francisco bridge, a high trestle twenty miles from Vera Cruz, which is considered the strategic point on the line, was found still standing, but the rails had been removed. Army and Navy officers say that it would have required several hundred mounted scouts, proceeding with the utmost deliberation and caution and taking probably as many days as in the present instance it took hours, to obtain the same information.

The aeroplane, in its present stage of development, has not proved to be particularly useful in peaceful pursuits. But in war it promises to be one of the most useful of modern inventions.

THE HOUSTON PLAN.

To the Editor of The Gazette

Someone has sent me a copy of your paper of April 18 containing an article about the Houston plan of taxation which article refers to an organization of taxpayers in Houston who are protesting against the Houston plan of taxation.

Will you kindly give me space to state that after scouring the woods for two weeks the handful of men who organized this taxpayers association succeeded in getting about 80 men to join many of them joining not knowing that they were organizing in opposition to the Houston plan of taxation.

When the first meeting was held and it became known what the real object of the taxpayers association was a large number who had joined requested that their names be stricken from the list and the next day the mayor and myself received many telephone messages from people who had joined stating that they had been misinformed as to the purpose of the association and that they wanted to assure us that they were in accord with the administration and believed in the Houston plan of taxation.

The men who are opposing the plan have now dwindled down to less than 50. More than 10,000 taxpayers have signed their assessments at the city's valuations for 1914. It is the largest rendered roll that the city of Houston has ever had which goes to show that a great majority of the people approve of the plan.

BIBLICAL AUTHORITY

To the Editor of The Gazette

I wish to continue the thought under the heading of Biblical authority in The Gazette under the heading of "The Two Kingdoms, the Kingdom of God and the Kingdom of the World."

The great central and ruling principle of the kingdom of heaven is love. The great central and ruling principle of the kingdom of the world is selfishness. Please get that thoroughly fixed in your mind. Therefore you can see why in Luke chapter 14, verse 33 Christ says "So therefore whosoever he be of you that renounceth not all that he hath he cannot be my disciple."

Then after speaking to the multitudes and especially to the Pharisees and Scribes in parables illustrating the zeal and joy displayed in selfish pursuits that were successful and then assuring the hearers that there was as great joy in heaven over zeal rightly directed in the work of the kingdom of God he says in Luke 16:9 "And I say unto you make to yourselves friends by means of the mammon of unrighteousness (riches) that when it shall fail, they may receive you into the eternal tabernacles." Please notice "when it shall fail" as plainly indicating that the time is coming when riches will fail, and the kingdom of heaven will be fully set up on the earth, and then we will be in need of friends and will want a place in the "everlasting tabernacle," or dwelling place of God. See Revelations 21:3.

Please read carefully from the tenth to the fifteenth verse of Luke 16, and carefully note the

GOLF BALLS

BY GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Siwash"

A golf ball is a piece of currency which varies in value from 50 cents to 75 cents. It is legal tender on all golf courses.

Golf balls are made of fine rubber by an expensive and secret process which causes them to cost more than watermelons or nail kegs. A golf ball is about 1¾ inches in diameter when it is bought, but after it has been driven into the long grass it shrinks to the size of a nickel's worth of radium and is extremely difficult to find.

Golf balls are very elastic and when hit brutally with a long, long-headed club they sometimes fly almost 1,320 feet. In these days of persistent and almost paralytic [illegible], about the only danger the average business man faces is that of being shot with a golf ball. [illegible] such a ball is traveling at its best speed it is almost as dangerous as a charge from an old-fashioned blunderbuss.

"After It Has Been Driven Into the Long Grass It Shrinks to the Size of a Nickel's Worth of Radium."

Millions of golf balls are made each year in this country, but the visible supply does not increase. In fact, there is no visible supply of golf balls. After a ball has gone into use it is invisible most of the time. In the act of crawling under a leaf or down a worm hole, no insect, however well equipped with legs, can excel a golf ball. Each year carloads of bright, new white balls are manufactured, and by winter each one of these balls has retired to some quiet spot on a golf course, where it will not be interfered with by man. Some day, thousands of years hence, archaeologists, digging around the United States, will find vast deposits of golf balls in various spots. These spots will represent the golf courses of today.

The golf ball is an education in cleverness and also in the art of holding one's temper. If a man can drive two or three nice new golf balls into the mysterious unknown without getting mad and biting his club in two he is scandalously extravagant. And if he isn't extravagant he mislays his temper even more thoroughly than he has mislaid the balls.

Taking Too Much Responsibility

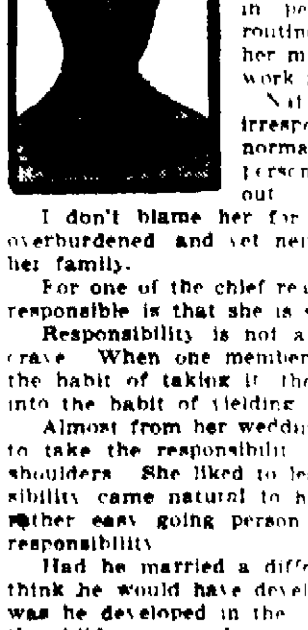

BY RUTH CAMERON

"Nobody in this house will take any responsibility except me." I heard a tired mother say the other day.

What she said was true. At least, to a large extent.

Her husband is an irresponsible, happy-go-lucky person, who looks five years younger than his wife although he is actually a year or two older.

Her children are extravagant about money matters, disorderly about the house and careless in regard to their clothes. Their mother has to "keep after them all the time," as she puts it. The oldest daughter is amply old enough to take some of the care from her mother's shoulders but she never does. Her share of managing the house consists in performing certain small, routine tasks and even here her mother has to see that the work is done and done right.

Naturally the mother of this irresponsible family although normally a robust and energetic personality is becoming worn out.

I don't blame her for feeling discouraged and overburdened and yet neither do I entirely blame her family.

For one of the chief reasons why they are so irresponsible is that she is so responsible.

Responsibility is not a thing that most people crave. When one member of the family gets into the habit of taking it the rest of the family slip into the habit of yielding.

Almost from her wedding day this woman began to take the responsibility of the family upon her shoulders. She liked to lead and rule, and responsibility came natural to her. Her husband was a rather easy going person with no great sense of responsibility.

Had he married a different sort of a woman I think he would have developed that quality. As it was he developed in the opposite direction. When the children came the same thing happened to them.

And now the mother is growing older and she begins to find all this responsibility which she has arrogated to herself a burden too heavy to bear.

Poor unhappy creature. I can't say I'm not sorry for her because I'm always sorry for people who make mistakes. I've no patience with the sentiment "she's made her bed and now she can lie in it." But I do think she has no right to put all the blame on her family. One of the best stories I ever read told of a woman who had more business ability than her husband and who when he lost his position went out into the business world and made good. Then instead of sharing the responsibility for supporting the family with her husband she began to take it all. Her husband gradually came to depend on her even for his own clothes and spending money. Ultimately she divorced him and thereupon he married a woman of the other type, went back into the business world and, pushed forward by his new sense of responsibility, made good.

Every human being ought to beware how he takes more than his fair share of responsibility. Whoever takes too large a share is laying up a burden for himself and robbing his fellow creature of their birthright. They may be willing, just as Esau was willing, but he has no right to do it, and sooner or later everyone concerned will suffer.

[illegible] that will [illegible] the good name of the state?

Or shall we have to call upon the federal government for the settlement of the question involved in the coal strike, as we have already called upon it for troops to preserve order?

In other words, is Colorado able to govern itself, or must we abdicate our sovereignty to the national government?

The constituents of every member should keep the closest track of his every speech and vote. And the man who speaks or votes from any other motive than that of a sincere desire to bring about lasting peace and real prosperity should be forever relegated to private life.

Some Democrats are said to have [illegible] the impeachment of Ammons can the Democratic party be saved. That way, on the contrary, lies ruin. What the Democratic party must do is to enact [illegible].

We've had far too much quarreling. Let's forget it and do something.

IN THE EARLY DAYS

THIRTY YEARS AGO TODAY

May 4, 1884.

Charles Brower, who had managed the affairs of the telephone company in this city for a number of years, had resigned and intended to go east as soon as he was relieved.

Rev. D. W. Moore, pastor of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, had been called east by the illness of his wife and his pulpit was being filled by Rev. T. A. McDill of Philadelphia.

Several Colorado Springs men went to Denver to witness the foot race between Skinner and Stine. It resulted in a victory for the latter. The local men regarded it as put up job.

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

May 4, 1894.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Keeley league gave an entertainment at the High school auditorium which was a huge success.

The Athletics won a baseball game from the High school nine by a score of 9 to 3.

Manager and Mrs. Barnett gave a most enjoyable dancing party at the Antlers.

The El Paso bank had received 50 additional safety deposit boxes which were being placed in position in the vault.

SUMMER COMPLAINT

Summer complaint in babies has some resemblance to contagious disease. Many hold that it is caused by a germ. Where babies are crowded together, as in a baby hospital, the sickness rate from summer complaint is fearfully high.

There was some reason for holding that summer complaint, like some other forms of contagion, is spread by flies. The New York Merchants association had proved summer complaint was at its worst near the wharves, where badly infected flies abounded. Levy had shown that in Richmond a fly campaign lessened the baby sickness rate. Nevertheless, exact evidence was lacking.

Last summer the bureau of public health of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor decided that it would try to get exact evidence. Dr Armstrong picked out two neighborhoods in the Bronx where conditions were as nearly the same as it was possible to find. In each area were 311 families. In the protected area there were 1,725 individuals, in the other, 1,744. The numbers of babies under 1 year were 100 and 98; under two years 175 and 160, 1 to 5 years, 282 and 298.

The sickness in the two neighborhoods was closely watched. In the protected neighborhood Dr Armstrong's forces screened the houses and provided fly swatters fly paper and fly traps. They furnished covered garbage pails. They kept the premises clean and saw to it that stable manure did not serve as a breeding place. In the other area they did nothing except register all illness.

They were able to greatly reduce the number of flies. They found that the flies caught in the cleaned houses average 14,000 bacteria, those from the dirty houses 1,100,000.

Two babies died in the protected area six outside of it. The possible fly-borne illness of the protected area amounted to 22 cases, of the unprotected area 65. The total days of baby sickness in the flyless area was 273, in the fly area, 984. The cases of summer complaint in the flyless area were 20, in the fly area 57.

This experiment proves that flies are one of the factors in summer complaint. There are others. But by attending to this one we can reduce the amount of baby sickness materially.

Incidentally, the following facts were found. It costs nine-tenths of a cent per day per horse to treat stable manure with iron sulphate so as to make it flyproof. The stableman would not do the work even when the iron sulphate was furnished him. One per cent of the flies captured in this city area were biting stable flies.

Screens did little good. When the weather was hot the people took them out. Cleaning was more effective than screening. Efforts against breeding places were most effective.

The house-to-house daily visits extended from July 21 to September 15. When visiting was resumed on November 1 it was found that the customs and habits of the people had gone back to the old basis.

REGULAR FEEDING IMPORTANT

Mrs H. L. T. writes: "I have a baby 18 months old. I gave her a modified milk and she thrived on it up until the fourteenth month. Then I gave her oatmeal 1½ table spoonfuls that had steamed for hours, one teaspoonful of pulverized brain, and two teaspoonfuls of prune jelly. I gave this oatmeal mixture at 7 a. m., plain cow's milk at noon, and at night oatmeal mixture. I put the baby to bed at 6 p. m. and she never awakens until 7 a. m. I give the prune jelly and bran for the constipated bowels. The gains in weight and feels well. Do you think it advisable for grandparents to criticise and laugh at this diet and insist on feeding the baby whenever she cries? I also put her out in the fresh air to sleep. Is this also a failure? Does fresh air give colds if the clothing is sufficient?"

REPLY

Regular feeding is of great importance. Your manner of feeding your baby seems good.

No child can get too much fresh air if properly clothed and sheltered from raw, damp winds. Colds come from impure air, not from outdoor air. The body temperature should be sustained by proper means in cold weather, but cold air contains more oxygen than warm air and acts as a tonic to the lungs and entire system. Put the baby out of doors for her daily naps.

FOOD FOR BABY

E. A. C. writes: "Just what is your opinion about beef juice for a 6-months-old baby (the fourth child) that I am weaning, and who is strong and well, but rather pale? What quantity can be given in a day? Are formulae from barley and milk as nourishing as those from top milk?"

REPLY

Beef juice, if not carefully prepared from good beef, may do harm. If well prepared, in many cases, it seems to be useful. One to two ounces daily should be the proper amount. Try plenty of fresh air for the pallor.

Use oatmeal gruel to dilute the cow's milk. Top milk is not so easily digested or so satisfactory as whole milk in formulae. Get the child gradually on undiluted milk and start to feed well-prepared bread and milk (bread scalded in hot water and cooked in whole milk for five minutes) and farina may be given in the seventh or eighth month. Use orange and other fruit juices as they come in season.

NO "WEED;" NO TEA; NO COFFEE

A. B. C. writes: "Do you think a person of nervous temperament who is making an effort to overcome nervousness by exercise of the will should smoke cigars, cigarets or a pipe, and drink tea and coffee?"

REPLY.

No.

SEE EAR SPECIALIST

R. V. writes: "What is the cause of a constant ringing like a teakettle boiling in an ear? Could it be a nerve affected? What can be done?"

REPLY

It may be due to hardened wax or it may be due to an affection of the middle ear.

See an ear specialist.

BREAD KEEPS FRESH IN COLD STORAGE

From the Boston Transcript

Cold storage is good for bread according to the report of Prof. J. R. Katz of the physico chemical laboratory of Amsterdam. Under ordinary conditions of temperature bread begins at once to lose its freshness and in consequence is not so palatable to the consumer. For this reason for ages the bakers have worked at night in order that the customers may have fresh bread in the morning. Mr Katz demonstrates the possibility of keeping the bread absolutely fresh for several days. Curiously enough it is at the ordinary temperatures that bread grows stale, and at both high and low temperatures it can be preserved. At 140 degrees Fahrenheit bread has been kept for 40 hours unchanged while stale bread exposed to degrees below freezing becomes fresh once more. Cold storage rooms for bread are suggested by this investigator. A proper degree of humidity in the rooms will insure the crispy crust which everyone relishes.
